Blackmail Plot Guilt Confessed by John A. Ryan

John A. Ryan of Los Angeles, under indictment in Cincinnati on two counts charging participation in the attempted blackmail of John L. Bushnell, son of former Gov. Bushnell of that State, yesterday pleaded guilty in United States District Court immediately after having been returned to Cincinnati from Chicago, dispatches last night stated. His plea covered both counts of the indictment. Sentence was deferred.

Following the arraignment of Ryan, U. S. Dist.-Atty. Man [illegible] advised the court at Cincinnati that Lawrence MacLean, also of Los Angeles and now in jail in Cincinnati, will plead guilty today. It also is expected that John Sheridan, a third member of the ring, in jail in Cincinnati, will enter a plea of guilty. Sheridan was arrested here.

Two others of the reputed ring, Rose Cooley, alias Rose Putman, who formerly resided with an uncle, Dan Osborne, alias H. Putman, at 2575 Beechwood avenue, and Herbert I. Ross already have been convicted and are serving sentences at the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga.

Lawrence MacLean was the other member of the ring to be apprehended in Los Angeles. MacLean, arrested as a burglar suspect, surprised police and Federal operatives here by announcing himself as a member of the ring and divulging information which led to the recovery of twelve letters said to have been written by Bushnell to the Cooley woman, on which the blackmail activities were based. The letters were found at 744 South Bonnie Brae, March 7, last.

Signal Hill Oil Area Imperiled by Well Blaze

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, April 4.—Property worth more than $1,000,00 was threatened for a while tonight by a fire that destroyed the engine-house of the W. L. Fisher oil well in the heart of the Signal Hill field. A squad of workers and Shell Oil Company's foamite crew by heroic work, prevented the blaze from spreading and confined the blaze to the engine-house. The derrick of the well escaped damage. The loss is estimated at $5000.

The damaged property is on Lovelady avenue and Burnett, in the midst of the Lovelady lease which includes some of the biggest producers in the field. Thousands of barrels of oil are stored in the vicinity.

Engine Company No. 7 of the local fire department responded to the call, but was unable to aid in the fight on account of low water pressure, it was stated.

Funds Assured in Epidemic

Local Congressmen Receive Pledge of Help from Chairman Madden

City Parks Are Closed as Move to Halt Spread of Stock Disease

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Armed with a telegram from William [illegible], president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Lineberger and Congressman Swing and other members of the California delegation obtained the promise from Chairman Madden of the appropriation of all necessary Federal funds for the extermination of the foot-and-mouth disease in California.

In the presence of the California Congressmen, Chairman Madden called the Secretary of Agriculture on the telephone and said that there should be no delay or lagging in concentrating every resource on the control of this epidemic. He asked that supplemental estimates of the cost of this campaign be submitted at once, and promised that Congress would make the appropriation big enough to accomplish the task.

Senator Shortridge also took up the matter of the additional appropriation with the Secretary of Agriculture, and will do everything possible to give the Federal [illegible] every dollar necessary to clean up the scourge.

Telegrams were sent by the Los Angeles Clearinghouse Association, as well as the Chamber of Commerce, to Senator Shortridge and Congressmen Fredericks, Lineberger and Swing, urging immediate financial aid on the part of the Federal government in the foot-and-mouth disease emergency here. A Congressional appropriation would be in the nature of a loan [illegible] the next session of the Legislature, when money can be appropriated by the State. There is actually no way by which California can now appropriate money, even by a special legislative session. In view of this [illegible] the banks have advanced [illegible] for which the Legislature will order them reimbursed.

COOLIDGE PICKED AS EASY WINNER IN ILLINOIS VOTE

Johnson Forces Practically Admit Defeat; President Indorsed by Washington Convention

BY G. P. GALLAGHER
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, April 5.—On the eve of the opening Presidential primaries in three of the largest States in the Middle West—Illinois, Michigan and Nebraska—Senator Hiram Johnson's camp here is dark and gloomy. The leaders of the Californian's campaign met at the Auditorium Hotel quarters late this afternoon in rooms that have been practically vacant since their opening two months ago, discussed the prospects with a few hangers-on, issued a typical Johnson statement and fled. One could not help sensing the fact that the battle had been fought and—lost.

Combined, these three States which will register their preference within the next two days, have 113 delegates to the National Convention at Cleveland, representing one-fifth of the necessary majority to nominate. Michigan, with thirty-three delegates, starts the ball rolling tomorrow; Illinois, with sixty-one, and Nebraska, with nineteen, swing into the fray Tuesday. All three are States on which Johnson banked strongly in entering the contest.

Johnson has made an intensive campaign throughout the whole territory. But in spite of the fact that his leaders and publicity men tried in every possible way to "make things hum to catch the crowds," they realized tonight that the quiet man from Vermont has a distinct edge, one that will carry him over with plenty of votes to spare.

COOLIDGE STRONG

The Republican leaders in Illinois, Michigan and Nebraska are almost a unit in saying that President Coolidge will carry all three States and that the California Senator will be as decisively beaten as in North Dakota three weeks ago. For this reason little campaigning has been done in the three States by the Coolidge camp, the State advisers deeming that the swing toward the President is so strong that it will roll him up a huge preferential plurality by its own momentum.

The next ten days, they declare, will see votes enough nailed down to give Mr. Coolidge the nomination on the first ballot.

Illinois, next to California, has been the chief State where Senator Johnson at the outset counted on carrying both the popular vote and a majority of the delegates. It was to be the centerpiece of the Johnson movement and the Senator's friends early in the winter had it all figured out that to administer a defeat to the President in Illinois would mean enough to WASHINGTON, April 5.—The man who said, "I will find a way or make one," was commemorated with military pomp today while his daughter, "The Snow Baby," born within the Arctic Circle stood at his graveside.

The ceremonies marked the fifteenth anniversary of the discovery of the North Pole by Robert Edwin Peary on April 6, 1909.

As wreath after wreath of palms and flowers was laid at the base of the granite spheroid which marks his grave in Arlington Cemetery, troops presented arms and flags were dipped.

SEAGOING TALK AGAIN IS HEARD IN NAVY OFFICES

Secretary Wilbur's Knowledge and Love of Sailor's Life Revives Morale of Department

PITHY SAYINGS BY SECRETARY WILBUR

In future warfare the first big naval fight will settle the war.

Hence in peace you've got to train men so that in their first battle they'll be veterans.

Simple justice to our men requires providing them with ships and guns at least equal to any other nation's.

Less than that is to send them to execution—to say nothing of the safety of the nation.

The days when men could win battles in a blind, drunken fury have long since passed.

We must recognize that even if every nation in the world subscribes to the principle that there never shall be war any more, it still will be necessary to buttress that resolution by adequate armies and navies, and by continued and daily effort to keep the peace among nations.

Hitting a target shows how the moral life of a nation enters into the good shot. For in the matter of the training and the equipment and the supplies the whole nation has been making ready for that shot.

It's really the nation that hitting.

CURTIS DWIGHT WILBUR.

By James O'Donnell Bennett
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The new Secretary of the United States Navy wonders that he is alive to be Secretary of the Navy. Steering his memory back through thirty-nine years to the days when he was a cadet at Annapolis, the big slow-speaking, deep-toned, spectacled man who has stepped out of the Chief Justiceship of the California Supreme Court to succeed Edwin Denby told it thus:

"On the summer cruise of 1885 on board the U.S.S. Constellation, I was sent aloft one day to take the rope yarn on the port lift of the main royal yard and I laid out on the foot rope and to the extreme end of the yard on what I first thought was a Flemish horse. I laid out to the extreme end of the yard, removed the rope yarn and returned to the deck when I realized for the first time that the rope I had been standing on was a snorter, the other end of which was usually held in place by the friction between two pieces of canvas, the sail and the bunt gasket, or was made fast to a toggle. I do not know what in the world saved me from a fall which meant death as the yard was about 100 feet above the deck, but the toggle held."

The new Secretary of the United States Navy had proceeded about as far as the twenty-eighth word in the foregoing thriller when he looked up with a smile that some would have described as mischievous and said—

"You follow me?"

"Mr. Secretary," said I, "I do not."

"I wondered," said he.

He then pressed a button and there came into the long room where Curtis Dwight Wilbur sits among portraits of long-gone Secretaries of the Navy, some of whom I'll swear never knew a "bunt gasket" from a "toggle"—there came into this room of state,

Ambassador to Mexico Drops Hints That State Department is Not Opposing Project

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, April 5.—That Mexico is seeking a loan from bankers of the United States and that the authorities at Washington are not opposing the negotiations, is the deduction made following an interview with Ambassador Warren.

Ambassador Warren would not commit himself on the loan question, but replied in answer to questions that he has talked with Minister of Finance Alberto J. Pani, a personal friend as a result of their association during the recognition conferences when Pani was Foreign Minister.

Remarks made by the Ambassador during the interview indicated that the loan was the subject under discussion at the meeting with the Finance Minister. Ambassador Warren answered that the "United States was not in the lending business," when he was asked if the loan might be obtained direct from the United States government. It is pointed out, however, that the State Department usually grants virtual approval when loans are negotiated with foreign governments.

NO MOVES MADE

Discussing the much-debated loan of the British-American tobacco interests and the Wolvin line, whose representatives are still here negotiating with the government, Ambassador Warren stated that their proposal had not been Cafe revelers were thrown into consternation early this morning when police reserves staged a series of raids, visiting eight well-known night-life resorts in quick succession. Forty patrons, caught in the police dragnet, were booked at Central Station of suspicion of violation of the Wright Act.

The first of the raids was made shortly before midnight when thirty plain clothesmen, headed by Lieut. J. P. Lyons, put in a sudden appearance at Madame Zucca's Cafe at 610 North Spring street. The officers' arrival was the signal for a wild scramble. Bottles were thrown to the floor and tables overturned. The doors of the establishment were closed and guarded while the raiders milled among the excited crowd.

Places visited in quick succession were the Paris Inn, 110 East Market street; the New Paris Cafe, 401 North Los Angeles street; the Winter Garen, 518 South Spring street; the King Tut Cafe, 606 West Sixth street; Red Lantern Cafe, 965 West Seventh street; the Four Hundred Cafe at 400 East Twelfth street, and the Il Trovatore Cafe at 301 North Los Angeles street.

CHANGES IN TAX BILL

Belated Fight to Delay Report

Ten Per Cent Radio Levy is Made Applicable to All Sets and Parts

Revenue Measure May be Sent to Senate Floor on Wednesday

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—A last minute attack on the revenue bill in an all-day session of the Senate Finance Committee today brought changes in the taxes on radio sets, jewelry and estates and postponed a report of the measure to the Senate until next week.

The 10 per cent radio tax was made applicable to all sets and parts without exemption after the committee earlier in the day had voted to increase from $15 to $50 the minimum price of a set on which the tax would be levied.

This and the 10 per cent tax on mah jongg sets costing more than $5 are the only new taxes carried by the bill. The taxes are levied on the manufacturer. The radio tax, Chairman Smoot declared, would not result in an increase in the price of the sets and parts to consumers.

Just how the tax will be applied to the parts of sets, however, will be left to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Bureau as in the case of the tax on automobile parts, Mr. Smoot said. He figured the tax would net about $10,000,000, pointing out, however, that no accurate estimates were available.

EXPECTS REPORT SOON

Practically all of the rate schedules now have been agreed upon, Mr. Smoot said, and he predicted that the few odds and ends of the bill yet to be taken up would be agreed upon Monday so that the bill may be reported to the Senate by Wednesday. This, however, will necessarily delay actual consideration of it by the Senate until the following week.

Meanwhile, Chairman Smoot said the soldier bonus bill passed by the House would be taken up by the committee. Little time would be necessary for disposition of this measure, he added, and several Republican members predicted the bonus bill would be given precedence over the tax bill on the floor of the Senate.

INSPECTION OF RETURNS

The House provision opening tax returns to inspection by Congressional committees was broadened today by elimination of a previous restriction voted by the Finance Committee, making it possible for the committees to make public "any relevant or useful information" obtained in inspection of the tax returns. The committee had previously voted to allow Congressional committees to make public only the names, addresses, amount of tax paid and amount of refunds given of the taxpayers whose returns were inspected.

Secretary Mellon's proposal to cut out the House amendment increasing the estate tax in favor of the present rates was agreed to definitely today. The committee had planned to keep the present rates, but apply them to different brackets so that $12,000,000 additional revenue would be raised, the same as would have been gained under the House amendment.

It also was decided today to limit articles exempt from the 5 per cent jewelry tax to those selling for less than $25 rather than those selling for $40 or less, as voted by the House. Musical instruments, eye glasses and spectacles, which were exempted by the House from any tax under this section, were again made subject to the levy, and articles used in religious services were exempt entirely.

Changes made today in the bill will not alter materially the estimate that it will fall by about $50,000,000 of raising sufficient revenue to meet estimated expenditures of the government next year, Chairman Smoot said. He has predicted, however, such a deficit would be wiped out by an increase in revenue over that estimated by the Treasury.

Thirteen Others Are Shot

Fray Follows Gathering of Hooded Members in Small Pennsylvania Town

Twenty-five Ku Klux Men Arrested, Fifty Guns Seized After Clash

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

JOHNSTOWN (Pa.) April 6. State troopers from the barracks at Greensburg were being rushed to Lilly early this morning in answer to a request for assistance made by the District Attorney's office of Cambria county in connection with the shooting during the visit of Klansmen last night.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

LILLY (Pa.) April 5.—Four men were killed and thirteen injured when shots were fired into a crowd of townspeople just before 500 members of the Ku Klux Klan boarded a special train for Johnston after holding ceremonies in a field near the town, and a demonstration in the streets. The dead, who were all residents of the town are:

Phillip Conrad, 25 years of age; Frank Measkow, 22; Floyd Paul, 28, and an unidentified man.

The injured, some of whom are expected to die, were taken to hospitals in Johnston and Altoona.

The train bearing the Klansmen arrived in Lilly from Johnstown about 9 o'clock this evening and immediately upon detraining the Klansmen marched to a field where rites of the order were gone through. Then they marched through the streets.

When nearing the railroad station preparatory to departing to Johnstown, according to the police, several residents of the town turned a stream of water from a town fire hose on the marchers. Shooting immediately followed, and the Klansmen boarded the train and departed before any action could be taken to stop them.

The wounded were all young men and boys. Police have conflicting reports as to their returning the fire.

No arrests were made, although there were State police in the town to prevent disorders. The shooting and departure of the train occurred so quickly they did not have time to act.

KLANSMEN ARRESTED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

JOHNSTOWN (Pa.) April 5. When the special train bearing members of the Ku Klux Klan back from Lilly where four men were killed and thirteen injured in a shooting just before the Klansmen entrained after holding a demonstration in that town, arrived in Johnstown shortly before midnight, it was met by more than fifty police officers, headed by Sheriff Logan N. Keliar. Twenty-five Klansmen were arrested and about fifty guns were confiscated.

Three of the persons wounded in the shooting at Lilly were brought to the hospital here. They are Worthy Davis, shot through the left side; Harry Johnson, shot through the neck, and Samuel Evans. All are in serious condition.

Police declared that a large number of empty shells were found on the floors of the coaches of the train and that they had evidence that a great many guns had been thrown from the train before it reached Johnstown.

It was later said by the police authorities here that three wounded men at the hospital were Klansmen brought back in the special train.

Not a hundred persons remained aboard the special train when it pulled into the Johnstown station, the majority of the Klansmen leaving the coaches at way stations. The twenty-five arrested are being held in jail.

According to the local police the cause of the klansmen's visit to Lilly is believed to have been brought about by the firing of shots into the home of the Methodist minister there by two men two weeks ago. The men have been arrested in connection with the shooting and are being held for County Court, police stated.

Merritt Adamson, chairman of the quarantine committee in the foot-and-mouth disease emergency, yesterday issued an appeal to the public to stay out of the mountains and off the cattle ranges during the present emergency. This is a further move in the fight to prevent the spread of the disease in Los Angeles county. Mr. Adamson explained that cattle are usually potential spreaders of the infection for a day or more before the clinical symptoms develop in themselves—in other words, that a picnic party on grazing lands may pick up and carry the infection from places where apparently healthy cattle have been. It is highly important to keep the disease out of the mountains as, if the deer become infected, they will spread it far and wide.

Angeles have been ordered closed to public gatherings and picnic parties. This order coming yesterday is in keeping with the policy outlined on Friday when the Board of Supervisors passed an ordinance closing Bouquet, San Francisquito and Topanga Canyon roads, together with all other roads than highways leading out of the county and limiting travel to the paved highways.

Guards have been stationed at the county line on the following roads to remain open, who will inspect all vehicles, compelling them to be driven through troughs of disinfectant solution: Foothill Boulevard, Holt avenue, Chino Road, Brea Canyon Road, Whittier Boulevard, La Mirada Road, Anaheim Road, Orange County Line Road, cross roads Spring street and Anaheim Road near Alamitos Sugar Factory, Anaheim street, Seal Beach, Conejo Road, Santa Susana Road, Castaic Road, Ridge Route, Willow Springs Road, State Highway, Lancaster-Mojave, Redman-Murck Road, Little Rock-Victorville Road.

PLAN UNIFORM RULES

At a conference of the Board of Supervisors of eight southern counties in the offices of the local board Friday, it was agreed that a uniform ordinance covering policing and disinfecting measures to combat the foot-and-mouth disease be adopted by all The counties represented at this conference were Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Orange, Riverside, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Imperial and Ventura.

Particularly drastic measures along roads leading into the range country have been put into operation to prevent deer and wild cattle from contracting the disease, which might take years to stamp out. Undersheriff Biscailuz has enrolled twenty-four additional special deputies to help in eradication work, thus bringing the total number of guards now at work up to 150.

Because of the danger of feeding unsterilized garbage to hogs, which method is thought to be one of the probable elements of spread of the disease, the Board of Public Works will adopt tomorrow a resolution ordering all persons, firms and corporations which feed to hogs garbage collected in Los Angeles, to sterilize the garbage before feeding it to the animals. The Fontana Company, which receives the garbage collected in the greater part of the city and transports it to its ranch holdings in San Bernardino county has already installed the necessary boilers and other equipment, and is now sterilizing the garbage before feeding to the hogs.

FOOD SUPPLY SAFE

The following statement was issued by the health officials of the city and county yesterday:

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) April 4, 1924

Reports coming to the City and county health departments would indicate undue excitement on the part of some of our citizens relative to the healthfulness of dairy products, meat and meat food products as a result of the present epidemic of hoof-and-mouth disease among live stock.

Public health naturally comes first, and the public can rest assured there is absolutely no cause for excitement at this time as to the effect this disease may have on meat and dairy products for edible purposes.

Those who may be alarmed are advised that there is a very thorough system of inspection maintained through a corps of expertly trained inspectors by the State, county and city governments of dairy herds, ranches and creameries. Inspections are held regularly, and there can be no doubt as to the safeguarding of health in such complete supervision from ranch to table.

NO NEED OF FEAR

Regarding meat and meat food products: It has long since become a law, which is rigorously enforced, that all meat-packing plants within the city, county or State be operated absolutely under either Federal, State of city meat inspectors. This system of inspection is indeed technical work and only competent men, trained especially for such work, are employed. The rigid inspection starts with the live animal at the packers' pens and not only the carcass, but all organs of the animal are carefully scrutinized for any infectious disease that may exist.

Meat inspection today has become a real science and, as a result, thousands of animals are condemned every year at the meat-packing plants. Only carcasses and offal of animals found to be free of disease and entirely healthful are released by the inspectors for food purposes.

There need be no fear on the part of the public in eating meat or dairy products as a result of the present epidemic with live stock. Health now, as in the past, is being safeguarded.

The greatest effort must be put forth by everyone to enforce strict compliance with the quarantine regulations. The cause of the strict regulations is to quickly eradicate the disease in order to save the live stock of our State and nation, not through fear that food products from such infected animals might cause illness to the public. Infected animals are easily detected by the expert inspectors and are promptly destroyed.

The public should not hesitate to consume as much meat or dairy products as heretofore.

The Automobile Club of Southern California yesterday called upon every motor-vehicle owner and driver to co-operate fully in obeying regulations and using precaution against further spread of disease. Above is map of the county prepared by Charles H. Owens, Times staff artist, showing restrictions which will be in force today. Disinfectant stations have been established at points shown by circles on the map. Roads closed east are marked with crosses. The infected districts are shown in shaded areas. Motorists are urged to keep away from infected districts, leave all pets at home, and to remain out of agricultural areas where there is possibility of the malady being transmitted.

NO QUARANTINE PLAN DECIDED

Conferees at Capital Fail to Reach Agreement

Northern Counties to Keep Up Own War on Disease

Rules from State Asked to Aid Them in Fight

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, April 5.—Supervisors and prosecuting attorneys from twenty-four Northern California counties, meeting today in the Assembly chamber at the Capital, with bureau heads from the State Department of Agriculture failed to reach an agreement on a strict quarantine line which it has been proposed should be drawn across the State from the summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains to the sea, as a precaution against the spread of the foot-and-mouth disease.

Dr. J. J. Frey, State veterinarian, said it would cost the twenty-four counties $50,000 a month to maintain a rigid quarantine. He expressed the opinion that the extra expense was not justified in view of the fact that Sacramento county and the State and Federal government now have guards on the line between San Joaquin and Sacramento county.

LOCAL LINES STAND

A resolution pledging the conference to refrain from establishing a strict quarantine with guards and patrols on duty twenty-four hours a day until it was deemed advisable by the State Department of Agriculture and the Federal government to act was adopted by a vote of ten to nine at the close of the meeting. The Supervisors and prosecuting attorneys from the nine dissenting counties are determined, however, they said, to maintain local quarantines.

The conference was in session for four hours. Here is what it did:

(1.) Deferred action on a strict quarantine line.

(2.) Agreed that no live stock should be moved in areas free of the foot-and-mouth disease without a permit from the State Department of Agriculture and that neither cattle nor sheep should be moved from one county to another for grazing purposes until disinfected.

(3.) Asked the State Board of Agriculture and the United States Department of Agriculture to draft rules and regulations which could be followed by all of the Northern California counties which are free of the foot-and-mouth disease.

(4.) Agreed that each county should organize a protective association under the direction of the Supervisors.

(5.) Gave the State Department of Agriculture a vote of confidence.

FORCED THROUGH

The vote of confidence in the agricultural department was forced through by J. M. Cremin, publisher of the Marysville Appeal after B. H. Chocheon, chairman of the conference had recessed the meeting to prevent a resolution offered earlier in the day by Cremin from being defeated.

Cremin's resolution was laid on the table following the recess after it had failed to obtain a second.

Near the close of the meeting the Marysville publisher called the resolution up again, procured a second for it, and got it passed. In the end only William Haman, a member of the Placer county Board of Supervisors, voted against it.

PRESIDENT SEEN ILLINOIS WINNER

the national convention to ditch Coolidge's chances and name the Californian. Since early in the year, however, all the swing of sentiment has been in the opposite direction.

PICKED AS WINNER

Coolidge managers in the East have been concerned over the possible effect the Teapot Dome, bootleg, aircraft and other scandals may have exerted upon the President's candidacy, but feelers put out in various portions of the State indicate that as in Iowa, Nebraska and Michigan, Coolidge does not appear to have been weakened by the disclosures.

Added to that, party workers report a large stratum of confidence in the President and a general feeling that he is keeping his head and his balance under trying circumstances at Washington and under his administration prosperity is fast getting on its pegs again.

In Michigan, which holds its primaries tomorrow, President Coolidge is picked as an easy winner by the State leaders of the party. The Johnson camp staked great hopes on the State because of Hiram's victory in 1920 over Wood and Lowden when he had a plurality of 44,000. Senator Johnson has stumped the State, but all the ground swell is reported to be for Coolidge, whose State managers have practically let the campaign carry itself.

Newspapers which four years ago were with Johnson are now criticising him and supporting the President, and the old war horses of the Progressive party, which carried the State for Roosevelt in 1912, are in general supporting Coolidge.

McADOO IS ALONE

Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck and party chiefs at Lansing declare that the political talk is preponderantly in favor of the President and that it includes all groups, farmers, artisans, business men, white-collar boys and labor.

In Nebraska, both Republican and Democrats alike regard the President as being in the lead for Tuesday's primaries. Senator Johnson carried the State in the primaries four years ago but it was on an issue that went strong in Nebraska—hs irreconcilable attitude on the League of Nations. This year, however, much adverse comment has been stirred up because the Senator is directing his attacks against the President, because he is not advancing a constructive program and because of his continued absence from his seat in the Senate.

On the Democratic side William G. McAdoo is running alone on the preference line on the Illinois ballot, but the regular organization has an uninstructed anti-McAdoo delegation on the ticket and expects to win hands down in which event McAdoo mght as well hang a minus sign in front of the Illinois contingent at New York. At most they concede him five to eight delegates. In Michigan and Nebraska McAdoo is not running, those States having "favorite sons."

PREUS CONTRADICTED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Views differing from those of Gov. Preus of Minnesota as to political conditions in the Northwest were given President Coolidge today by two Republican members of the House from that section. Gov. Preus, who was at a White House luncheon yesterday, stated that a third party headed by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin would virtually sweep the Northwest.

Representative Young, Republican, North Dakota, told the President that the Minnesota Governor was mistaken so far as North Dakota was concerned, and Representative Larson, Republican, Minnesota, took direct issue with the executive of his State regarding Republican chances in Minnesota.

"Gov. Preus seems to be unduly perturbed over the political situation in the Northwest," Representative Larson said in a formal statement. "He imagines that Magnus Johnson, who defeated him for Senator last July, is still chasing him. La Follette is now his hobgoblin, who, he says, will capture some nine States in the Northwest by merely allowing his name to go on the ballot. I will not undertake to say what will happen in the States other than Minnesota next November, but I am confident that Minnesota will be found in the Coolidge column. It is true that there is some political discontent among the people of my State, particularly among the farmers, but it is on the wane. The people have confidence in Coolidge and believe that he is sincerely doing his utmost to relieve them.

"I do not know what Gov. Preus's purpose is in throwing this scare into the Republicans. The Governor should not be taken too seriously."

PETITION IS FILED

ROBERT PEARY PAID TRIBUTE

Esquimaux women who made their only child's first baby clothes. They held that woman in honor.

ABSOLUTE LOYALTY

At "Snow Baby's" side stood Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, commander of Peary's crew on the voyage of discovery that made noise than any voyage of discovery since Columbus found a new world. "Capt. Bob," former Secretary of the Navy Denby fondly called him in the speech of the day, and said that he stood for one supreme thing, "utter and absolute loyalty."

Denby spoke another noble phrase when in describing Peary's final dash toward the pole and his discovery, he flung to the breeze like a flag this sentence:

"His was the last supreme adventure that great souls like his could embark upon."

And again:

"He taught what preparedness really means and how the will conquers the flesh and the flesh conquers the wilderness."

"His deed was one that told the whole story of the duty of a man, especially when that man wears the uniform of his country."

PIOUS BEAUTY

The scene before the notables was a wonderful picture of pious beauty. Below the height on which they stood rose the marble amphitheater that shrines the grave of the unknown soldier, and to the left the gaunt mast that remembers the dead of the Maine, on the horizon, radio towers recalling the fact that as long ago as 1905, Robert Peary had used the wireless telegraph on the ship Roosevelt with which he reached the then "fartherest north," latitude 87 degrees and 6 minutes. Far across the turbid river marching to the sea shone the domes and temples of Washington.

"The valley of glory," thought one, gazing across the river.

Strains of music stole over the Virginia Hill as the troops marched from the barracks of Fort Meyer to the grave. Their bands were playing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and then the august music of that so-called "Portugese Hymn" which begins, "I Seek by the Paths That my Forefathers Trod."

FLAGS AFLASH

The flags of the troops flashed remotely down the vistas of trees that sentinel the white headstones of the dead of our wars—hundreds of acres of white headstones at Parade Rest. The air was soft with the Southern spring.

Accompanied by a group of local Democrats the Presidential candidate took his seat in the grandstand while the crowd stood and cheered him. Despite the fact that a brisk wind blew throughout the afternoon and the sky was overcast, the crowd today was nearly double that which witnessed the opening of the three-day program yesterday.

laid before either the Embassy here or the State Department.

Both the Mexican government and the American Embassy have dispatched representatives to Queretaro to determine what has happened to the American sugar mill which has been reported as taken over by the workers. Ambassador Warren declared that Mexican laws forbid the taking over of working or growing properties and that he expects the Federal authorities to prevent the State or other authorities from violating the laws.

Pressed further for a statement on the critical financial condition of Mexico, Ambassador Warren pointed out that the government is meeting its foreign debt interest and apparently intends to continue its payments in accordance with the agreement entered into with the international bond holders' committee. He said that he did not expect that labor troubles in the Tampico oil fields would interfere with production as it was hardly probable that the government would permit one of its chief production centers to be curtailed.

FUNDS BADLY NEEDED

In a statement regarding the financial situation, President Obregon said that money was badly needed but that he had not yet received any concrete proposals for a loan from the Minister of Finance. He said that money from a loan, if it should be negotiated at once, would first be applied to government salaries which are now two months in arrears.

President Obregon said that he knew that Minister of Finance Pani and Ambassador Warren had met informally at a reception given by the Argentine Minister and that he understood that they had discussed finances.

President Obregon announced that he had received word that his personal friend, John Rossiter, San Francisco capitalist, was planning to visit Mexico City with a party of American business men, but said that he did not know whether the visit meant that a loan would be offered to Mexico.

Diamonds and Sapphires Happily Combined

Not by any means a commonplace watch

The Geo. D. Davidson Co. has always avoided the two extremes in jewelry merchandising. THE COMMON-PLACE—because neither you nor I like to wear the styles that everyone else wears. THE ULTRA FASHIONABLE—because we do not believe it good business to tie up thousands of dollars in merchandise that is unsalable because of the very extremity of its style—that is a constant interest expense, and that sooner or later must be broken up.

The watch illustrated typifies the Davidson policy. It's in no sense commonplace, nor is it the limit to which extremist designers have gone. It is just a dainty, well made, attractive watch that would grace the wrist of any lady in our land, and that will be good style and wearable for many years to come.

If now or in the future you contemplate buying a watch or other piece of fine jewelry it would be the part of wisdom to see the Davidson stock. You will be shown every courtesy and you will not be urged to buy.

The watch is about one-half the size of this drawing. The case is of heavy, hard platinum, smartly engraved on sides and back. The thirty-six diamonds and nine sapphires are of fine quality and carefully matched. A fine value.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless,) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

TRIO SOUGHT IN STONE MURDER

Maze of Clews Traced in Mystery Killing

Robbery Seen as Possible Motive in Slaying

Man Seen in Front of Door Thursday Night

Three men and three different motives were being traced by the police yesterday out of the maze of names and possibilities surrounding the brutal slaying Friday night of Mrs. Vera Stone, in her apartment at 1330 West Eleventh street.

One of them is a former husband—the man the woman is said to have left to marry William Stone. According to the information obtained by the detectives the former husband never lost his love for Vera Stone and once before sought her here.

The second man is the suspect known to the police as "Lester." From fragments of evidence gathered by Captain of Detectives Home and Assistant Captain Longuevan, he may be the "Bill" whose name the slain widow cried out in anguish as she was being murdered, and who may have been the man who tried to force his way into the girl's apartment on several occasions. "Lester" was partly identified by Detectives Longuevan, Craig and Jarvis yesterday and may be in custody in the next twenty-four hours.

The third immediate suspect is known as "Jack." This man, the police learned, had a violent quarrel with the woman a short time ago. His identity and movements up to the night of the murder are known to the police and his arrest also is imminent.

MOTIVE IN LIFE

The motives ascribed by the officers to the last two suspects grew out of the mysterious life the murder victim was leading, the officers say. A mass of documentary evidence, including scores of addresses and names of men whose habits brought them in contact with the woman, is now in possession of the police and is being checked.

Robbery also loomed as a possible motive for the murder. last night, when it was discovered by Detective Lieutenant Longeuvan that the murdered woman had three valuable rings and a wrist watch that have not been found since the murder. It was learned by the detective that up to a few days ago the rings had been left at a downtown jewelry store, and that Mrs. Stone had called for them the day before she was killed.

The theory that she was murdered by one of her numerous male acquaintances who coveted the jewels was advanced by the police. However, it was later learned that she had a safe deposit box in a downtown vault, th eexact whereabouts of which could not be learned yesterday, and it is thought that the missing jewelry may be found in it. Efforts were made to locate the vault and ascertain its contents.

POST CARD OFFERS CLEW

Following a thorough investigation, published reports that two high police officials were among Mrs. Stone's admirers were branded as false by investigators. It was learned that while Mrs. Stone was married, she, as the wife of a police officer, met several of the detectives at Central Station. One of them had addressed her a formal Christmas card.

Among other correspondence that the detectives considered as important was a postcard dated March 4, last, which read, in part, as follows:

"I will come to see you in a month."

It was signed "Bill."

That the murderer of Mrs. Stone was calmly washing his hands at the time the landlady of the apartment-house was knocking on the door was indicated to the detectives yesterday by stories told them by occupants of the house and by the discovery in the apartment of a torn silken garment covered with blood and hidden in the bathroom.

One-half of the garment was found in the dresser drawer in the bedroom. The other half, still moist with water and with definite blood spots showing it was used to wash off tell-tale evidence, was found by Detectives Longuevan and Craig in the bathroom of the house yesterday.

The door leading into the apartment is equipped with a bolt that permits locking it against any key from the outside. Miss Pearl Dunbar, sister of the slain woman, who discovered the body, told the officers that the door leading from the little hallway inside the apartment to the bedroom was locked and that the key was on the hall side of the door. Behind this door lay the body.

The time of the murder was fixed at approximately 9 o'clock Friday night through stories told the police by other occupants of the apartment-house. From other sources the police learned that the slayer gained entrance to the room some time between 8 and 8:30 o'clock and that he left around 10 o'clock.

STRANGER DESCRIBED

A description of the suspect who may prove to be the slayer of the young widow was furnished to the investigating officers by John S. Milburn, an employee of the Los Angeles Railway Company, who lives in the apartment next to the Stone apartment.

According to Milburn, he and Mrs. Milburn noticed a man who acted suspiciously Thursday night, the night before the murder, and who stood in front of the door leading to Mrs. Stone's quarters. This man, Milburn declared, appeared to be ill at ease, and the police are checking the possibility that he was the slayer, looking for an opportune moment to enter the place.

TELLS OF SCREAM

The man was described as 5 ft., 10 in. tall, 27 years of age, weight about 170 pounds, wearing a dark suit and a light cap and tan shoes.

Miss A. R. Griffith, who lives in the apartment directly under the murdered woman's, declared yesterday she heard a scream about 9 p.m., Friday, followed by the sound of a scuffle and a crash. With the crash, she said, the ceiling of her room shook, as if something had fallen heavily on the floor above.

She went downstairs and informed the landlady, Mrs. L. Loan, of the noises, she said, and Mrs. Loan investigated. Later the landlady came downstairs to her apartment and they talked for some time without hearing any further disturbance.

Mrs. Loan corroborated Miss Griffith's story. She declared she went to the door of Mrs. Stone's apartment and knocked repeatedly without response. The door has a special lock she said, to which she has no key.

WILL CHECK VISITS

"I called Miss Lynn and said who I was, but she didn't answer," the landlady declared. "As nobody seemed quite sure of the location of the screams, I didn't try to break in the door." Mrs. Loan said Miss Griffith did not mention the ceiling being shaken when she told her of the noise.

Together with the stories previously given the detectives about the outcry in which Mrs. Stone was heard to name her slayer as "Bill," and the stories relating to the repetition of this name by a man who sought to enter the apartment several days before the murder, the detectives on the case have worked out a preliminary plan of investigation which involves the checking of every person who knew Mrs. Stone's habits and had opportunities to enter the apartment-house.

Previous quarrels in the rooms, and previous visits are of secondary importance, the officers say, in view of the fact that many men called at the place and that only those who visited it the night of the murder, or those who may have had a motive are being sought first.

TRAIL LEFT BY SENDER OF FLOWERS

Description Tallies With That of Man Seen Before Slain Woman's Door

Did the slayer of Vera Stone, whose body with skull crushed in was found Friday night in her apartment at 1330 West Eleventh street, send her a gift of flowers before he visited her at her room?

This was one of the puzzles presented to police to solve yesterday after the discovery of waxed paper bearing the name of a downtown florist in the slain girl's room. The florist declared yesterday he had sent a pot of Easter lilies to Vera Stone at 6 p.m. Friday on the order of an unidentified man.

The description of this man tallies with that of one of the men for whom police are searching. He is described as about 160 pounds in weight, five feet, ten inches in height and about 40 years of age. A man answering this description is said to have been seen in front of the slain girl's door Thursday night by an occupant of a room on the same floor.

A card was inclosed by the sender of the flowers but the florist doesn't remember what the name was. The flowers were paid for in cash, and the delivery made at once.

According to the delivery boy, Vera Stone was alone in her apartment when the flowers were delivered. She was said to have been wearing the black silk dress in which she was later found murdered.

Yesterday afternoon police were searching for the sender of the flowers, who, they believe, may be able to tell a story of a deeper love for the murdered woman than that of her many other admirers.

WOMAN SEEN AS LIKELY SLAYER

Deep Cuts on Vera Stone's Neck Believed Made by Human Teeth

A thorough medical examination and autopsy is necessary before the police can begin their final reconstruction of the slaying of Mrs. Vera Stone, Captain of Detectives Home and Assistant Cautain Longuevan said yesterday.

Several deep wounds in the slender neck of the slain woman are puzzling the investigating officers. The wounds are too deep to be finger-nail marks. The lighter abrasions and scratches undoubtedly were made by the fingers that gripped the neck, but the deeper wounds may have been inflicted in a rage by human teeth. If this proves to be the fact, the possibility that a woman may have been the slayer will be considered by the detectives.

The wound on the head also is important, the officers say. The autopsy will determine whether a fracture of the skull or strangulation caused death. What the detectives are trying to learn is whether the woman was struck from behind by a blunt instrument, or whether the slayer attempted to strangle the woman after a quarrel and inflicted the head wound in the course of the struggle.

VERA'S SECRET WELL KEPT

Only "Bill's" Picture on Dresser Witness to Murder and Tinsel Life of Victim

Many men knew the smiling "Mae Lynn," but only a few knew her as Mrs. Vera Stone, widow of "Bill" Stone, police officer. And those who knew Mrs. Stone knew her as a woman of sorrow who hid the tragedy of her life behind the shallow laughter and tinsel in which "Mae Lynn" lived her aimless days.

This is the inside story revealed by the murder of the young woman whose body was found on the floor of her apartment at 1330 West Eleventh street shortly before midnight Saturday.

It took death—a grim sordid slaying, to bring forth the story of Vera Stone, as those who knew her see it. Her story, they say, was a story of a great love, of loyalty and sacrifices for the man she really loved, and then of empty laughter and, occasionally, tears.

"Bill" Stone was one of the most popular police officers when he met Vera, his former friends said yesterday. He was young and handsome. His work took him into all walks of life. In one of these he met her. They were married early in 1921.

Vera came and made a home for Bill Stone. It was a modest little home, but to the girl it was brighter and happier than the cabarets she had known before. Both were happy.

But Bill Stone did not keep his good health. He became ill, and finally had to give up his work in the police department. He was suffering from an incurable disease of the stomach. As time went on he grew worse. Then Vera went to work in a department store.

The girl who was used to a carefree and easy life worked hard to help her husband. Stone protested but it did no good. The long months that dragged along saw her returning home, tired and worn, but always smiling because she was "helping Bill."

Stone failed to improve. After a year and a few months he passed on. Only a large picture—in a silvered frame—and memories remained. And Vera tried to carry on.

No one knows the struggles of Vera in those days, for she never talked much about her affairs. In the months of Bill's illness his fellow-officers kept in touch with the young wife and often encouraged her with little remembrances at holidays and visits now and then, and the women folks came to cheer her. But even then she had little to say.

After a while Vera dropped out of sight; but not for long. She reappeared and Stone's former fellow-officers soon learned that she was back in town. They learned that she had changed. She reappeared as "Mae Lynn" and occupied a cozy little nook at the Marshall Apartments on West Eleventh street. Those who knew her heard that the empty laughter and tinsel were again a part of her life. Her own relatives knew nothing about her affairs. No one did, in fact. The only thing that her former friends heard was that "Bill Stone's picture was always on her dresser and that Vera lived alone with her memories.

When she was seen on the street she appeared to be prosperous and carefree. The friends that new her as Vera Stone and not as Mae Lynn knew that she was not happy.

Just what the inner life of this lonesome gaety was to Vera no one knew. Perhaps only the picture of Bill Stone knew why she made little notations in her books and carefully watched her investments as they grew in the past year and a half.

The big silvered frame was on the dresser when the young woman's slayer came into the room. It must have witnessed the tragedy for the lifeless form of the widow lay on the floor directly in front of it when the murder was discovered. It was there Friday night, when the body was carried out. It was still there yesterday, while the men who knew and worked with Bill Stone were searching every nook and corner in the room, occasionally bumping against the dresser and causing the picture in its big frame to sway.

COUNTERFEITERS BUSY

INDIANAPOLIS, April 5.—Counterfeit silver dollars are being passed here and merchants have been warned by Capt. Thomas E. Halls, chief of the United States secret service bureau in Indiana. Capt. Halls has a number of the counterfeit dollars, which, he says, are remarkably well made. They are dated 1882, 1885, 1896, 1899, 1900 and 1922.

STAND FIRM ON FILIPINO ISSUE

Wood and American Colony Oppose Home Rule

Hold Constitutional Act is Only Legal Outlet

Congress Said to Possess No Power in Case

BY WALTER ROBB

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MANILA, April 5.—Prominent Filipino members of the so-called Philippine-American Chamber of Commerce at New York are endeavoring on the eve of the departure of the third Filipino parliamentary mission to Washington to secure a modification in the attitude of Gov.-Gen. Wood and the American community.

They have sought by cable an indorsement of the bill pending in Congress to grant the Philippines immediate home rule with independence after thirty years by plebiscite. Their proposal, however, has been rejected summarily by Americans here just as Gov.-Gen. Wood repeatedly has rejected former proposals contemplating the weakening of the Federal authority.

Gen. Wood's stand is backed fully by the American community, which through the American Chamber of Commerce, officially has invited the attention of President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks to the fact that the Constitution does not grant Congress the power to alienate sovereignty over any territory.

Legal experts, including the best constitutional law authorities here, hold that independence can be granted to the Philippines only by constitutional amendment. Brochures setting out this view have been forwarded to all members of Congress. If the amendment was passed clearing the way for legal Congressional action then the community would acquiesce providing that American interests were liquidated before independence was granted.

Gen. Wood has studied the question carefully and the local community rests assured the administration will not entertain any proposal for compromising America's sovereignty.

GOV. HUNT TOO BUSY FOR TRIP

Arizonian Unable to Appear in Washington

Repeats His Attacks on Swing Bill

Scores Work's Proposals as Unfair

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) April 5.—Gov. G. W. P. Hunt today announced that he could not spare time to go to Washington now to appear before the House Committee on Irrigation and there more particularly to state his views on Colorado River development with respect to the recommendations made by Secretary Work of the Interior Department who, according to the Arizonian, has been utilizing his position to favor his own State of Colorado.

The Governor had received a second invitation to appear. He has answered that his reference to the Secretary of the Interior "was based upon information current in Arizona that he is opposed to the development of the Colorado River unless the Colorado River compact is ratified."

The Governor adds this inference that the engineering report favoring Boulder Cayon was more or less a forced one.

"When Arizona presents a program," Mr. Hunt states, "we prefer to present an affirmative rather than a negative proposition. If Secretary Work testifies that his position is not one of opposition to development until the compact is ratified and the newspaper reports misrepresent him concerning the engineers report, I will withdraw this statement as far as he is concerned.

"Secretary Work is administrator of 61 per cent of the area of this State. He also controls our undeveloped mineral resources, nearly all our forest area and our water-power resources as far as his influence as a member of the Federal Power Commission extends. And the Swing-Johnson Bill proposed to make it absolute as to the Colorado River development.

"Statements which purport to outline his policies are therefore vitally important to this State. Needless to say we are opposed to his latest proposal to turn the river over to private enterprise. The Swing-Johnson Bill is so unfair to this State that even the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce advised against it and passed a resolution refusing to support it.

Deceased passed away suddenly in Los Angeles, from a stroke of paralysis. She lived in this county almost all her life. ## DRIVE FOR COYOTES IN KINGS COUNTY

HANFORD, April 5.—A campaign is on in Kings county for the extermination of pigeons, coyotes and roving dogs. There were thousands of migratory pigeons which fed about the stock ranches and these have been hunted for several days, as they are a menace in the spreading of foot-and-mouth disease, should it develop. Fortunately so far no cases have been discovered in this county. An organized hunt for coyotes, under the direction of County Horticultural Commissioner Haupt, is going on in the unsettled "West Side," where, despite the bounty on them, coyotes continue to thrive.

UNDERTAKER'S CAR DRAWS ATTENTION

HANFORD, April 5.—E. O. Higdon, representative of an undertaking supply company, drove a car to this city which attracted much attention. It is equipped with a complete radio set and its owner stated he had received messages from radio stations 2000 miles distant. His car also has other electrical equipment, including a device to foil would-be thieves, it being an alarm which causes a gong to clamor loudly whenever any part of the car is touched.

SEA TALK FILLS NAVAL OFFICES

I say, a young wordless man who silently glided into a chair opposite the Secretary's chair at a flat-topped desk big enough to dance a quadrille on.

The good man then patiently repeated the thriller word for word to the silent young man, who took it down in shorthand and left the room of state looking exceedingly unhappy.

In a quarter of an hour he brought back his transcript. The new Secretary of the Navy went over it with a lead pencil until it looked like a steel plate in a book about plants. The wordless young man, now pink to his ears, went away again and in another fifteen minutes returned with the thriller in the form in which it now finds print in this newspaper.

Later I saw him again. He was muttering, but it was not a prayer.

And a veteran navy clerk—albeit he has sailed the seas—remarked in a tone that combined awe with enthusiasm.—

'I'll tell the world that there has been more seagoing talk heard here in the last half hour than has been heard in a Secretary of the Navy's office for many a year."

HE KNOWS SHIPS

"Seagoing talk," you should know, is not an offhand phrase of description. It is a special phrase among sailor folk and it is applied to precisely the kind of talk with which the new Secretary of the Navy opened the first formal interview he has given out.

In short, he knows a ship.

The consciousness that he does has suddenly put new gimp into the somewhat reduced morale of the Navy Department.

During the interview, which was really a monologue, young Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, bounced into the room to ask a question. He had barely started to out with it when his new chief, apropos of contrasts provided by the record of sixteen aimed shots per minute in our time and one aimed shot every four minutes in the old days, said to him:

"What's the weight of a seven-inch armor piercing shell?"

I'll warrant young Mr. Roosevelt would have surrendered a goodly percentage of his hopes of heaven to have been able to answer that question at that instant. That was the way he looked and he was not bouncy any more.

But he did not pretend.

He simply and rapidly elevated both hands high above his head and said: "You've got me," continuing to hold his hands aloft.

ALWAYS IN TOUCH

At the instant the question happened to be asked another wordless young man was gliding through the room of state. In a few seconds he returned to it with the words:

"The weight of a seven-inch armor-piercing shell, Mr. Secretary, is 175 pounds."

But the young Theodore had vanished.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur likes to talk about range clocks and gyroscopic compasses and other devices, the spelling of which annoys a landsman.

But he does it in an unpretentious way.

He does it in an earnest, confiding way which implies that to you as citizen of a country washed by two major oceans these devices are extremely important and ought to be interesting. That they are, and for thirty-nine years have been extremely interesting to Curtis Dwight Wilbur is the reason why he today is Secretary of the Navy.

Marrying himself to the law at the age of 21 or thereabouts—it was within a year or so after he left the Naval Academy, and having made a fine career in the law, he still has never permitted himself to lose touch with the Navy. In elucidating that story he told today about the time he nearly lost his life at sea, he sent for a big framed photograph of the old Monongahela and with the forefinger of love and accuracy he went over detail after detail and rope after rope of her rigging while I sat there with the sick grin of pretended comprehension on my face.

IS UP-TO-DATE

After thirty-nine years he knew every rope and he spoke fondly of his old "Constellation" as one of the four "queens of the Navy" that were launched in 1796, and she in her time, "the loftiest ship in the world."

He has kept in touch with modern systems of gun fire and gun-control. Although for years immersed in the law as chief deputy to the District Attorney of Los Angeles county, as judge of the Superior Court of the same county, as associate justice of the Supreme Court of California, as chief justice of that court, and as formulator of the Juvenile Court laws of California, he nevertheless has been pals through all these years with such men as Admiral Coontz, and Admiral Russell, and Gen. Lejeune of the marines, with the last-named of whom he was classmate at Annapolis, and last summer he spent his vacation as the guest of Admiral Robinson on the "California."

As for the change he has seen come over the Navy in his time he thinks it has been for the better, especially as to morals, for he said today:

"There has been a marvelous improvement in both men and officers. They are better, cleaner men."

GOOD IMPRESSION

He makes a fine first impression.

To that you will say, "Oh, they all do when they first come into the Cabinet."

Well, they don't.

Fall did not. Daugherty did not.

This man makes a solid impression, physically and temperamentally. He is big all over—big, craggy brow, heavy eyebrows, big nose, and a big smooth shaven face, big hands, big feet. He has a big good-natured smile and a big but low-pitched voice that is released at a leisurely pace. His aspect is judicial but you say to yourself, "Of course," when he says, "I was on the football team at Annapolis."

While he is talking of old days he is wont to look down with a pleased reminiscent smile and when he talks of his more recent work in organizing the California Juvenile Court system and instituting the mothers' pension system the smile is deliberative—and still pleased.

His principal relaxation seems to be abstractedly to roll and unroll a piece of letter paper around a pencil.

There is no pomp about him at all but a great deal of repose and direct friendliness.

But they say he is not reposeful when there is work to be done and that the way he, when he became chief justice, stepped on his associates to get work cleared away was a caution.

COOLIDGE PLEASED

He has a lively interest in facts but he wants both sets. Having obtained both he makes the best decision he can. His decision from the bench have seldom been reversed.

Some time ago, coming on here in connection with some work for the American Bar Association, he met the President through Congressman John D. Fredericks, and it is said that the President instantly "took to him." It is also said that the President has said that he has never had such a cordial response from the appointee's home State as in the matter of his appointment of Judge Wilbur to the Navy Secretaryship.

Those who know the man best say in his professional career he found his best satisfaction in devoting much time to unfortunate youngsters and that this work kept him human. They add that in Washington he will lead more a humanitarian social life than a society social life. He has three sons and a daughter. The boys will stay in San Francisco. The daughter will live here with her father and mother at the house they have taken at 1820 Jefferson Place.

The Secretary told me that he had been giving part of today to surveying estimates of the nation's property that now has come under his administration. With a kind of solemnity he slowly read off the figures. Here they are:

Ships—$1,500,000,000; shore stations, $500,000,000; stores, $1,000,000,000; total, $3,000,000,000.

And these billions of values have come into the keeping of a man who knows a ship—and who loves sailormen.

WILL NOT ABANDON ROAD RIGHT OF WAY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, April 5.—In a letter addressed to the Board of Supervisors of Maricopa county, President H. B. Titcomb of the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company, advises the board that he must refuse its demand that the road vacate a right of way between Tempe and Mesa, especially a section of several miles length that occupies the northern side of a county road space. Mr. Titcomb declares that the right of way was used through general legislative permission and that the Supervisors have no authority to ask for its vacation, that trains have been operated over it continuously that the schedule of trains is on file with the State Corporation Commission, that the trackage is under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that it handles interstate business, and that its status now is under consideration by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

SHELVED OFFICIAL COMMITS SUICIDE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ASHLAND (Wis.) April 5.—The body of Charles Bluedhorn, aged town clerk of Agenda, at the southern end of Ashland county, was found hanging in the basement of the Town Hall by members of the Town Board, who had gone to hold a meeting in the hall. Bluedhorn was over 70 years of age. He had been Town Clerk for twenty years. Failing eyesight and disappointment over the fact that nobody took out nomination papers for him in the town elections are believed to be responsible for the old clerk's suicide.

ACTION ON SHIP PLAN DELAYED

Discussion of Section 28 to Go on This Week

Maritime Interests Continue to Voice Protest

Say American Marine Would Not be Benefited

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The House Merchant Marine Committee today put over until the latter part of next week further discussion of Section 28 of the Merchant Marine Act, which would declare preferential railroad rates to shippers using American vessels.

When consideration is resumed representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be called to state their views in regard to the section which will become effective May 20.

Chairman Greene indicated that an attempt will be made to obtain action on the section before next week-end.

Additional arguments against its enforcement were presented today by representatives of American shipping and industrial interests who continued their advocacy of a resolution proposed by Representative Newton, Republican, Minnesota, which would defer operation of the section until July 1, 1925.

Practically every shipping and industrial witness today testified that he favored the creation of a merchant marine and did not seek in any way to embarrass the Shipping Board, but added that in his opinion enforcement of the section at the present time would not promote the interests of an American merchant marine fleet.

By adoption of the Newton proposal, it was argued, time would be given for a thorough investigation of the needs of the American Merchant Marine and the possible effects of the section.

RICH WOMAN IN PASADENA KILLS SELF

Mrs. W. A. Baker is Found Hanging in Bathroom of Fashionable Home

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 5.—Mrs. W. A. Baker, wealthy and prominent Pasadena society woman, committed suicide late this afternoon by hanging herself in the bathroom of her fashionable home, 45 Ford Place. She was 45 years of age.

According to her husband, who found his wife's body suspended from the ceiling by a knotted towel and a cord, she probably planned to take her life while members of the family were away. She was suffering from an incurable disease, it is said.

The cord and towel were found wrapped securely around Mrs. Baker's neck and, according to the police, she died from strangulation. She had also locked the bathroom door and her husband was forced to break a window to gain entrance.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker came to Pasadena from Ohio where they are well known. The body was taken to the Turner and Stevens Undertaking Parlors awaiting instructions from Coroner Nance.

CANADA GRAIN MEN HOPE FOR RATE DROP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) April 5.—With the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence, freight rates are expected to drop, from Vancouver to the United Kingdom and European continental ports, to a point that will make wheat moving by the western route competitive with grain going from the eastern outlet. There are heavy stores of grain in many elevators in Canada. Farmers fear that good reports of spring wheat will reduce the price to a point where it will not pay to grow grain.

It is now close enough to the May option month for dealers to have a fair idea of the market prices, and world supplies have also been fairly well estimated. This

THREE MAY DIE BY SLOW POISON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LEONARD (Mich.) April 5.—Despondency over a quarrel with her husband caused Mrs. Duel Strong to give slow poison to her two daughters and swallow a large quantity herself, it was revealed yesterday by the authorities. Mrs. Strong induced her daughter, Mary, 14 years of age, and Jeannette, 8, to swallow poison tablets and then swallowed several of them herself. She became frightened when she realized that all three of them would probably die, and informed her husband of her act only a few moments after it was committed. Due to the promptness with which medical treatment was given, it is believed there is a possibility that the lives of the three may be saved.

MINING MAN DIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DENVER, April 5.—William O. McFarlane, 80 years of age, widely-known resident of Colorado and Denver, died at his home, yesterday. Mr. McFarlane settled in Central City, Gilpin county, Colo., in 1868. There he engaged in the manufacture of mining machinery and also became interested in mining properties. He founded the McFarlane Machinery Company. Mr. McFarlane moved to Denver thirty-one years ago and had since resided here.

INSPECTOR SUSPENDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

KANSAS CITY (Kan.) April 5. Lee Nelson, Kansas City, Kan., food inspector, was suspended temporarily by Harry J. Kaelin, commissioner in charge of the Health Department, following the filing with him of three affidavits by dairymen charging that Nelson accepted money from them as protection for selling impure milk, and for sampling only milk which could stand the test.

BILL REPORTED ON CHILD LABOR

Control Measure Out of Committee

Shortridge Gives Text of Amendment

Good Chance to Pass Both Houses Seen

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Senator Shortridge, chairman of the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, today reported for the full committee the form of a constitutional amendment to control child labor. The measure has a good chance to pass both Houses at this session and when ratified by two-thirds of all the States will permit the Federal administration through Congressional action to regulate child labor.

States can also pass their own enforcement laws so that State and Federal officers can co-operate in preventing illegal child labor as they do now on other problems.

In the final form as the measure will be reported to the Senate and considered in that body it overcomes the objections made by the Supreme Court to the former law. The text of the committee report is as follows:

"Wherefore your committee reports in favor of submitting to the legislatures of the several States the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United Staes:

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein) that the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States which when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"Section 1. The Congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age.

"Section 2. The power of the several States is unimpaired by this article, except that the operation of State laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the Congress."

DISRUPTION NOW FACES CONFERENCE

Hongkong Organization is in Danger as Toyo Kisen Company Withdraws

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VICTORIA (B. C.) April 5.—Declaring that members of the conference are secretly cutting freight rates to attract cargoes for American ports in direct contravention of the terms of the agreemen, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Shipping Company has formally withdrawn from the Hongkong Pacific Freight Conference. The conference itself apears to be in imminent danger of disruption also, according to advices received from the Orient on the Empress of Asia.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Line is also reported to be considering withdrawal from the conference. Opinion in the Orient is that if this company should withdraw, the Hongkong Pacific Freight Conference will be ruined.

The conference consisted of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Osaka Soosen Kaisha, Toyo Kisen Kaisha, Pacific Mail Steamship Company, Canadian Pacific Steamships, Limited, Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, Glen Line and Java-China-Japan Line.

For the last few years three steamship lines, the Blue Funnel Line, the Dollar Line and the Admiral Oriental Line, have been operating against the conference interests and have offered shipment at cheaper rates between American Pacific ports and South China ports. Frequent counter moves have been made, but without success. With the discovery that secret cutting has been made by members of the conference itself the Toyo Kisen has seen fit to withdraw.

FIGHTERS HALT FOREST BLAZE

Sierra Madre Area Saved in Desperate Battle

Gale Fans Flames; Resorts' Outlet Threatened

Twenty-Acre Stretches Burn in Two Outbreaks

After sweeping over twenty acres of the mountainside between Pasadena and Sierra Madre, eating into the Sierra Madre watershed along the Mt. Wilson Trail and threatening to burn into the resort district in Little Santa Anita and Bailey's canyons, a forest fire was reported under control late last night.

Forty men were patroling the burned area to guard against another outbreak during the night, the majority of the firefighters having been sent to their homes when the high wind died down; the fire was confined to the twenty-acre stretch.

The sixty-mile-an-hour gale that blew yesterday when the fire was at its height was the chief difficulty encountered by the firefighters who were rushed to the scene from Sierra Madre and Fern Lodge, Roberts's Camp and Sturdevant's Camp, three nearby resorts

The gale was so strong that the firefighters were forced many times to lean on their shovels and hold onto the brush to keep from being blown off the ledges. Several men were reported knocked off their feet by small rocks and sticks picked up by the wind.

One of the first efforts to quell the fire ended in disaster during the early afternoon. Employees of the Sierra Madre Water Department were endeavoring to burn a fire break near the Mt. Wilson Trail to check the blaze from getting into the watershed. The gale carried the flames beyond control and only desperate work prevented it from reaching the Sturdevant Trail, the only outlet of the three mountain resorts.

When the fire was at its height, City Marshal Udell of Sierra Madre began drafting men on the streets of his city to aid in getting it under control. He obtained a squad of 150 men and sent them to the scene.

Another fire of a serious nature broke out in the Arroyo Seco Canyon above Pasadena early yesterday. More than twenty acres of brush was burned before the flames were extinguished. Firefighters spent the afternoon scurrying to different parts of the canyon putting out spot fires caused by flying sparks.

BUILDING IS BRISK

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

AKRON, April 5.—April is to be a big month in the largest improvement program ever undertaken in the city of Akron. More than $1,195,000 worth of contracts for city work will be let this month. The biggest contract to be awarded is for the new $900,000 municipal building at South High and Church streets. The plans provide for an eight-story building which will house all city departments except police. Contracts for sewer work aggregating about $275,000 also will be let.

RECORD REGISTRATION SEEN

Last-Minute Rush Expected to Bring Total to 50,000 More Than in 1922

Estimates of officials that the total of registered voters when registration time ended last night would be at least 50,000 greater than that for the 1922 gubernatorial primaries, were borne out last night when hundreds of people lined up at the booths.

The booths kept open until midnight, taking care of what the deputy registrars said was a record number of registrants.

No totals were available except those compiled up to Friday night. Chief Deputy Registrar Kerr predicted on the basis of the Friday figures that the 50,000 excess over 1922 would be the minimum. The estimates showed that 435,000 persons had registered and it was predicted that the closing of the registration booths would see approximately 265,000 persons in the city and 210,000 outside the city, registered for the elections.

Analysis of the registration totals in the city from figures compiled up to Friday night showed 159,059 registered as Republicans; 54,717 as Democrats; 3479 as Socialists; 4047 as Prohibitionists; 3011 who declined to state their party affiliations, and 1391 miscellaneous.

In the county the analysis showed 122,817 registered as Republicans; 43,391 as Democrats; 2229 as Socialists; 6195 as Prohibitionists; 24,947 who declined to state their party affiliations, and 1052 miscellaneous.

Negro to Hang for Murder Is Jury's Verdict

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FLORENCE (Ariz.) April 5.—Only a few minutes were needed by the jury to return a verdict of murder in the first degree in the case against William B. Ward, a Globe negro, charged with the murder of Ted Grosh, a University of Arizona student, near Miami on the night of December 26.

The negro was identified positively by Mrs. Maxine McNeilly Gilbert, who was with Grosh at the time he was killed, and who received two bullets in the head from the same pistol. Gila county officers offered much corroborative testimony. Ward was the only witness for the defense. He merely told that he was drunk on the night in question and that he remembered nothing.

He was spirited out of Globe, soon after arrest, to save him lynching, and has been held in the State penitentiary. Sentence will be passed by Judge Abbey on the 15th inst., and notice has been given that appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court, thus delaying the date of execution in the event the judgment shall stand.

GOLD HOARD IS LURE FOR MURDERERS

Chinese Merchant Found Slain by Highbinders in Hunt for Wealth

Torture by strangulation at the hands of Chinese highbinders was administered to Lee Yew, proprietor of a dingy little shop at Alameda and Ferguson Alley, before his life was snuffed out with a bullet some time early yesterday morning, is the belief of plainclothes men attached to the Chinatown detail who discovered the body of the Chinese when they crashed in the front door of the shop at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The body lay huddled beneath blankets, the contents of a trunk unceremoniously dumped upon it by the highbinders in their search for a horde of American gold which it is believed Lee Yew had accumulated, a length of hempen line about the neck and a gaping bullet wound in the head. For a time the body was unobserved by Detectives Collings and Robinson in their search of the premises, so completely was it covered, where it lay on the floor of the tiny bedroom of the establishment.

Whether the hiding place of the murdered Chinese's wealth was revealed to or discovered by the highbinders is not known.

The crime was committed some time after midnight Friday night when Lee Yew locked up the little shop and 7 o'clock yesterday morning, probably soon after the victim had retired for the night. Entrance was gained by cutting the wire netting from a rear window.

When the little shop failed to open yesterday as usual, friends of the dead Chinese unsuccessfully attempted to gain entrance in the belief that he was sick. When their efforts failed the police were summoned.

Lee Yew was a member of no tong and was known as a peaceable man in good standing with his countrymen and those few Americans with whom he came in contact.

It is known among the Chinese that he had done a thriving business in his dingy little shop for many years—twenty years, to be exact. He is said to have come to Los Angeles forty years ago at the age of approximately 15 years.

Finger prints left by the highbinders are the only clews which the police were able to unearth.

City League to Oppose Flood Control Bonds

The Municipal League, which is disgusted with the County Board of Supervisors for daring to put before the voters on May 6 a bond issue of $25,300,000 for needed county flood control facilities, yesterday in a letter to the Supervisors announced that the League must oppose the bonds. The letter was long and set forth reasons why the League is opposed to the flood control bonds. In spite of the length of the letter, it did not state the real reason why the League is opposed to the bonds, which, according to members of the League is this: "The only important thing in the world is the $21,000,000 power bonds asked for our friend and member, Dr. John R. Haynes, and we are fearful that the voters will decide that the county flood control facilities are more important than more power bonds, and that the power bonds will be defeated."

Arthur Wright Funeral Under Masonic Lodge

Funeral services for Arthur Wright, prominent in legal, social and fraternal circles, will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Masonic Temple at Pico and Figueroa streets. The Silver Trowel Lodge, No. 415, F. & A. M., will be in charge.

The past commanders of Golden West Commandery No. 43, Knights Templar, will act as guards of honor. Pallbearers will be William Hunsaker, E. R. Collins, R. H. Raphael, Col. Griswold, Bruce H. Grigsby, Frank G. Finlayson and Dana R. Weller. The honorary pallbearers will include Southern California judges and prominent business and professional men.

The body will be placed in a vault in Hollywood Cemetery.

ADDICTED TO SPIRITS

Mate Liked Supernatural Kind, Says Wife in Suit

Confirmed addiction to spirits on the part of Louis Brandl was cited by Mrs. Elizabeth S. Brandl as the cause of trouble between the two in a hearing before Judge Burks which resulted in the award to her of a divorce decree, on file yesterday.

Brandl did not patronize bootleggers, however. Unearthly spirits claimed his attention, his wife testified. He persisted in going into trances to such an extent that he failed properly to provide for her, she complained. Mrs. Brandl was represented by Attorney Voltaire Perkins.

CITY MAY HAVE DIESEL FACTORY

Negotiations for Project Well Advanced

Announcement is Made by Chamber Official

News is Timely in View of Engine Demand

Through I. S. Hurst of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, announcement was made yesterday that negotiations to bring a large Diesel-engine factory to the Pacific-Southewestern territory are well advanced. The eastern principal is an established manufacturing concern with nationally known financial backing, and the Pacific Coast principal is a consulting engineer who has spent a lifetime in designing and superintending the manufacture of internal combustion motors.

"This," said Mr. Hurst yesterday, "is timely news to many Los Angeles and Pacific-Southwest industrial and mercantile interests, for those in closest touch with the situation predict that the demand for Diesel motors in Los Angeles and surrounding territory will mount into values this year aggregating more than $1,000,000.

"Since submarine warfare popularized knowledge of what the Diesel motor can accomplish, its development the world over has been the outstanding engineering and financial feature of the power industry. Five years ago the Diesel industry on the Pacific Coast was a very small infant. Its output amounted to only a few hundred dollars a month. Today the value of Pacific Coast built Diesels is a quarter of a million monthly, and will double within the next two years.

HEAVY PURCHASES

"These figures do not include the value of Diesels manufactured in the East and shipped into this territory. Purchases of this nature from Los Angeles Harbor alone are estimated to have run more than $30,000 a month for many months past.

"An interesting characteristic of this Diesel development is that it does not seem to conflict with the great movement in the Southwest toward hydroelectric power. Diesel power is going largely into marine installations or else, on land, to a class of customers either not readily accessible to hydroelectric connections or not deemed desirable, from the hydroelectric standpoint. Engineers point out that there is sound economic ground for active affiliation between large but intermittent consumers of electric power and the hydroelectric generating companies, through the medium of Diesel-equipped power plants.

"The Diesel power plant of the manufacturer could be used to supply the hydroelectric companies with current during those hours in which the factory plant was closed and the Diesel plant idle. Eventually, the same process will work out until it supplies to so-called wholesale consumers, who take the lowest rates that the power companies are permitted to quote.

CHEAPEST IN WORLD

"As the number of smaller consumers increases, the wholesale buyer becomes relatively less and less profitable and the tendency will be when competition for current sets in, to quote him higher rates, with a consequent tendency, on his part, to install Diesel units. Especially will this be true where oil can be had virtually direct from the producing fields, at well-head prices. In such conditions, Diesel power is the cheapest in the world.

"The time is soon coming in Southern California when there will be more than enough room for all the power, from whatever source, that can be generated. In that hour, Diesel power will be used, from both small and large installations, as an auxiliary of enormous potential value to other industries, whenever there is not actual waste of water over the dams and through the spillways of the hydroelectric generating companies. For this season has taught us that there is not only a seasonal flow of water, varying with the month, the day of the month, and the hour of the day, but that there are great cycles of flow, extending over several years.

"Such a combination of uses for the common good is already being carried out by the electric companies, as far as possible, almost regardless of the cost of the auxiliary power. The Diesel is peculiarly fitted for such service because it can be started at a moment's notice and, when idle, consumes no fuel. Equally important is the low cost of power generated, which, in this favored district, can be as low as five mills the K.W.H. for a Diesel motor continuously operated.

POTENTIAL POWER

"In the light of what the Diesel makes possible, overdrilling and forced export of oil from Southern California fields is not a wholly fortunate condition for Los Angeles. These wells are potential sources of power so great that they are comparable only with the greatest of hydroelectric developments, such as is contemplated at Boulder Dam."

"The potential power development of Southern California oil fields is many times greater than the actual present output of all the water-power generating companies combined. Each shipload of oil leaving the harbor means, at an average of the outgoing tonnage, potential horse power around the 60,000,000 mark. One oil well discharging 1000 barrels daily could deliver 750,000 Diesel horsepower a day. Consider then the potential power of Signal Hill or Santa Fe Springs."

Mr. Hurst reports an interesting sidelight on the labor situation in Los Angeles. Living in Los Angeles and available for a manufacturing plant here are skilled men from nearly every great center of the industry. Among them are represented the most famous plants of England, Switzerland, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, the Scandinavian peninsula and the great American factories.

"This fact," he said, "and the open-shop conditions which obtain here have been important factors in attracting the attention of the eastern capital soon coming here."

In Choosing a Piano!

REMEMBER, quality cannot be where price is TOO low! It is false economy that tempts one to buy an inferior piano for the sake of a few dollars. It is the part of wisdom to make selection where you have choice of only fine piano names — not one, but many of them! Let the firm who guarantees every piano it sells, serve you! Practice safe and sane economy by buying where you KNOW price is the lowest consistent with quality. Barker Bros. have, through forty-two years of service, built and maintained a reputation that embodies these principles.

Méjico Está Gestionando un Empréstito

CIUDAD DE MEJICO, Abril 5.—Después de una entrevista con el Embajador Warren, puede inferirse de lo hablado en ella que Méjico está gestionando un empréstito con banqueros de los Estados Unidos, y que las autoridades de Washington no se oponen a las negociaciones.

El Embajador Warren no quiso comprometerse al hablar sobre la cuestión del empréstito; pero, respondiendo a preguntas que se le hicieron, dijo que había hablado con el Ministro de Hacienda Alberto J. Pani, amigo personal suyo desde que se celebraron las conferencias para el reconocimiento, época en la que Pani era Ministro de Relaciones.

Convino el señor Warren en que había discutido sobre el repetido empréstito con el Ministro de Hacienda, y cuando se le preguntó si el préstamo podría conseguirse directamente con el gobierno americano, manifestó que éste no hacía negocios de esa clase. Se sabe, sin embargo, que, cuando se conciertan empréstitos para gobiernos extranjeros, el Ministerio de Estado interviene para dar su aprobación.

NUMERO 222

Pláticas Diarias en Español por el Prof. R. Guerrero, del Departamento Español de "The Times"

En el párrafo segundo de la Plática 216 encontramos una expresión de muy frecuente uso en castellano: "seguir las instrucciones al pie de la letra" (to follow instructions to the letter), que significa "seguirlas puntual y exactamente", "no desviarse un ápice de las órdenes recibidas".

En el mismo párrafo se encuentra la voz "adoquín", que es una piedra o un zoquete labrados en forma prismática (paving stone, paving block), que se usan para pavimentar las calles. En sentido figurado, se dice de una persona muy estúpida que es un "adoquín".

En la última línea del propio párrafo hallamos la expresión redundante, "el diario jornal". Está de más el adjetivo "diario", pues "jornal", que se deriva del latín "diurnalis", "diario", denota el estipendio o salario que gana el trabajador por cada día de trabajo; "semanario", el que recibe por semana, y "mensualidad" el que devenga por mes.

En el tercer párrafo de la Plática 216 figura la voz "bache", que denota un hoyo que se hace en la calle o camino por el mucho batidero de los carruajes o caballerías. Recuerde el lector que en ocasión pasada hablamos de otros hoyos que se cavan de propósito en las vías públicas para examinar o reparar cañerías, alcantarillas y otras obras subterráneas. Estos hoyos se llaman "calas".

Casi al final del tercer párrafo se habla de las mangas de riego" (hose), que también se llaman "mangueras", y que son tubos largos de cuero, caucho o lona, que se adaptan a las bombas o bocas de riego para aspirar o para dirigir el agua. Llamo la atención sobre este término para poner en guardia a los lectores contra las palabras "chicote" y "tripa", con que algunos mejicanos indoctos designan ese utensilio.

En el cuarto párrafo de la Plática 216 nos habla Alcalá Galiano de las obras del Metropolitano, el ferrocarril urbano subterráneo, que es para Madrid lo que el "Subway" para Nueva York y el "Métropolitain" para París. Es común que, en Madrid, como en París, se abrevie su nombre, llamándole el "Metro".

Según el articulista, son tantos los desperfectos que ocasionan en las vías públicas de Madrid las obras del Metro, que jocosamente los compara el autor con los estragos que habría producido en las calles de la citada capital una contienda civil, con su acompañamiento inevitable de trincheras, barricadas, fuego de artillería, de fusilería, etc. A continuación copia una carta, real o inventada por él, que dirige a su periódico un corresponsal extranjero. Este toma los hoyos, baches, calas, zanjas, etc., que ve en las calles, por los efectos de una reñida lucha civil entre los partidarios del régimen militar que hoy impera en España, y los del derrocado poder civil. Hace gracia esta real o supuesta equivocación del extranjero a los que saben que el cambio de sistema político se efectuó del modo más pacífico, y sin derramamiento de sangre.

$2,500-a-Year Income
Farming by Proxy

John E. Kennedy

THE highest wages are paid only where they are hardest Earned.

The Coal Miner goes deep into the bowels of the Earth for such Wages,—but he doesn't want to LIVE there.

It would be folly to expect in a City so magnetic as Los Angeles, with a climate so peerless as Southern California's, that SALARIES would be as LARGE here as in the frost-bitten East or less comfortable Midwest.

But, consider this: It costs a THIRD LESS to live in Southern California.

So,—an Income of "$2500 a year" will buy more in the way of Good Living here than $3500 could buy in many places elsewhere.

No City could build up its INDUSTRIES as fast as Los Angeles Population and Real Estate Subdivisions have grown.

And, without SUFFICIENT City Industries to support the huge and growing influx of City Population, what will our Visitors of the future do for a Living in Southern California?

"Back to the Land" for Income,—many Sages say.

Back to that GREATEST of all California Industries,—"Fruit and Vegetable Farming."

But, what do YOU,—Mr. City-Man,—know of FARMING, of actual, practical Fruit and Vegetable "Dirt Farming"?

B. C. Forbes recently said this:

"ONE of the plagues of Agriculture and of the railroads in the West has been the lamentably large number of Barbers and Storekeepers, Seamen and other Non-Farmers who have taken to farming and, of course, make a fizzle of it.

"City folks who imagine that it takes no brains or experience to be a successful farmer, know as much about that subject as they do about many others beyond their City Limits."

So,—there you are! Forbes "SAID IT!"

Farming,—especially Fruit and Vegetable Farming, is the soundest, most staple and most profitable, of all Southern California Industries.

Much safer, and with a more permanent Future, than "Subdivisioning" or Lubricating the Young Oil Wells with hard-earned Money.

So,—put YOUR Capital and Savings into a true "INCOME FARM"—one which is already paying its way with a Profit.

Put it into FARM LAND developed to a "Going Concern" basis, by a thoroughly competent and financially strong Tenant,—at his OWN expense.

Pay for that "Income Farm" in Six Yearly installments,—collecting your Cash Rentals in the meantime and,—STAY OFF IT.

Accept a third less Salary if need be.

It is worth THAT sacrifice to live in the Sunshine, the Cheerfulness, the Optimism and Outdoor Healthfulness of Southern California.

But, supplement the lesser Salary available, with such safe INVESTMENT as will more than compensate for Salary deficiency.

Plant every penny you can spare in CULTIVATED "Income Farm Land" where it will grow steadily into a Competence on which you can ultimately retire. For instance:

Buy a "$2500 Income" Farm

IN less than Six Years' time such a "Factory-ized" Farm can provide you with Net income of "$2500 a Year for Life."

Meantime,—during the Six years while you are paying for this Farm—it will bring you IMMEDIATE INCOME to the extent of 9% NET over all Charges, on every Dollar of Capital and Interest you invest in it.

Such an Income Farm is available to you NOW, if you can Act promptly enough.

It is leased to the Cudahy Farm Operating Co.—a Subsidiary of Cudahy Packing Co. Chicago.

This latter fact makes the Lease a SAFER investment than would be the BONDS of certain foreign Governments.

After the first Six Years of 9% Net Rentals, there comes your "HARVEST TIME" of BIG Profits which may continue for life.

Quit Gambling, and Invest

SIX Thousand Dollars will now buy this "Income Farm" of Ten Acres,—Payable $100 per Acre down,—balance spread over Five Years, with 5% interest.

($3000 will buy Five Acres.)

Deed and Transfer of 10% Income Lease delivered to you on the day you make your first $100 per Acre cash payment.

No Contract,—no Conditions,—no Expenses of any sort for Six Years while your $600 per Acre property is being cultivated (by your Cudahy Tenants) into a $1500 to $2500 per Acre probable value.

Now,—why Gamble in mere Futures when you can safely INVEST in Net 9% IMMEDIATE INCOME from Cudahy Lease, with reasonable certainty of $2500 PER YEAR for Life thereafter?

SPEEDING MOTOR-BIKE CRASHES INTO AUTO

FRESNO, April 5.—Turning out to avoid striking an automobile while riding his motorcycle at a high rate of speed along Ventura avenue yesterday afternoon, police say, W. H. Strickler, 28, 1060 Clark avenue, skidded his motor into the automobile of Mrs. J. Robinson, 1003 Orange avenue, and was seriously injured. Strickler was hurried to the City Emergency Hospital in the basement of the City Hall, Broadway and Merced streets, where Dr. Charles E. Mordoff diagnosed his injuries as concussion of the brain, dislocation of the left shoulder, a deep cut in the left side of his lower jaw and another in his left temple and multiple contusions of the body. After treatment there, police took him to his home.

BEE MAN HALTED BY PLAGUE QUARANTINE

PORTERVILLE, April 5.—Plans of a Kingsburg bee man to slip a cargo of bees through Tulare county en route south this morning, before the embargo on bees—asked yesterday by people of Tulare county from Fresno and Kings county Chambers of Commerce went fine until they ran afoul of Inspector D. T. Rewey in Porterville at breakfast time. Inspector Rewey boarded the truck and forced the driver to head for the Fresno line before the name of the bee man was even secured. Dr. W. L. Edwards of Visalia in charge of quarantine in Tulare county, spent the day inspecting patrol on the southern boundary and tightening the "lid" there. Tulare county still continues free.

INFURIATED BOVINE ATTACKS RANCH BOY

HANFORD, April 5.—Robert Hildebrand, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hildebrand, had a close call for his life when he was attacked by an infuriated bull which he was feeding at the Hildebrand ranch in the Lakeside district. The bull charged the boy, knocking him down and trampling on him. Though partly unconscious, Robert managed to roll away from the animal across a wide ditch and finally make his way home. His left arm was broken and he received many scratches and bruises.

DAUGHERTY QUIZ DELVES DEEPER

Antitrust Activities Are Under Inquiry

Testimony on Department's Acts Promised

Scaife Issues Challenge for Showdown

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—A busy staff of assistants spent today pushing the ever-widening circle in the Senate Daugherty committee still further out, even though the committee itself was not in session.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, committee prosecutor, promised that before the end of next week, witnesses would go on the stand to testify concerning the record of the Department of Justice in the matter of antitrust law enforcement. Monday will be devoted, however, according to present plans, to the taking of additional evidence bearing upon Indian land cases in Oklahoma and the enforcement of prohibition in New York.

ACTS EXAMINED

It was learned that the committee's agents have gone exhaustively into transactions by former Atty.-Gen. Daugherty touching upon antitrust decisions against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. No indication of what the committee expects to show in that situation has been given.

The scheduled transfer of the inquiry to Washington Court House, O., and the Midland National Bank, operated by M. S. Daugherty, the former Attorney-General's brother, will take place according to present plans, at the end of next week.

Senator Wheeler and Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, have been delegated to pursue the investigation there, while the committee holds in suspension a motion to cite M. S. Daugherty to the Senate for contempt in failure to open the records of the bank fully to the committee.

SEEKS SHOWDOWN

M. L. Scaife, former investigator for the Department of Justice, wrote a letter today to Chairman Brookhart, referring to recent statements made public by Guy D. Goff, former Assistant Attorney-General, and George W. Wickersham of New York, challenging testimony which he has given during three appearances before the committee. He suggested in the letter that the proper place for a showdown will be on the witness stand and not in "gratuitous statements issued at long range by ex-employees of the department under investigation."

He also suggested that both Mr. Wickersham and Mr. Goff be subpoenaed by the committee "to take the witness stand and be questioned as to the documents which have already been placed in the record" of its inquiry.

Pasadena Jewel Thieves Continue to Reap Harvest

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 5.—Another large gem robbery was committed in Pasadena at an early hour this morning, the police were advised. The home of John Lyon, 1315 South El Molino avenue was entered by thieves and approximately $3000 worth of jewelry was taken. This robbery closely follows the William R. Staats theft of $20,000 worth of diamonds. Both remain unsolved.

Entrance was gained in the Lyon home by forcing a side window. The entire Lyon family were asleep in the house at the time. The jewels consisting of nineteen strings of beads, gold watches, bracelets and bar pins, were taken from a steel wall compartment.

The entire Pasadena detective force is working on the few clews available at both robberies.

STATE ENGINEER OF ARIZONA OUT OF JOB

TEMPORARY HEAD IS PLACED IN CHARGE OF POST BY GOVERNOR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, April 5.—State Engineer Frank R. Goodman was succeeded in charge of the Highway Department today by W. W. Lane acting temporarily. Goodman is said to have been told when he appeared for duty this morning that his automobile must be surrendered.

Statement has been made that his resignation was on file in the Governor's office several months ago.

The special banking committee authorized by the last State Senate a year ago has presented a report to the Governor. It is said to deal especially with the manner in which State funds were deposited in the Central Bank of Phoenix and to furnish evidence for prosecution of several criminal cases that have been started against former bank and State officials.

OHIO BISHOP CALLED FOR TRIAL IN MAY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CLEVELAND, April 5.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown of Galion, O., has been summoned to appear before a court at Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, Cleveland, May 7. He was summoned on charges of "holding and teaching publicly and privately and advisedly, doctrine contrary to that held by the Episcopal Church.

MANY CALLED; FEW ANSWER

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH PASADENA, April 5.—Many were called but few answered in Police Court here today when Recorder G. R. Crump called the names of thirteen motorists charged with violation of city laws. Of the thirteen, only William L. Head of Pasadena and B. L. Setzer of Los Angeles responded to summons issued by police officers. They were fined $5 and $10, respectively.

DEBT EXPERTS' REPORT DUE

Reparations Commission May Get Text as Early as Monday; Editing is Difficult

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, April 5.—"Possibly Monday, probably Tuesday, in any case Wednesday at the latest" is the revised forecast for the submission to the Reparations Commission of the long-awaited report of the reparation experts committee.

The combined difficulties of editing the French and English texts so that they will mean the same thing, and not lend themselves to contrary interpretations, and the natural difficulty in facing the French national printing bureau in turning out letter perfect, foolproof English text, again has set back the members of the drafting committee, who are anxious to get away from Paris and seek a well-earned respite on the Riviera and in Italy, Corsica and even Elba.

The experts are determined that no such confusion shall arise over their report as arose in the case of the Versailles Treaty, as the French and English texts varied in several notable instances so as to permit widely divergent interpretations.

TO AWAIT OPINIONS

From the best authorities in reparation and diplomatic circles it is learned that the Reparations Commission will not be likely to hurry in discussing the report or framing recommendations to submit to the Allied governments, because it is desirous above all things of leaving plenty of time for the reaction of world opinion, particularly that of Berlin to reach Paris.

The commission then will after brief deliberation refer the text to the Allies for an attempt at final settlement. Therefore the next constructive forward move can hardly be expected before the end of the forthcoming week.

The French Foreign Office has reiterated its willingness to accept the report whole-heartedly as far as it has hitherto become known in its general outlines.

CONFERENCE LIKELY

The British are now inclined to believe that the French will desire a speedy summoning of the inter-Allied debts at the same time they will raise the question of the Inter-Allied debts at the same time as the reparations from Germany. Nevertheless, they voice the belief that France will not be entirely disappointed if the onus of rejecting a settlement is thrown on Germany.

The British readily admit that they do not consider the report, so far as its provisions have become known, to be perfect, but they concede that it is the best that can be done in the way of a compromise agreement and for that reason hope for the speeding up of the Inter-Allied conference project some time after the 15th inst.

Machinery Trouble Keeps Flyers at Seattle After Planes Take to Water for Next Lap

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SEATTLE, April 5.—Baffled by weather yesterday and by machinery today, Maj. Frederick L. Martin said that he may be able to decide tonight whether a squadron of the United States Army commanded by him on a flight around the earth will attempt to hop off from here before Monday.

Maj. Martin spent the day in intense work on his machine, the flag plane Seattle, trying desperately to repair a propeller and a pontoon in time to make tests and to go tomorrow morning at 6:30 o'clock.

Dark and lower, but not sufficiently so to keep the four aviators of the squadron from taking their seats to go to Prince Rupert at 6:30 this morning, the skies over the Puget Sound country became clear and sunny as the day advanced. High barometric readings were reported as an indication that conditions on the 650-mile course to Prince Rupert, which were considered to make flying feasible today, at least will not be any worse tomorrow.

As the planes skimmed over the choppy surface of Lake Washington after warming up, it was found that the motor of Maj. Martin's machine was making only 1500 revolutions a minute, where 1700 were necessary to lift the plane, loaded down with fuel.

Taxiing along in formation, the spray flung up by the pontoons of the flagship loosened a metal tip on the propeller and Maj. Martin ordered the planes to return to Sand Point. It was decided to remove the damaged propeller and while this was being done a wrench was dropped puncturing a pontoon.

Maj. Martin then gave orders to remove the plane from the water and install a new pontoon.

The propeller was sent to a Seattle airplane factory for repairs.

CUTTERS TO LEAVE

The United States Coast Guard cutter Haida is to leave Seattle at 10 a.m. tomorrow for Seward, Alaska, and other North Pacific ports to aid the American around-the-world flyers. From Seward, the cutter will sail westward.

At the same time the cutter Algonquin, headed by Lieutenant-Commander C. L. Gabbitt, will leave Astoria, Or., for Unalaska where the two vessels will meet.

Officials Have Bad Half-Hour in Old Launch

Drifting helplessly out to sea, while they sang "Asleep in the Deep," was the thrilling half-hour experience of six boarding officers yesterday afternoon, when they set out to inspect the Pacific Mail liner Venezuela, just arrived from New York.

The officials were all aboard the launch S. D. Brooks, recently brought round to this coast and rejuvenated for the United States Public Health Service, after forty years' service at Boston. One week ago she was given formal rededication by the breaking of bottles over her bow and by eloquent eulogies.

But yesterday she was equally eloquent in demonstrating that "she's a good boat for the shape she's in," when she parted her tail shaft, just as the officers were reaching for the companionway to go up the liner's side. For thirty minutes she floundered at the mercy of the waves, gradually gliding to sea, when a Red Stack tug espied Dr. G. T. Van Voorhees' improvised signal of distress and came to her rescue.

The officers were delivered to the companionway of the Venezuela and the launch escorted to the ship's hospital at the Los Angeles shipyards for an operation on the after spine.

One man is near death and three others were treated at the Lomita Hospital as the result of an explosion of a gasoline tank in the oil fields near Compton yesterday afternoon.

The injured are: A. J. Dugger of Lomita, severely burned about the body; E. J. Woods, Fullerton, foreman of the crew; L. S. Harret, Long Beach, and G. S. Christian, Fullerton. The injuries of the latter three were slight.

The men were employed by the Newton Process Company of Fullerton and were repairing a tank owned by the Union Oil Company. The cause of the explosion was not learned.

DUKE TITLE ON COFFIN OF ORLOW

Friends in New York Insist He Was Missing Austrian Nobleman

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Orlof N. Orlow, whose death brought to light persistent reports that he was the long missing Archduke Johann Salvator of Austria, was buried today.

A silver plate on the simple but rich coffin was inscribed with the titular name, which many persons, including Mrs. Charlotte Fairchild, society photographer, have contended was rightfully his.

Fewer than a score of mourners attended requiem high mass in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Rose of Lima. Huge bouquets were piled about the bier.

Frederick Cunliffe Owen, who knew the Archduke forty years ago in Vienna, expressed doubt that Orlow was that person. The nobleman was bald he pointed out, and would have been 73 this year. Orlow had a normal quantity of mixed gray hair. His age was given as 64 when he died Monday. Mrs. Fairchild insisted that the archduke's head was merely shaven in accordance with court custom and that the age he gave was a further attempt to hide his identity.

In the same undertaking establishment from which Orlow's body was taken to the church lay the body of Miss Grace Wakefield, Orlow's ward, who committed suicide after his death. Near her in a small white casket lay the bodies of her pet dog and parrot, drowned by their mistress. The body of Miss Wakefield will be cremated. The pets will be buried at Hartsdale, N. Y.

ARIZONA QUARANTINE RULINGS TIGHTENED

EAST-BOUND TRAFFIC TO BE FUMIGATED AT BORDER LINE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, April 5.—Travel into Arizona from the westward is to be discouraged hereafter. All travel will be turned back at the Blythe-Ehrenberg crossing of the Colorado River, Yuma and Topock having been named as the only points of entry.

Eastbound vehicles and contents at each of the two crossings are to be fumigated and the same treatment will be given rail passengers who may come from sections where the foot-and-mouth disease is known to exist. It is asserted that ranch hands and others who have been thrown out of work by the epidemic are pouring into Arizona, possibly bringing infection in their clothing. Eastbound dining cars must carry their refuse as far as the El Paso incinerating plant. These regulations, in addition to the present orders prohibiting entrance of any coast animal or agricultural products, were announced today at the capitol following a meeting of the State officials, members of the live stock boards and stockmen generally, and railroad officials.

Gov. Hunt forthwith issued a special proclamation setting aside an additional sum of $10,000 for use in the quarantine.

MAN AND WIFE HURT WHEN AUTOS COLLIDE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

Stizman, 1441 Poinsettia avenue, Los Angeles, suffered a twisted back and numerous bruises, and Mrs. Stizman was severely shaken up. Pablo Agear, 623 Sylvania street, Redlands, and a companion were thrown to the pavement, but neither was hurt. Both cars were badly damaged. Agear is being held in the City Jail on default of $100 bail on a complaint signed by Stizman charging reckless driving, failure to give a signal and operating an auto without a driver's license.

HOUSES IN RACE ON IMMIGRATION

Lower Body Speeds Action on Measure

Senate Also Has Pending Legislation

No Attacks on Exclusion of Japanese

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The House got off to a flying start today in its race with the Senate to pass immigration legislation.

The Johnson bill, which would fix immigration quotas at 2 per cent based on the 1890 census, was taken up under agreement to conclude debate Tuesday night. A vote on passage late next week was predicted.

For more than five hours the measure, which also provides for overseas examination of prospective immigrants and would practically bar Japanese from the United States, was alternately commended and criticised by more than a score of Representatives without show of partisanship.

Meanwhile the Senate, which had placed the House under a handicap by beginning consideration several days ago of another immigration measure, was in recess.

Both the Johnson bill and the measure pending in the Senate are designed to supplant the present restrictive immigration law, which expires June 30, next. The existing law provides 3 per cent quotas based on the 1910 census.

AUTHOR LEADS FIGHT

In the House, Chairman Johnson of the Immigration Committee, author of the bill, with Representative Raker, Democrat, California, led the fight for it, while two Democratic members of the Immigration Committee, Sabath, Illinois, and Dickstein, New York, directed a spirited assault on its quota provisions, which, they declared, would be discriminatory to Southern Europeans in favor of the northern and northwestern countries.

Several members urged exclusion of Japanese. No one attacked this feature of the bill and Mr. Sabath, while pointing out that he disapproved of the measure on its quota grounds, announced there was no division over this section in the committee.

Mr. Johnson told the House "it is the intention of the committee to present a bill for the establishment of a border patrol with authority to enforce immigration, customs, health, liquor, narcotic and other laws."

With this out of the way, he said, "We will be in a position to regulate immigration from Mexico and Canada, both of which countries are anxious that we should act."

PRESERVES TREATIES

In explaining the immigration measure, Mr. Johnson said it "preserves all of the treaties of the United States, including that with Japan . . . In my opinion, to give Japan a quota would result in a great deal more trouble than will the mere abrogation of the "gentlemen's agreement" which becomes quite necessary if this bill becomes a law."

Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas, declared that "we ought to exclude all immigrants for five years until we can assimilate all who are here."

Representative Andrew, Republican, Massachusetts, opposed the 1890 basis which, he stated, was not "based on reason, but on prejudice," and placed himself on record as opposed to any measure that "tends to divide the American people in better or worse classes, desirable or undesirable, depending on the particular part of the old world their ancesters came from."

LAUD ASIATIC BAN

Two members of the House from the Pacific Coast—Representative Watkins, Democrat, Oregon, and Representative MacLafferty, Republican, California—brought the Japanese immigration question to the fore, both warmly supporting provisions of the bill which would practically bar Asiatics from the United States.

"The sooner we begin to legislate along this line the better," said Watkins, commenting on the Asiatic exclusion provision.

Mr. MacLafferty, declaring that "we have a greater problem in immigration on the West Coast than exists on the East Coast," and continued:

"We have a nation whose desire it is by peaceful penetration to possess the Pacific Coast of North America. I am an admirer of the Japanese, but I admire them most in Japan and not on our Pacific Coast.

"Twenty-five or fifty years from today the Japanese on our Pacific Coast will hold the balance of power. This is your question and your interest. It should not be handled by treaty making through the State Department. The Japanese population on the Pacific Coast has greatly increased since the 'gentlemen's agreement.'"

Representative Free, Republican, California, remarked that "the State Department went out of its way to do something in the 'gentlemen's agreement' not sanctioned by law."

Representative Sabath brought out that there was no disagreement in the committee over the exclusion of Japanese.

Heater Blow-up Causes Blazes in Three Homes

The explosion of a gas heater yesterday afternoon in a frame residence at 2903 South Harvard Boulevard started a fire which caused about $5000 damage to this house and damaged two others near by.

The house at 2903 South Harvard Boulevard, which was nearly destroyed by the fire, was occupied by Mrs. E. M. Sobral and owned by Mrs. Nelle Tynan of 3017 East Eagle street. Sparks, blown by the wind, set fire to an adjacent house at 2907 South Harvard Boulevard, owned and occupied by Mrs. Sylvia Carpenter, causing about $1000 damage there. Slight damage was caused to a house across the street at 2822 South Harvard Boulevard, which was also set ablaze by sparks.

PEER OF MEDALISTS DEAD

Victor David Brenner, Creator of Lincoln Penny and Sculptor of Note, Succumbs in New York

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Victor David Brenner, ranking medalist of the country and a sculptor of distinction, best known perhaps, as the creator of the Lincoln penny, died today at the Montefiore Hospital after an illness of several months. When an immigrant lad he started work in an Essex-street shop as a die cutter and engraver of badges. Before his death, at the age of 53, he had won honors throughout the world for his craftsmanship.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Ann Reed Brenner, secretary of the Survey Associates, and three brothers and a sister. One of his brothers Michael, is a sculptor now living in Paris. Mr. Brenner, who was born in Russia, at the age of 13 learned seal cutting on the bench beside his father.

WITHOUT FUNDS

After six years of this apprenticeship he came to New York, entirely without funds and having no friends here. A tiny head of Beethoven used as pendant to a singing society badge, attracted attention to him and in a few years he was executing such commissions as the Cullum medal of the American Geographic Society, given to Nansen and Peary. In 1898 he abandoned this work, profitable as it was, to study at the Academie Julien in Paris under Louis Oscar Roty, the medalist. He did not return here until 1906 to establish himself as an artist.

Thereupon he devoted himself to studies of "the American type" making medallions of the heads of Hay, Emerson, Evarts, Huntington, Spencer, Trask and Lyman Abbott. In 1908 he was chosen to design the Panama medal. He designed, too, the aero club medallion bearing the heads of the Wright brothers, the John Fritz medal of the United Engineering Society, the Carl Schurz medal, among many others.

RECEIVED AWARDS

He received awards from the Paris exhibition and salon in 1900; Buffalo in 1901, and St. Louis in 1904. His works are to be found in the Paris mint, the Munich Glyptothek, the Vienna Numismatic Society, the Luxemburg Museum and in this city at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Numismatic Society. In 1923 he won the Saltus medal of the latter organization having previously been awarded medals from expositions in Paris, Brussels and San Francisco.

His interest in better coins attracted the attention of President Roosevelt, who assigned him to the task of making the Lincoln coin, the first of which was struck off in 1909. The first few coins bore the initials "V.D.B.," which caused considerable comment, the initials being removed from all later coins. Those bearing the initials are now rare. In 1917 he designed a figure symbolizing the early days of the Russian revolution.

His two favorite works were the bas relief portrait of Lincoln done for the Washington Irving High School and the portrait of Washington done for the Federal Court Building in Pittsburg. His last large commission was the Schenley Memorial Foundation in Schenley Park, Pittsburg.

HAVOC WROUGHT BY GALES

Windows Broken and Trees Uprooted in Southland; Highways Choked by Debris; Rain Falls

Atmospheric disturbances that ranged from high, blustering winds that played havoc with windows and trees, to freak rainstorms, visited Los Angeles and the surrounding country yesterday. Northeast winds swept the city and vicinity about noon yesterday, carrying gusts of sand that in the San Fernando Valley stopped traffic on some highways.

The force of the wind in the Eagle Rock district broke a number of windows in private residences. According to reports from San Bernardino high winds prevailing there uprooted several trees.

SAN BERNARDINO HIT

At San Bernardino a freak rain and wind storm swept the valley and during the early morning hours uprooted and damaged trees and interfered with telephone and electric service. A barn on the Keirt ranch near the city, which had withstood storms for forty years, was demolished and pieces of the structure carried more than 200 feet by the wind. Rain fell during the day, reaching its peak late in the afternoon.

A huge umbrella tree at the M. F. Poppett house, said to be the largest in San Bernardino, was uprooted and fell with a crash reported to have been heard several blocks away.

At San Fernando plate glass windows, overhead signs and ornamental light globes were damaged by the wind that swept from the mountains through the canyons, spreading over the valley. Many shade trees lost branches, but reports from the citrus groves indicated that little damage was done there. Along San Fernando Road a long line of telephone poles tumbled into the road, forcing travelers to detour.

GLENDALE SUFFERS

Violent gusts of wind at short intervals caused some damage at Glendale, breaking windows and uprooting trees and moved small buildings from their foundations. A few roofs suffered.

Rain to the extent of 1.04 inches fell in Brawley within twelve hours prior to 9 a.m. yesterday. The rain was general throughout the Imperial Valley. Snow fell in the adjacent mountains. Dirt roads were rendered impassable and trucking largely has been suspended. Lettuce, asparagus and strawberry picking is at a standstill in the valley which depends entirely on irrigation for its crops, making rain unwelcome.

In parts of Southern California the gale brought to an end the rain of the day before. Stations last night reporting from .02 to .13 of an inch were: San Bernardino, Redlands, San Diego, Beaumont, Glendora, Ontario and Yucaipa. There was a trace of rain locally.

Actors Help to Avert Panic in Burning Theater

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) April 5.—Fifteen hundred persons filed safely out of the Palace Theater, a vaudeville house, early tonight as smoke from a fire starting in the basement of the building filled the big auditorium.

When the fire was discovered all the actors on the bill swarmed on the stage and began singing "Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here" as the patrons filed out in perfect order.

PROGRAM AT OPENING OF NEW RANGER CLUB

An athletic program in conjunction with the opening of their new clubhouse was held yesterday by the Western Rangers, a juvenile organization. The program included a roping contest and was held at their new home, 4900 Pasadena avenue. The roping contest was won by Donald Cummings. The prize was a silver loving cup donated by William S. Hart, motion-picture actor. A flapjack contest proved the center of attraction and was participated in by many members. First prize went to Leonard Friedson; second prize, Earl Madray, and third prize, Joe DiGiorgio. Fred Burns, Carl Sharsmith, James Lynch and Paul Hunter served as judges. Members of the organization will start a campaign this week to secure $40,000 to complete the purchase of their new home. Harry C. James is the Chief Ranger.

GANG WORLD IS BOWED AT BIER OF IDOL

Gunmen Drop Weapons to Carry Flowers to Grave of Their Slain Leader

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, April 5.—The "boys" of Chicago's gang world who are accustomed to say it with guns today expressed their sentiments in more tender manner and staged one of the most elaborate funerals in Chicago's history for one of their fallen idols, Frank Caponi, shot in a pistol duel with half a dozen detectives as the aftermath of the recent election in Cicero.

The little house where the body lay became a tomb of Easter flowers early in the day as truckload after truckload of roses and lillies, tributes of "the gang" arrived. It was estimated that the flowers which overflowed the house and were stacked in towering heaps on the lawn and walks cost more than $20,000.

For two blocks in each direction from the cottage Caponi's friends stood in line, while those unable to gain access to the streets lined neighboring roofs and windows. In the funeral cortege were more than 200 limousines, some of carrying policemen and detectives who had clashed with Caponi and his gang many times in the past.

TWO WOMEN ARE ROBBED BY GUNMEN

Pair of Bandits Get Gems Worth $10,500; Landlady Walks Into Hold-up

Two well-dressed and armed bandits held up and robbed Mrs. Betty Straus and her landlady, Mrs. Kelley, who happened to come to Mrs. Straus's apartment at 1110 Ingraham street, during the course of the hold-up at 8:30 o'clock last night. The bandits escaped with $10,500 in jewelry taken from the two women.

The bandits, who were about 25 years of age, entered the apartment through an unlocked door and held their guns on Mrs. Straus, commanding her to deliver her jewelry. As she was in the act of complying, Mrs. Kelley stepped into the room and was immediately included in the bandits' orders to turn over valuables.

After taking two bracelets and three diamond rings from Mrs. Straus and a diamond ring from Mrs. Kelley, the bandits cautioned the women to make no outcry and not to leave the room for ten minutes. In the corridor they encountered Robert Lee, another tenant in the building whom they ordered back into his apartment with a flourish of their guns. The gunmen were seen to climb into a large touring car in the front of the building and head for the downtown district. Officers Elsner and Wilson were assigned to the case.

CAFE MAN ARRESTED

George Atwood Held on Charge of Violating Wright Act

George Atwood, owner of the Peacock Grill at Venice and one of the best-known cafe operators on the Pacific Coast, was arrested yesterday by George Contreras, head of the District Attorney's office dry squad, on a charge of violating the Wright Act. Contreras stated he found thirty-six pints of liquor in the cafe owner's car. Atwood was placed in the County Jail under $2500 bail.

Some of the Stars Who Glimmered in the Conference Meet

At the top, Phil Buckman of Oxy (extreme left) is shown in the act of breaking the tape in the 220, in which he equaled the conference record of 22s. Lownes of Caltech is on Buckman's left, Frankhouse of Pomona, who placed third, is next to Lownes, and Argue of Occidental, second-place winner, at the right. Below at the left, Montgomery, Oxy darkhorse, is seen winning the 880 in excellent time. In the center Graham of Caltech is shown making his winning jump in the pole vault, while Maxwell of Pomona, clearing the hurdle, is exhibited at the right. Nick Carter is winning his customary first place in the mile in the interests of Occidental below. Photos by David Mann, Times staff photographer.

FOUR-MAN MILE RELAY RECORD IS SHATTERED

Pomona Takes Second Place and Southern Branch Third; Graham Wins Vault

BY PAUL LOWRY

Occidental's wonderful one-mile relay team, uncorking a wild burst of speed in the baton-passing event, set a new conference record of 3m. 23 2-10s. in the wind-up of the annual Southern California conference track and field meet at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon, which was won by Occidental with a total of 68 points. Pomona finished second by scoring 56 points, while the local University of California picked up 10 points, Caltek, 6, and Redlands, 4.

The meet did not hinge on the winning of the relay as many had predicted after the close dual meet between Occidental and Pomona two weeks ago, but that did not subdue the ambitions of the Tiger runners, and they went out and literally burned up the track. The time is the fastest made on the Coast by any college team this year, and compares favorably with the varsity record of 3m. 22s. made by Leahy, Isenhouer, Wilson and Schiller of U.S.C. in 1922. The Coast record, made by Hughes, Johnson, Shaw and Martz of U.S.C. in the relay carnival last year, is 3m. 21 2-5s. This is not a varsity mark, as Shaw was a freshman at the Trojan institution.

PHENOMENAL

Buckman, Spangler, Morey and Powers, running in the order named, composed the fleet-footed aggregation that carried the Orange and Black colors to victory yesterday. Both Buckman and Spangler were clocked in 50 2-10s. for their circuits, the half-way mark being reached in 1m. 40 4-10s. and Morey and Powers, so far in the van of their opponents that they had no competition, completed the last half-mile in 1m. 43s. The average for each runner was 50 8-10s., nothing sort of phenomenal for a team from an institution as small as Occidental.

Another conference record was equaled when Buckman of Occidental reeled off the furlong in 22s. flat, beating his teammate, Argue, who had been counted on to win both the 100 and 220 by staying out of the field events. Argue captured the century in 10s. flat, though Buckman was so close that many believed he would have beaten Argue had he not been set back for jumping the gun. The sprinters had a tough time of it in both the heats and finals of the 100-yard dash, Argue and Nash being set back in the heat which Argue won in 10s. flat., and Buckman getting it in the neck in the final. The waits for the gun seemed interminable to the cash customers, and it must have been even worse for the runners, set nervously on their marks.

Occidental's outstanding superiority in the track events was largely responsible for the Eagle Rock institution's big margin of victory. The Tiger runners did more that was expected of them and scored 42 points to Pomona's 29 in the running races. In the field the Sagehens had slightly the better of things, tallying 24 points to Occidental's 21.

SOME UPSETS

The fact that the Caltek weightmen failed to come through and gobble up a flock of points that Occidental scored in the Oxy-Pomona dual meet hurt the chances of Nixon's team, but it was really the Tiger runners that spilled the beans. They swept the field in the 100-yard dash and grabbed first and second places in both the half-mile and 220-yard dash.

Undoubtedly the biggest surprise

LUIS FIRPO KNOCKS OUT AL REICH IN FIRST ROUND

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BUENOS AIRES, April 5.—Luis Firpo knocked out Al Reich tonight in the first round.

The end came in one minute, 45 seconds, Firpo landing a terrific right to the jaw. Reich dropped to the canvas with a crash and remained there. He rolled over on his face.

After the count of ten he rolled over again in an attempt to rise, but fell flat on his back. He was picked up and carried to his corner.

The weights of the men as announced were: Firpo, 220 pounds; Reich, 213 1-2 pounds.

Firpo fulfilled his promise to win what he called his last fight quickly. He rushed furiously at Reich when the gong sounded, landing a heavy right to the body.

Reich clinched, but a moment later Firpo landed another right and Reich replied with a left to the face.

The men clinched. When they broke away Firpo came back with another furious attack. He sent his terrific right to the jaw, which terminated Reich's hopes for a championship.

HUNTINGTON BEACH WINS

Oilers Pile Up Imposing Total in Orange League Track Meet; Preston Second, Orange Third

Coach "Feet" Walker's Huntington Beach tracksters literally ran away with the score in the Orange League meet, held at Huntington Beach yesterday. The beach outfit by scoring a total of 91 points, the highest ever scored by an one team in an Orange League meet, acquired first place with ease. Preston came next with 22½ points, Orange took third with 13 points, Anaheim fourth with 10½, Capistrano fifth with 6 and Garden Grove was left in the cellar with a blank score. Huntington Beach was heavily favored in nearly every event, making a clean sweep in the broad jump and capturing first places in all events except the half-mile and mile, while they tied for first honors in the high jump.

Nichols's performance was par excellence, besides hanging up a new Orange League record of 15 6-10s in the high hurdles he gathered a total of 23 3-4 points for high point honors, almost two more than Preston gathered to secure second place in the meet. Elliot of Huntington Beach was close on Nichols's heels as high-point man with a total of 20 points, for first in the broad jump, first in the shot, first in the 220 and first in the century dash.

Nash for Huntington Beach could have made better time in the quarter-mile, but instructions were mixed and the time of 54 1-10s is not as good as he has done. Weakly of Orange was close on his heels. Jimenez of Preston beat out Aussing of Huntington Beach in 4m. 55s for the mile. Richards in the high jump cleared the bar at 5ft. 10 1-4in. for the winning leap, which is very good for prep competition.

880-yard run—Lenz (A.) first, Jimenez (P.) second, Aussing (H.) third, Lewis (H.) fourth. Time, 2m. 11s.

100-yard dash—Elliot (H.) first, Nash (H.) second, Weakley (O.) third, Condgon (C.) fourth. Time, 10 2-10s.

440-yard run—Nash (H.) first, Weakley (O.) second, Sauers (P.) third, Lenz (A.) fourth. Time, 54 2-10s.

220-yard dash—Elliot (H.) first, Condgon (C.) second, Watson (O.) third, Bay (H.) fourth. Time, 23 2-10s.

High jump—Richards (H.) and Gilchrist (H.) tied for first, Reese (A.) fourth. Height, 5ft. 10¼in.

Discus throw—Bradbury (H.) first, Nash (H.) second, MacHenry (C.) third, Brubaker (O.) fourth. Distance, 112ft. 2½in.

Shot put—Elliot (H.) first, Bradbury (H.) second, Brubaker (O.) third, Brant (P.) fourth. Distance, 41ft. 3½in.

Broad jump—Elliot (H.) first, Nichols (H.) second, Gilchrist (H.) third, Nash (H.) fourth. Distance, 21ft. 3½in.

CAMBRIDGE CREW WINS OVER OXFORD IN THRILLING RACE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PUTNEY (Eng.) April 5.—Pulling their oars in splendid unison, Cambridge's crew of youngsters won a brilliant victory in the annual boat race on the Thames this afternoon over an Oxford shell filled with men more experienced and heavier, but bereft for a few priceless minutes of the capacity for finished teamwork.

Oxford, stroked by the American oarsman, W. P. Mellen, hero of last year's race, was a 3-to-1 favorite and was conceded the victory beforehand by every critic writing for the British press. What brought about their defeat and the dumbfounding of the "experts" was another example of the triumph of teamwork over the ill-co-ordinated efforts of better men.

Richards and Hunter Annex Tennis Titles

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Vincent Richards was compelled to play 108 games today to retain the national singles indoor tennis championship and a half-interest with Francis T. Hunter in the doubles championship. The youthful star's triumph in the singles over Hunter, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, was his third title victory and gave him permanent possession of the singles trophy he won in 1919 and 1920.

Richards and Hunter defeated S. Howard Voshell and Frank T. Anderson for the doubles title, 6-3, 17-15, 3-6, 6-3. The second set established a game record for indoor doubles competition. It was the second consecutive year that Richards defeated Hunter for the singles championship and that Richards and Hunter triumphed over Anderson and Voshell in the doubles.

Minor Outfit Wallops Ball and Nabs Tilt

The Minor Building Company baseball nine grabbed a 9-to-6 victory Saturday from the Harper-Reynolds nine at Hazard Playgrounds. The Building nine cinched the game when they bunched five runs in the fourth inning. The Reynolds team scored two in the seventh and two in the eighth, but they could not overcome the lead when the Minor squad scored three more in the eighth and ninth frames. Bob Johnson was the star in the outfield, while Bruno and Kennedy smacked out home runs.

OXY ANNEXES TRACK GLORY

of the day was the sensational half-mile win turned in by Kenneth Montgomery of Occidental. He finished third to Ellsworth and Stroud in the dual meet, but yesterday he came into his own, and won a thrilling race in 2m. 9 4-10s. The new Tiger star let Ellsworth do the pace-setting for a lap and a half when he sprinted past Stroud of Pomona and breasted Ellsworth. They ran this way to the last turn when Montgomery lit out with a beautiful sprint and beat Ellsworth to the tape by three yards. Stroud tired badly and was beaten by Drake of the U. of C. for third.

Pomona came back with 9 points in the low hurdles, and the points stood 43 for Occidental to 40 for Pomona. But when Ridderhof won the discus and no Pomona man placed the tide set in inexorably against the Sagehens and the Tigers were never headed from then on. Pomona sympathizers believe that their chances would have been better had Maxwell stayed out of the low hurdles to run the 220, inasmuch as Pomona had two other places cinched. But it is very doubtful if he would have beaten Buckman yesterday despite the fact that he led both Buckman and Argue to the tape at Claremont Buckman was well nigh unbeatable, and was at least four yards ahead of Argue at the tape, wherefore Pomona's score wouldn't have been helped more than a couple of points with Maxwell running.

Pomona opened the meet auspiciously with Merritt grabbing first in the hammer much to everybody's surprise. Moyse of Caltech hurled the iron ball over 135 feet, but he couldn't keep his tootsies in the ring, and Coach Stanton's protege didn't get his name in the point column.

The first track event found Carter of Occidental running a whale of a mile with a pace setter that stretched him into a 59s. quarter and 2m. 10s. half., but the going was pretty fast and with no competition to speak of the Tiger distance man had to be content with 4m. 28 8-10s., while Bill Himrod of Pomona sat in the grand stand and smiled at the recollection of the day when he ran that famous 4m. 26 4-5s. in the conference meet about thirty years ago. Rojas of Pomona finished second about fifty yards in the rear with Wheeler of Occidental third.

One of the biggest upsets of the several dope reversals was Bradshaw's victory in the high jump for Occidental at 5ft., 9 5-8in. Hamilton of Pomona has been jumping over six feet all year, but he took third and his team-mate, Hill, second. Pomona had confidently counted on 8 points in this event.

Big Tarzan Ridderhof, with a first in the discus, second in the hammer throw and javelin, was high-point man of the day with 11 points. Maxwell, who was the only double first place winner, was Pomona's high man with 6 points.

Harry Trotter's boys, Giles and Richardson, almost hogged the shotput, taking first and third places, for 6 of the University of California's total of 10 points. Giles shoved the ball out 42ft., 1in.

REPETITION

The quarter mile resulted just the way it did at Claremont—Powers first, Gardner second and Morey third. But the time was much faster faster, 50 2-10s., and Gardner had a tougher job winning his place. The Pomona skipper clipped into a bad box, and if it hadn't been for the fact that an obliging Caltech runner eased over from the pole, Gardner would have been lucky to get in third. He finished about four yards behind long-legged Powers.

Graham won Catech's only first place when he beat Goodenough of Occidental in the pole vault. The terrible duel that had been expected when these joint holders of the conference record of 12ft., 5 3-4in., in the pole vault met, petered out when Goodenough failed at 12ft., 5 1-4in. Graham cleared this height easily, but failed later in special trials at 13ft.

Caltech's relay runners gave Pomona a neck-and-neck battle for second place, Gardner just getting the judge's eyes by a scant foot.

Frisbie regained his jumping eye and with Ague sitting on the sidelines presented Pomona with 5 points, leaping 22ft., 5in. Eaton lived up to the dope and proved himself the best of our conference spear heavers with a mark of 165ft., 5in.

PICK TEAM TO MEET STANFORD

All-Conference Track Squad to Face Cardinals

Local Aggregation Departs Thursday Night

Have Good Chance to Repeat Win of Last Year

BY BRAVEN DYER

Twenty-nine athletes, two coaches, one manager and a high-powered trainer will leave here next Thursday night bound for Palo Alto where the above-mentioned persons will do their utmost to make Coach Dink Templeton's highly touted Stanford University track team bow to the best that the Southern California Intercollegiate Conference can produce. The meet is carded for Saturday afternoon and from all advance notices the event promises to be the premier classic of the season from the standpoint of spectacular races and sensational records.

Coaches Joe Pipal and Eugene Nixon, mentors of the Occidental and Pomona squads respectively, will be in charge of the local contingent, with Graduate Manager Fred McLain of the Eagle Rock institution attending to such business duties as securing the proper berths and seeing that all of the athletes are in bed at a proper hour. Pete Poole, who ministers to the Tiger runners in a particularly efficient manner will do his utmost to have the local stars in the best physical shape possible.

ALL OXY AND POMONA

Occidental places thirteen men on the team and Pomona exactly the same number. The other institutions, Redlands, Caltech and the local University of California, are each sending one man. Drake, Grizzly half-miler, will act as alternate in case any of the first-choice men can't go.

Oxy's representatives will be Nick Carter, Dave Ridderhoff, Cliff Argue, Phil Buckman, Johnny Powers, Bradshaw, Lavelle, Montgomery, Phil Ellsworth, LeRoy Goodenough, Tony Spangler, Herb Morey and Bud Nash. Pomona contributes Charles Rojas, Earl Merritt, Bob Maxwell, Dan Milliken, Roland Clark, Milton Gardner, Mason Hill, Frank Hamilton, Bill Snyder, Homer Frisbie, Chuck Eaton, Ron Walker and Paul Jones. Giles will be the Grizzly entry, with Glenn Graham going from Caltech and Ball from Redlands.

This group of athletes is undoubtedly the strongest combination that has ever represented the Southern Conference and it looks as if Stanford would be defeated, the outcome of the meet probably depending on the relay.

CARTER MEETS KERR

Nick Carter, who turned in a sensational mile at the Coliseum yesterday, is being touted to take the measure of the redoubtable Bill Kerr. Rojas will be Carter's aid. The locals will be lucky to get any points out of the two-mile as Charles, Kerr and Hayes are all splendid runners, but Bill Snyder and Lavelle will make a good try at it anyway.

With Maxwell, Milliken and Walker in the hurdles the all-conference crew should score heavily against the Cardinals. Maxwell is undoubtedly too fast for Leistner in both the highs and lows while Milliken may come through with a third.

Graham and Goodenough should place one-two in the pole vault, while Aamilton, if he regains his form, can trim Anderson and Kemitzer. Eaton is a pretty sure bet to cop the javelin, with either Ridderhoff or Jones a third-place possibility.

Hale and Campbell will have to look to their laurels in the sprints for Argue and Buckman have been showing splendid form of late. The Cardinals look best in the 440-yard dash, even though Powers, Morey, Gardner and Spangler will be on hand to run for the locals.

Last year the all-conference team scored a 74-66 victory over the Cardinals, the relay being the deciding event.

The Pacific Coast will invade the East in quest of the junior national polo championship. The team will be recruited from the stellar performers in preliminary matches played until April 15, the date of the Pacific Coast championship tournament.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER, W.M.H.

The freshman meet of the Southern California Conference colleges which wound up in a tie between Occidental and Pomona pea-greens with 48 1-4 points apiece last Friday, gives an opportunity to do some warm figuring on the prospects of the varsities for next season. Apparently Caltech isn't going to be very greatly assisted by the present freshman class but Southern Branch will pick up several useful young men while the Sagehens and Tigers will be greatly assisted.

Southern Branch showed a couple of pole vaulters capable of 11 ft. 6 in. or better, a miler capable of somewhere near 4.40 and a two-miler who should be proportionately better in view of the fact that he ran a very strong second in a fast mile. The Branch discus thrower was apparently the class of the meet, also, except for the fact that his feet wouldn't behave. He threw the platter 120 feet but stepped out and was five feet short of that mark with his best legal throw.

Pomona will bolster up a couple of weak spots with Rentchler and has a lot of other good men besides. Rentchler apparently is capable of a mile in 4:35 right now and has plenty of strength to run a good half on top of a fast mile. Turner won't materially assist the Sage Hens in anything but the high jump as they have plenty of hurdlers out there now, but he is capable of developing into a star in either the high jump or the high hurdles.

Graf, a freshman sprinter, shows a lot of possibility, particularly in the furlong, while Pomona's notorious weakness in the quarter will apparently be somewhat alleviated by Edinger, who looks like a good comer. The Sagehens showed a discus thrower capable of close to 120 feet, which will help a whole lot next year. Except for Rentchler, however, Pomona does get such startling help, as the other good freshmen are good in events in which the Sagehens will be strong anyway.

Occidental, despite a tie for first, doesn't pick up anything much in the way of real stars, but the Tigers's pea-greens are full of possibilities. Shaver and Tanner, the hurdlers, only need a little good hard training to become top-notchers and will bolster up this sadly deficient place in the Tiger line-up. Gregg and Broadhead will be a big help in the sprints and Purser, Kelso and Bailey will help in the middle distances. Bierer is a broad-jump prospect, Fontaine is a good pole-vaulter and Conde, who didn't compete yesterday, is a good discus man.

Occidental is going to need the help a good deal more than Pomona is, for the Tigers lose a whole raft of their star track men this summer by graduation while the Sagehens drop almost nobody. It looks a good deal as though the Tigers would have to do a whole lot of hard work to stave off a first-class black eye at the hands of the Pomona men next year.

Incidentally Friday's meet showed the need for closer co-operation among the coaches of the Conference. The meet almost broke up in a riot due to an argument as to what events were to be held. The Pomona and Occidental coaching staffs claimed that it had been agreed to run the meet off exactly as it was run off last year. Coach Stanton of Caltech wanted the javelin throw included and Harry Trotter of Southern Branch was strong for the two-mile.

Inasmuch as Occidental and Pomona stuck together they had their way about it but Coach Stanton hit the nail on the head when he said that the Conference freshmen should compete with the same schedule of events as the regular Conference meet. He doesn't see any good reason for sticking to the high-school events when you are trying to prepare your men for college meets in the following year.

The reason, of course, is that the Conference with its customary near-sightedness, doesn't allow the freshmen to compete with one another except in this one meet and therefore the freshmen have to tackle the high-school teams in order to get competition. Naturally they have to run off the high-school events. The Conference authorities had better get busy and settle these things to better advantage or one of these coaches will be sticking another one in the gizzard with a javelin during the course of a gentle argument.

YANKEE SOCCERITES TAKE ON SCOTTISH

Soccer teams representing America and Scotland will clash today at Tournament Park in a semi-playoff for the international soccer championship. Last Sunday the two teams played a scoreless game and the tilt today should be a battle from start to finish. The match which is held under the auspices of the Pasadena Soccer Club will determine which team will meet Scandinavia in the finals for the international soccer cup, which will probably be played on April 13.

GOLFING HISTORY REPEATED

Vance and McArthur Again Meet for Southwestern Title at Chandler

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHANDLER (Ariz.) April 5.—History repeated itself today when the 1923 finalists, Dr. James Vance of El Paso, and Charles McArthur of Phoenix came through to the final round and will play for the championship tomorrow in the tenth annual Southwestern Golf Association tournament. Dr. Vance, the present champion, had a hard day of it but he managed to stave off two youngsters who tried to pull his inimitable soft hat over his eyes and push him into an irrigation ditch.

Louis C. Curry, Arizona State champion, went out to Vance one up in nineteen holes after being four up with four to play. He needed only to halve one hole to win but could not. Johnny Ames, son of Snake Ames of Princeton fame took up the cudgels dropped by Curry but he too, failed. Vance beat him six and five.

McArthur played the finest game of his career. He had to go twenty holes to beat Dr. Frank Jordan of Chandler and even then had to shoot an eagle on the nineteenth and a birdie on the twentieth to win. His score for the twenty holes was 77. In the afternoon he took Dr. Kimb Bannister, a former champion, into camp six and five and was one under par when the match finished on the thirteenth green. If McArthur can continue this kind of golf he will stop Vance from taking his sixth title in ten years.

OPENING GAME TO BE ONLY EXHIBITION

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EXETER, April 5.—The regular baseball game between Porterville and Exeter scheduled for tomorrow, will be played as an exhibition game, but will have no place in the standing of the club in the Tulare County League. All league games were called off because of the foot-and-mouth disease, but the Visalia-Farmersville and Exeter-Porterville games were so widely advertised that decision was made to play only exhibition games.

SAN DIEGO HIGH CAPTURES MEET

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN DIEGO, April 5.—San Diego High School today won first honors in the Coast preparatory league's track and field meet here. Five other schools competed. The final scores were:

San Diego, 43; Santa Ana, 29; Long Beach, 23; Pasadena, 19; Fullerton, 15, and Whittier, 9.

Harry Smith of San Diego, who holds the interscholastic title for the pole vault, made an exhibition vault of 12ft. 9in. in an attempt to better his mark of 12ft. 11⅝in.

Heaver Wright Will Not Join Krug's Angels

News of the Angel's baseball camp, Washington Park, was not very encouraging yesterday afternoon. Business Manager Oscar Reichow gave it out that Pitcher Wright of Louisville would hardly report to the Angels this year, according to a letter received by him from the heaver yesterday. Wright asked to be placed on the voluntary retired list. He declared that his wife was in ill health and that he could not bring her way out to California; besides she has four children to take care of and must stay at home.

Wright also added that he was going to college to finish a medical course and would probably not be graduated for some time. He thought, however, that he might be able to make the California trip next season. The loss of Wright to the Angels is a bitter blow.

Upon the receipt of Wright's letter, Reichow immediately got busy and wired three major-league clubs for pitchers. He is after a left and two right-handers and expects to land three good heavers before many days have passed.

Marty Krug's Seraphs went through their regular work yesterday afternoon at Washington Park. All the lads are in fine fettle and ready for "play ball."

Chadbourne's team defeated Hannah's regulars yesterday afternoon at Maier Park, 9 to 1. This makes the series now stand Chadbourne 8, Hannah 5. Bill Essick dropped his axe yesterday giving four of his heavers their outright release, viz—Keough, Oswald, File and Reppy. Only seven Tigers will be left here when the Bengals entrain for Sacramento this evening.

Business Manager Reichow of the Angels declared yesterday that there were plenty of reserved seats left in the grandstand. Th grandstand is unreserved and the sale of seats will be open to the public at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

SPEED DEMONS TO SEE MOROSCO PLAY

Wednesday night will be the date for the last local appearance of Tommy Milton, Jimmy Murphy, Harlan Fengler, Bennie Hill and all other Beverly Speedway stars, who are to be the guests of the Morosco Theater.

The board track speed demons are about to depart for the big races in Indianapolis, according to Captain Al Waddell, of the A.A.A., who declares that the comedy-drama, "Not So Fast," which is now at the Morosco is an ideal entertainment for the boys whose motto is always "Not Fast Enough."

Every bona fide sporting editor in Los Angeles is scheduled to take up the special theater box seats with the famous speed stars. Ralph De Palma, the smiling Italian driver from the Ascot Speedway has been included among the A.A.A. stars.

To play the 1924 baseball series teams in the National League will travel 88,830 miles. The Pirates will be the champion travelers of the league with 12,892 miles.

SKIPPERS WILL DOLL UP CRAFT

Local Yachting Season to Open Next Month

Admiral Soiland is Stirring Things Up Lively

Prize Cup to Owner Having Best Dressed Boat

Now that spring is here and the opening day of the yachting season for both the California Yacht Club and the Newport Harbor Yacht Club approaches, the various skippers are getting their sloops, yawls, schooners or auxiliery craft dolled up for the initial occasion.

G. Allen Hancock of Valera II fame looks for a bigger and better season than ever before and has several cruises mapped out for his sturdy, powered water palace.

The optimists of the lot of yachtmen, however, crop up in Commodores Cornish and Fenton of the California and Newport clubs, respectively, and B. H. Dyas, president of California Yacht Club. Dr. Albert Soiland, admiral of the Pacific Coast Yachting Association, the central body for all associations on the West Coast also looks for a successful season.

OPEN NEXT MONTH

Admiral Soiland for several weeks has been in diligent correspondence with officials of Coast yachting clubs relative to the season's activities. The opening days for both local clubs, Newport and California will take place next month.

The Admiral Soiland trophy cup will be up for the skipper at Newport this coming opening day who is accorded the greatest number of points for a dressed-up ship.

Another one of the optimistic yachtinmen is Admiral G. Benton Wilson of the Southern California Yachting Association. He has been planning with the officials of the San Diego Yacht Club to make the annual regatta to be held this summer the greatest success yet.

Each year since its inception, the Southern California Yachting Association's regatta has been a success, each season the affair being larger and having more ships attending that ever before.

Following is the schedule of today's games:

Kant-Skore Pistons at Huntington Park, Saturn and Alameda streets.

STAGE MATCH RACE TODAY

De Palma and Haugdahl Pull Off Duel on Ascot Speedway for Huge Purse

Ralph De Palma, perennial favorite with the auto racing fans, who meets Sig Haugdahl, noted Norwegian, in a three-heat match race at Ascot Speedway this afternoon, has a far more difficult task cut out for him than his admirers realize. With a track declared to be lightning fast, the chances of Haugdahl winning are far better than would be the case if a rough course caused the larger-powered car to bounce and lose traction.

Haugdahl will use a car which should show a speed of ten to fifteen miles an hour greater than the machine De Palma will pilot, the comparison being based on the time made by Tommy Milton at Dry Lake on Friday. Milton using a 183-inch car in a 122-inch chassis hurtled over Dry Lake more than ten miles an hour faster than he did later with a 122-inch motor in a chassis of that size.

SPEEDY JOB

The Miller eight-in-a-row which Haugdahl will use is a sister car, or as "Hug" prefers to call it, an improved duplicate of Milton's chariot. Both were produced by Master Motor-Builder Harry Miller. In racing circles Miller is generally credited with building into each subsequent racer a little more speed. As Haughahl's car is some weeks of less age than Milton's, having been turned out of the shop less than a week ago, the Norwegian believes he will have sufficient brute horse-power to make up for De Palma's better knowledge of the peculiarities of Ascot.

According to students of the speed game, De Palma has been supreme at Ascot because he has had a car which best suited the course, plus, of course, his great driving ability. Hangdahl's new mount is the first car to be entered at Bentel's oval which Harry Miller thinks is faster than Ralph's.

Today it will be a case of "do or die" with the Norwegian. He is through in California if he fails to lick De Palma or to put up a great battle against the Italian. For De Palma to be defeated by Haugdahl after the bitter rival stirred up, would be in the nature of a calamity. Thousands of Latins in the stand would be dealt a kayo jolt if their idol went down in defeat before the Nordic speed wizard.

Every precaution has been taken to prevent a fluke from spoiling the race. Both drivers will have reserve cars of great speed and power. Referee Charlie Keppen has instructed both drivers to be most careful keeping their mounts in good shape until the start of the race and have their reserve cars ready for instant substitutsen.

LARGE PURSE UP

The race is for a purse and side wager total of $25,000, with the $1000 Italian Colony trophy and a gob of accessory manufacturers' prizes added. All will go to the winner.

Ten events will be on today's card. Three of the races will be for motorbikes with Walker, Seymour, Hepburn, Weishaar, Davis and all the favorites of the two-wheel sport entered. Medals won by Walker and the runners up in the five-mile national championship race three weeks ago will be pinned on the drivers to whom they are awarded, by Olive Ann Alcorn, dancing beauty just before the start of the Bentel Helmet dash.

In the auto-racing events, Leon Duray, Fred Horey, Fred Lecklider, Fred Frame, Eddie Meyer, Babe Stapp, Art Davidson, Steve Elmore, Floyd Roberts and a big bunch of dare-devils will face starter Paul Derkum.

Following is a list of events, the first race starting at 2:30 o'clock:

Qualifying time trials.
Bentel Helmet Dash—One lap. Motorcycles.
Ascot Helmet Dash—One lap.
Invitational Handicap—10 laps.
Van Nuys Sweepstakes—Five laps. Motorcycles.
Three-heat match race between Ralph De Palma and Sig Haugdahl for the world's track championship. De Palma driving an eight-in-a-row 122-inch Miller. Haugdahl driving an eight-in-a-row 183-inch Miller. Purse, $15,000. Side wager of $5000 by backers of each driver. Italian Colony trophy, value $1000; winner to take all.
First heat, five laps.
Billy Lord Stakes, fifteen laps.
Second heat De Palma-Haugdahl match, five laps.
Flying circus side-car race five laps. Motorcycles.
Third heat (if necessary) De Palma-Haugdahl match, five laps.

K. of C. Nines to Play Third Round Today

The third round of the Knights of Columbus Baseball League will go off today with a bang. Glendale is heading the list with two games won and none lost. The Los Angeles team, who are next to the bottom of the list, will try to stage a comeback and chalk up a defeat against the Glendale nine when they meet on Wagner's Field at 1 p.m.

The fastest game of the day will probably be between Long Beach and Lancaster Heights, which takes place on Wagner's Field at 3 p.m. Both teams will be fighting to come out on top as their percentage stands about equal. Long Beach has won one and lost none, Lancaster has won one and lost one. Alhambra and Hollywood will complete the schedule in a game at the Loyola College diamond. Alhambra has lost both games played and they are doped to receive another defeat today as the Movie City nine have lost only one game.

DE PALMA NOT TO DRIVE IN BIG RACE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

INDIANAPOLIS, April 5.—Ralph De Palma will not drive in the twelfth annual 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30, it was announced tonight. He has been disqualified by the American Automobile Association, governing body of the gasoline sport for participating in unrecognized race meets on dirt tracks in California during the winter.

De Palma, known to racing fans as the 'hard luck' driver, because of his numerous mishaps, won the 1919 event and has participated in all the 500-mile contests here except in 1916, when he failed to enter within the prescribed time.

GRIZZLIES DROP GAME TO BEARS

Crip Toomey Pitches Mates to 4-to-3 Victory Over Local Club

The California baseball team had their hands full beating Coach Cozen's Grizzlies, 4-3 yesterday morning at Moore Field. The pitching of Toomey for the Bears was the feature of the game. Crip Toomey will not be ashamed of his brother's baseball pitching if he continues to heave them over like he did yesterday. Ten Grizzlies fanned the air.

The Grizzlies took the lead in the second when Vail opened the inning by a liner to left field, two errors by California enabled the Branch to squeeze over a run. The game continued to be a pitchers' battle until the fifth when Loynd, the husky Bear catcher, drove the ball over the short left-field fence for four bases, tieing the score. Toomey followed with a sharp single to center, Tait sacrificed. The Bears took the lead when Toomey scored on Rogers's boot.

The sixth gave California two more runs when Montgomery weakened, allowed three hits plus two errors, and Shield and King tallied. In the eighth the locals threatened to twist the Bear's tail by scoring two on singles by Montgomery and Amestoy, a walk and two fielder's choices. The run that would have tied it was nipped at the plate in a close play. With two down in the ninth the Grizzlies again threatened, but the runner was out at the plate. The California Varsity will clash Monday with U.S.C. at the Coliseum.

CHANCE READY FOR TRIP EAST

Will Join the White Sox in Windy City

Vet Declares He is Just Full of Ginger

Says He will Put Heart and Soul in His Work

BY EDWARD DOHERTY

Frank Chance, the Peerless Leader of the baseball world, intends to start for Chicago tomorrow, to start bossing the White Sox and whipping them into a first division team—perhaps even a pennant snatcher.

"Monday if possible," he said, "but most likely it will be Tuesday."

What's holding him here?

It may be said he's hanging on by his teeth, for he must go to a dentist twice a day. He must be drilled and crowned and capped and bridged.

KNOCKS FOULS

"That's all," he says mournfully. "It's the dentist's turn at bat, and I've got to wait until he's out. He says he should be through with me in a day or two—but say, they put seven strikes over on that baby and he's still standing at the plate—plate's good, eh?—and knocking out fouls.

"If I had had my way he'd have been through long ago; but he's got a few more wells he wants to sink. Yes, he's got a lot of nerve—he took nearly all mine, anyway."

The P. L. had expected to join the team in Chattanooga, but found it impossible. It was necessary to have "the old bicuspids" put in shape.

FEELS FINE

"I felt extremely fine after leaving the mountain camp at Snow Creek," Chance said. "I wanted to go right away. But then my teeth began to bother me, and I wrote Mr. Comiskey, and he told me by all means to have them attended to. And, take my word for it, they're getting attention all right."

Chance looks even better than he did a month ago when he was seen at the mountain camp. He appears to have lost a little weight, but it isn't off his shoulders. His color is good, his grip is strong.

"I feel full of pep," he says, "and honestly, I can hardly wait until I get back in the game again. Plans? No, I haven't any particular plans about managing the team—nothing new at least.

WON'T TAKE LONG

"As I said before, it won't take me long to learn which are the ball players. And those are the babies who will play ball. I'm going to put heart and soul into the work of making the Sox the finest team in the league. But, naturally I've got to have the right kind of men to do that.

"I'll be glad to get back to Chicago. Yes, I know the weather made me ill there last November, and that it will probably be a little raw and a lot wet there for sometime to come.

"But there's something about that town—well, every Chicagoan I meet says the same thing about it. You can't get away from Chicago without wanting to get back to it.

"Talking about baseball—I'll bet my dentist would make a great pitcher. He sure has a mean right wing!"

Sam Kahanamoku, younger son of the famous Hawaiian swimmer, and one of Honolulu's outstanding candidates, recently defeated Hawaii's best at 100 yards, free style, in 55 1-5s., and 220 yards, breast stroke, in 3m. 4 2-5s.

EAGLES AND IRVINE MIX ON DIAMOND

Pistons Meet Merchants in Another Star Bush League Ball Game

The feature games of today's independant baseball schedule will be between the crack Irvine nine and the Pasadena Eagles. This is the last week on independant play before the summer schedule, and both teams will be fighting to come out on top. Last week the Eagles were held to 5-to-5 tie by the Kant Skore Pistons, in a drawn-out fourteen-inning game. The Pasadena squad has two of the best twirlers in the league in the personages of Navothy and Hope, and it is not at all unlikely that they will pitch the Eagles to victory today.

Another corking good game will be between the Kant Skore Piston team and the Huntington Park Merchants. The Park nine nosed out the Ptomaine Tommy team last week in a game that developed into a pitchers' dual. It is not improbable that the game today will also develop into a battle between "Rosy" Gardens and the twirlers for the Huntington Park nine. Downey will come back fighting mad from the defeat they suffered last week at the hands of the Barry's Classy Hats squad and should take the Ptomaine Tommies for the count. The Fremont W. O. W. have been showing a lot of class lately and with Hays on the mound they will give Palomar the time of their life. Bob Johnson will have to have his El Monte team groomed and polished to perfection to take the victory from the Fraternal Brotherhood. Kirby is a hurler of rare ability, however, and should bring home the bacon for the El Monte squad.

HAVERS TRIMS BOBBY JONES

up, six of the eighteen holes being halved.

The Britisher took the nineteenth, four and five, and held Jones to halves for the next three holes.

FOUR UP

On the twenty-third Jones holed out in par five and took the hole when Havers missed a six-foot putt. Havers won the next two due to faulty niblick and mashie work on the part of the American champion. They halved the next two which made the English titleholder four up.

Jones won the next two holes, one with a birdie three. They halved the next three and from that point on the match was touch and go.

The climax came on the thirty-third when Havers got caught in three unsuccessful efforts to emerge from two traps at the green and finally conceded the hole to the Atlanta youth five and seven. That left Jones one down.

Despite his ill luck in landing a six-foot trap on the thirty-fourth, Jones recovered with a remarkable pitcher shot and placed his ball within three feet of the cup. With a chance to square the match then, he dubbed an easy putt and halved the hole with Havers in five.

The Englishman won the thirty-fifth hole and the match with a neat par four.

CITY MEET IS NEXT ON LIST

To Stage Affair on Coliseum Oval Saturday

Hollywood Favored to Grab Title This Year

Expect Record Crowd at Big Cinder Carnival

Of interest to people of the city outside of the respective student bodies of the contesting high schools will be the Los Angeles City High School championship track and field meet which is to be held next Saturday afternoon in the Los Angeles Coliseum. In past years there has been barely room to accommodate the students, but this year there is ample space to spare in the great bowl at Exposition Park and hundreds of alumni and others interested in a good track meet are expected to attend.

More than 15,000 persons are expected, and with nine schools entered one of the most successful meets in the history of the City League is anticipated. Approximately 325 athletes will compete, according to E. W. Oliver, vice-president of Los Angeles High, who is managing the meet.

In reality there will be two meets, for seven events have been arranged for Class C boys and an entirely separate score will be kept for the two divisions. Heats in both classes will be held in the Coliseum Wednesday afternoon at 3:30. At this same hour tomorrow the coaches will meet in Oliver's office to make drawings and complete other plans for these preliminaries.

Places in the finals will count 5, 3, 2, 1 and 1-2 in the open, and 5, 3, and 1 in the Class C, it is announced. Athletes placing first, second, third or fourth in the open, and first, second or third, will be eligible for the Southern California championships which are to be held in the Coliseum on April 26.

Hollywood is generally regarded as a heavy favorite in the open meet, while in Class C Lincoln seems to have an edge. Hollywood not only won the City, Southern California and State championships last year, but has won all dual meets this season as well and apparently has a team virtually as strong as the 1923 aggregation.

Rail Passenger Agent Stricken, Dying Suddenly

Cerebral hemorrhage is believed to have been the cause of the sudden death of M. C. Harris, 48 years of age, assistant general passenger agent of the Santa Fe Railroad, at his home at 1853 Gower street, late yesterday.

With Mr. Harris at the time he was stricken was his wife. He had not complained of illness and was apparently in good health until he suddenly crumpled to the floor, dying within a few minutes.

The body was removed to the Pierce Brothers undertaking establishment. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Mr. Harris came to Los Angeles twenty-five years ago. He was well known throughout railroad circles in the West, having entered the service as a youth.

These dresses are of imported checked ginghams made in Porto Rico, mostly by hand, some entirely so. Straight line styles with gathers at side of skirts, string belts, set-in sleeves and 4-inch hems. Values $5.50 to $7.50.

Collars and cuffs trim most of them—collars of plain white in boyish style, of all-over tucked voile with cuffs to match, of white finished with piping or lace. Most of these dresses are hand embroidered in colored silks—on pockets, collars, waists, sleeves, etc. Colors: white with blue, brown, green, black, or orange checks.

PLANS OF PEACE IN WIDE VARIETY

Views of Nineteen Will be Published in Book

All Ages Are Found Among Successful Schemers

Three Former College Heads Present Their Ideas

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Many different angles of approaching world peace are to be found in the nineteen plans, in addition to the winning one, to be published this week by the American Peace Award. Several different walks of life are represented among those whose ideas are to be set forth. There also is a great range in ages of the planners, the oldest among them being 90 years of age and the younger 23. The authors and their plans follows:

William S. Culbertson, vice-chairman of the United States Tariff Commission in Washington, stresses in his plan, which provides, among other things, for the adherence of the United States to the Permanent Court of International Justice and for provisional co-operation with the League of Nations, the value and necessity of conferences as a flexible method of co-operation with other nations, following American precedents. He also emphasizes the economic factors in international relations.

Mr. Culbertson was appointed by President Wilson in 1917 as one of the members of the original United States Tariff Commission, and in March, 1921, was reappointed by President Harding for a term of twelve years. He was technical adviser in charge of economic questions of the American Legation at the Conference of Limitation of Armament in 1921.

UNIVERSAL TREATY

Christian A. Herter, assistant to Secretary Herbert Hoover, proposes a world court dissociated from the League of Nations, notably in changing the method of electing the judges by having the judges hereafter elected by diplomatic representatives to The Hague of all nations, organized into an executive committee and committee of the whole. These representatives are to act as the council and assembly of the League now act under the existing court plan. His plan also includes a proposal for a universal treaty based on treaties for the advancement of peace already concluded.

Mr. Herter has held various posts which have given him opportunity to observe many phases of our international relations. He was a secretary to the American Commissioners at the Peace Conference at Paris. From September, 1919, to March, 1920, he was diplomatic secretary, Department of State.

Edwin Borchard, professor of international law at Yale University, in his plan offers suggestions for a nonpolitical association of nations with co-operation through an economic conference and international trade commission. Prof. Borchard was for some years law librarian of Congress and for a time assistant solicitor of the Department of State. He is counsel for the government of Peru in the Tacna-Arica arbitration and has served as counsel in other international cases. He has written extensively on legal subjects.

Simeon Strunsky of the editorial staff of the New York Times, proposes associate membership for the United States in the League of Nations. The writer conceives this policy to be in line with the Knox resolution of 1919, and with the Hitchcock amendment, which is really a restatement of a part of a peace resolution introduced by Senator Knox while the Treaty of Versailles was in the making.

ELIOT PROPOSAL

Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Cambridge, Mass., president emeritus of Harvard University, proposes an international conference acting through eleven committees, one of which would deal with reduction of armament on land, sea and air; other committees would deal with abolition of militarism, prompt arbitration of industrial and international disputes, hostile competition in production and distribution, etc., etc.

Ernest M. Brunckn, an attorney of Milwaukee, proposes, among other things, international regulation and supervision of international trade in raw materials, the exploitation of natural resources in backward countries and the investment of capital for such purposes. The functions of the supervising body are outlined and successive steps toward the realization of a proposed system of international control are suggested.

Brig.-Gen. John McAuley Palmer, formerly aid-de-camp of Gen. Pershing, U.S.A., Gatun, Canal Zone, proposes the Swiss system of military training as the best method of achieving peace among the nations. Gen. Palmer has served continuously in the United States Army since 1892; in Cuba and in China; as Governor, district of Lanao, Philippines; on the General Staff, 1919-1920.

Theodore Stanfield of New York, proposes an international criminal court to try the makers of aggressive war. Mr. Stanfield was former executive manager, treasurer and director of the American Metal Company, from which he retired in 1917. He is the author of a number of studies dealing with peace and international relations.

David Starr Jordan, author, educator, naturalist, and chancellor emeritus of Leland Stanford University, proposes among other suggestions the restoration of the Bureau of Conciliation in the Department of State. Dr. Jordan is a former president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and of the National Education Association. His scientific and other writings are well known.

Manley O. Hudson, professor in the law school of Harvard University, proposes further co-operation with the League of Nations. Prof. Hudson has been attached to the Department of State in several capacities. He was attached to the American commission to negotiate peace in Paris in 1919. At the Paris Peace Conference he was a member of several commissions. For the last three years he was returned to Geneva each summer as a member of the Secretariat of the League of Nations.

Ernest Joseph Howe, a graduate of the University of Denver, and at present a graduate student in Columbia, in his plan proposes free trade as the basis of international co-operation. Mr. Howe is a statistician of the Western Electric Company.

Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, bishop of the diocese of Western New York, in his plan proposes that the United States should accept the League of Nations as the existing machinery for the international co-operation or else devise better. Bishop Brent was chief of the chaplain service, G.H.Q., A.E.F. in France, 1918. He represented the United States on the committee on narcotics of the League in May, 1923, and again at the Assembly of the League in September.

Paul H. Arthur, a lawyer, graduate of the University of Missouri and the Harvard Law School, and veteran of the World War, proposes education for peace. His paper particularly raises the question whether it is not possible, without sacrificing in any sense national loyalties or national individuality, to educate men and women in a finer conception of nationalism. Mr. Arthur is a member of the bar of the State of New York.

FALSE THEORIES ATTACKED

J. Whitla Stinson of New York, lawyer and writer, expounds in his paper the basis upon which "an equal association of nations" must rest. It sets forth what the author calls "an American idea of a supreme fundamental law of men and nations." It attacks what the writer conceives to be certain false theories of internationalism now current.

David Atkins, mining engineer, of San Francisco, discusses the law of supply and demand as the determining factor in war and peace.

Gutzon Borglum of New York, sculptor, describes a world court with nonmilitant power to enforce its decrees by control of world trade through the water ways to the high seas.

Among the better known of Mr. Borglum's sculptural creations are the Mares of Diomedes, in the Metropolitan Museum, New York, the figures of the Apostles for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, and the colossal head of Lincoln in the Capitol at Washington. In 1918 Mr. Borglum was appointed by President Wilson special investigator into the causes of delay in sending airplanes to the army in France.

Samuel Peter Wilson of Chicago, a research chemist, proposes an organization of scientists for peace. This "technocracy" is to guarantee that the powers of science will be used for the prosecution of the peaceful arts only. Mr. Wilson was a chemist on explosives for the United States Navy and was later placed in charge of TNT production on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Wilson has also been an instructor and professor of chemistry at the Universities of California and Syracuse, and Wabash College.

Dr. M. Carey Thomas, president emeritus of Bryn Mawr College, proposes a "declaration of interdependence" by the United States for the purpose of outlawing war. The proposal would not, in the author's judgment, interfere with the League of Nations. "It specifically co-operates with and helps the League of Nations."

Dr. Nathan Isaacs of Cambridge, Mass., proposes that the United States can make its best contribution to the cause of international peace by abandoning the doctrine of the nonsuability of nations. His plan would not involve scrapping courts of arbitration and would not preclude a world court. It would mean that the ordinary courts of this and other countries would be used for adjudicating justiciable international questions.

FILMS GIVE HELP TO ORPHANS

Players Active in Home Society Drive

Mary Philbin "Tags" John Sainpolis

ITS first requests on the public for subscriptions in thirty years will be made Saturday by the Children's Home Society of California, which needs funds to carry on its work of placing orphans in homes. The society does not conduct an orphanage but gives temporary care to youngsters waiting adoption.

In its canvass the society will use a button made from a photograph on one of its wards. Miss Frances Reynolds of the society started the campaign at Universal City. After she had explained the work of the organization to Miss Mary Philbin, screen star, the latter not only bought a button but also became a canvasser and tagged John Sainpolis, also a screen player.

In the past year, a report by the society shows, 300 new children were taken under supervision, 232 were legally adopted, 253 were placed in homes and 1673 visits were made to the homes of foster-parents. The society had 643 old and new cases under supervision. Of the children cared for in the year 181 were less than 1 year of age, forty-six were more than 1 and less than 6, and fifty-two were more than 6 years of age.

The supervision of the society is carried on until the children are adopted legally or become self-supporting.

SALARY INCREASE FOR SUPERVISORS IS URGED

An increase in salary from $5000 to $8000 a year for each member of the Board of Supervisors was urged in a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The resolution stated that for the best interests of the community, the directors believed the Supervisors' salaries should be increased and urged that an amendment to the charter providing for the increase be placed on the ballot at the coming election.

STORE SERVICE IS CHECKED UP

KHJ Speaker Continues Talk on Better Business

Doubtful Advertised Goods Are Investigated

Merchants Co-operating to Build Confidence

The second installment of Mr. Miller's talks which have been broadcast from KHJ and appearing in these columns by demand of Radioland, now follows:

Last Sunday I promised you that later I would tell you something about how the Better Business Bureau helps the big retail stores to find the discrepancies that creep into their advertising.

Our great retail establishments in Los Angeles realize that without public confidence they can not hope to maintain a profitable business. And therefore they guard with jealous care the good will that has been built up over a period of many years.

In such big organizations mistakes are bound to occur and these must be found and corrected if the confidence of the public is to be retained.

TOO FANCY NAMES

When a woman finds that hosiery advertised as silk are nothing but wood fiber, and fabrics masquerading under such fancy names as Gloria Silk, Marvel Silk and Romaine Silk are just plain cotton, she is very apt to lose her confidence in the store that so advertised them.

This habit of dolling up a common cotton fabric with a highbrow name reminds me of a little verse I saw in the paper the other day which ran like this:

"There, little pussy cat, don't you cry
You'll be a sealskin when you die."

So many trade names have crept into modern merchandising that it has become difficult to tell from its store name whether a piece of fur has been harvested from a barnyard pet or a sea-going pachyderm.

So the stores that really value the good will of the public try to so advertise their goods that no one can be misled.

My office conducts a merchandise department, or shopping service, which checks up on store advertising every day.

AVERAGE VIEW TAKEN

The director of this service scans the papers each morning and cuts out any advertisements that may appear suspicious. These are then handed to our shoppers who call at the stores and in the guise of customers, satisfy themselves concerning the truthfulness or untruthfulness of the statements made.

Reports are then issued to the stores covering the matter, whether the salesperson was familiar with the advertising and the merchandise; whether the goods measured up to the advertisement; whether the service of the salesperson was satisfactory and whether the customer was accorded proper courtesy.

The stores have come to depend upon these reports to tell them whether their advertising and sales service is being kept up to the proper standard.

The women we use for this work are not experts but just women having ordinary knowledge of merchandise. We feel that experts would be too critical. We just try to give the store an idea of how the average customer views its advertising and general service.

During 1923 we furnished something over 2200 reports to the local stores covering these points.

CREATES CONFIDENCE

The aim of the Better Business Bureau is to create a condition in our city, as far as advertising is concerned, that will insure the confidence of every person who reads an advertisement.

I feel quite sure that after having heard how careful our large stores are to ferret out the mistakes in their advertising, your confidence in them will be greatly strengthened.

My office receives complaints from the public at large from persons who feel they have not received a square deal from an advertiser.

It is seldom that a complainant does not receive satisfaction, and when this does happen it invariably involves a small merchant who has not yet learned the value of building up good will.

There is no substitute for truth in advertising.

LOCAL FORT GIVEN GOOD HEALTH BILL

Inspector Says Sanitary Conditions Equal to Best in District

Sanitary conditions at Fort MacArthur are equal to those of any army post in the United States, according to Maj. Charles E. McBrayer, sanitary inspector of the Ninth Corps Area, who yesterday completed a sanitary and hygienic survey of the Coast defenses of Los Angeles. The local post is in an excellent sanitary condition throughout, declared Maj. McBrayer.

Maj. McBrayer, who is conducting a sanitary inspection of all posts in the Ninth Corps Area, made a special survey of Fort MacArthur, due to the fact that the post has been selected for the annual encampment and training period of the entire Coast Artillery Corps of the California National Guard, to be held here in July. The reservation is fully equipped and ideally situated to handle the State troops, according to Maj. McBrayer.

Dispatches are expected at Fort MacArthur today regarding the arrival tomorrow of Brig.-Gen. H. D. Todd, artillery chief of the Ninth Corps Area, who will conduct a two-day tactical inspection of the local coast defenses. A review in his honor will be held on the post parade ground either tomorrow or Tuesday, it was said.

After completing his survey of Fort MacArthur Gen. Todd will proceed to San Diego for an inspection of that port's defenses at Fort Rosecrans.

WATCH FOR NAVY THIEF KEPT HERE

Federal Agents Believe Lieut. Brown Will Return to His Wife

Despite reports that Lieut. Ervine R. Brown, Navy paymaster, who disappeared from his ship at New Orleans March 10, last, at the same time that $120,000 was discovered missing, has recently been seen in Ogden, Utah, and other mid-western points, Department of Justice agents here yesterday sought for clews of the missing man in Los Angeles.

Belief that the naval lieutenant was mentally unsound at the time he disappeared, a theory advanced by his young wife, who lives in Azusa, leads the Federal agents to believe that Brown will appear in Los Angeles, or in this vicinity, within a short time.

A check on hospitals and other places where Lieut. Brown may appear was rigidly kept by department agents last night. While approximately $75,000 of the missing funds have been returned by Mrs. Daisy Brown, the missing man's wife, it is believed that her husband still has on his person the remainder of the missing money. Reports that he had secreted the money in a safety deposit box were discounted by investigating officers.

No new clews to the whereabouts of the missing officer were in possession of Federal agents here yesterday, they stated, but they were firm in the belief that Brown, drawn by the attraction of his wife and family, would soon show up in Los Angeles.

No mention of the charge that Kane had absconded with some canteen funds was made in the message.

POWER BUREAU IS PASSING HAT

Pitiful Plea Promenaded to Get That $12,415.15

Wants Kind Voters to Dig in Pockets for Donation

Fearful of Appealing Case to Supreme Court

Now, they're passing the hat for the poor old Power Bureau!

Who will be the first noble, patriotic citizen of Los Angeles to come through with a contribution of $1000 toward paying the $12,415.15 which Superior Court Judge Edward I. Butler has ordered the Public Service Commissioners, and other city officials to restore, as individuals, to the City Treasury for the benefit of the Bureau itself and the taxpayers?

The municipal political ownership proponents plan now to secure, if possible, twelve $1000 donations from citizens and then Commissioner John R. Haynes, being a rich man, may make up himself the $415.15, so that the money can be replaced in the City Treasury and the whole disagreeable Mines case incident forgotten by the Power Bureau. And forgotten by the taxpayers? Hardly!

TERRIBLE JUDGE

Of course, the Power Bureau has gone through the motion of declaring that an appeal must at once be taken from the terrible, nefarious decision of Judge Butler, which held, strangely enough, that the Power Bureau is a public, nonpolitical institution and that for the commissioners to spend the power revenues for political propaganda is unlawful and illegal and against the public good and the interest of the taxpayers. Terrible Judge Butler!

While the Power Bureau talks much of taking appeals to the higher courts from Judge Butler's decision, the bureau according to reports current yesterday, fears a Supreme Court decision worse than the Kaiser would an order to take a walk down the streets of Paris.

For all of the arguments of Mr. Mines's attorneys—Carroll Allen and Hunsaker, Britt and Cosgrove—were based upon Supreme Court decisions, and these attorneys declare that there is not the slightest doubt that the Supreme Court would uphold Judge Butler.

Armed with a Supreme Court decision sustaining Judge Butler, those taxpayers, such as Mr. Mines, who are not fighting municipal ownership, but who are trying to make the Power Bureau a strictly, businesslike, efficient, economical, nonpolitical enterprise, can next move to secure a refund from the commissioners of the thousands of dollars spent by the bureau from power revenues for political lobbying trips to Washington, of "under cover" work in the Imperial Valley, of the $1500 a month donated to the "Boulder Dam Association" and of the donation of $75,000 to the United States Reclamation Service, without authority from the taxpayers.

Also, a Supreme Court decision will enable those who are opposing mismanagement of the Power Bureau to bring an action in the courts for the removal of the commissioners from office for having misspent and misappropriated the public funds for which they are trustees.

So the friends of the politically managed Power Bureau held a secret meeting Friday night and decided that an appeal to the Supreme Court from the Judge Butler decision was the last thing in the world they wanted, and that the next best move for them was to pose in the roles of martyrs, pass the hat around town and seek contributions from citizens to pay the $12,415.15 ordered restored to the City Treasury by Judge Butler. Wealthy Los Angeles citizens were tackled yesterday and each was asked to be one of twelve men to contribute $1000 each to pay the judgment secured on behalf of the taxpayers by Mr. Mines. The list of contributors was not made public last night, and so far as is known no contributions to the fund had been received.

NEW BRANCH BANKS WILL OPEN DOORS

Three Suburban Houses of Security Trust to be Launched Tomorrow

Three new suburban branches of the Security Trust & Savings Bank will be opened tomorrow. The three until recently were independent institutions but have been merged with the larger bank. They are the Beverly State Bank of Beverly Hills, the Citizens' Savings Bank of Inglewood and its branch at Hyde Park.

E. F. Consigny, former vice-president of the Beverly State Bank, has been appointed vice-president and manager of the Beverly Hills branch. He was one of the organizers of the Beverly State Bank. F. A. Zillgit, former president of the Citizen's Savings Bank, will be manager of the Inglewood branch. L. B. Zillgit has been chosen manager of the Hyde Park branch.

During the latter part of this month the First National Bank of Monrovia and the Monrovia Savings Bank will become a part of the Security Trust & Savings Bank. The merger, officials stated, has been delayed through the necessity of converting the First National Bank into a State institution. When the merger has been completed the Security Trust & Savings Bank will have thirty-nine branches in Southern California.

COMBINE IN FILMDOM IS COMPLETED

Exchange Departments of Metro and Goldwyn Are Merged

The first phase of the Metro-Goldwyn Picture Corporation merger has already been completed, according to dispatches received yesterday from New York.

The exchange departments of both companies have combined and Goldwyn's twenty-five distributing branches throughout the country are now under the control of the Metro Film Corporation. This gives Metro forty-nine distributing branches, including its own twenty-four.

Attorneys for both corporations have been in conference for some time and it is reported that the merger, which will bring the Goldwyn Company in its entirety under the control of Metro, will be finally completed in a short time.

From the Metro offices, however, came a statement that the only merger of the two companies is in the fact that the physical distribution of films and release of pictures of both companies will now be done solely by the Metro exchange.

Joseph Schenck, interviewed over the phone at New York last night, denied any connection with the merger. He referred the interviewer to Godsol, president of Goldwyn's. Mr. Godsol, however, refused to give out any information regarding the deal in its present stage.

ECONOMIC AND MARKET REVIEW

Trend of Business Appears to be Favorable

Rails Lead Advance; Oils Are Still Attractive

Bonds Firm and Upward; Local Stocks Active

BY HERBERT R. JACKSON
(Howard G. Rath Company)

While volume of transactions in securities showed no appreciable increase during the past week there took place a decided change in sentiment. Just what particular factor brought about the change it is difficult to state, but it has been noted of late that as prices of stocks declined, the floating supply declined correspondingly.

Selling of securities in recent weeks, accompanied by rather pessimistic utterances had the effect of unsettling the various markets, but obviously the selling movement could not continue indefinitely without stocks being oversold. Professional operators have apparently realized that they had "too much company" in selling and the inevitable turn has come. As to the duration and extent of the present rally, much will depend on news in the immediate future and the public interpretation of that news.

The general trend of business appears to be favorable. Few industries are suffering from overproduction. It is true that motor production this year is at the rate of about 30 per cent over 1923, which in turn was about 100 per cent over 1922, but no severe depression in the industry is anticipated. Contrary to general belief there has been no slackening of building activity. The builders are optimistic.

Retail sales are holding up very well and few merchandisers are overstocked. In fact, the liquid inventory of merchandisers and manufacturers accounts in some measure for the vast funds available for security investment.

RAILS LEAD ADVANCE

Following the turn in the market on Wednesday, railroad stocks led a spirited movement on Thursday, the most conspicuous issue being a California company, Southern Pacific. The 5-point gain of Southern Pacific was predicated on rumors of an advance in the dividend rate from $6 to $7, but no official expression of opinion verifies this.

Railroads as a group seem to be receiving belated recognition by investors. The property value behind a majority of issues is far in excess of current market prices. In the case of most dividend-paying roads, earnings are substantially in excess of dividend requirements. There is a large margin of safety which indicates practical certainty of dividend payments.

Numerous roads are earning far in excess of dividend requirements yet have deferred consideration of dividends. This is notably true of Wabash "A," St. Louis Southwestern common and St. Louis and San Francisco preferred. There was some disappointment at failure of Wabash directors to inaugurate dividends, but it might be well for traders and investors to recall that Southern Railway directors failed to act at several meetings before making the initial $1.25 declaration. One might very easily anticipate that Wabash will follow Southern Railway precedent throughout, even in arriving at potential market value.

OILS STILL ATTRACT

Oil stocks offer prospects for substantial appreciation in value over a reasonable period of time. In fact, oils and railroads appear to be the most inviting groups and a majority of industrial issues must suffer by comparison.

Production of oil shows no tendency to increase at this time. The seasonal demand for oil and gasoline is great and will increase for the next six months. The amount in storage will doubtless decline and consequently further advances in the prices of crude and refined products may be expected momentarily.

All seasoned California oil stocks and convertible bonds offer attractions. There has been little change in market values during recent weeks and present levels are considerably below the year's high. Before 1924 comes to a close previous high prices will probably be surpassed.

BONDS STRONG

The bond market continues firm and upward because of current monetary conditions. New issues are rapidly absorbed by investors and old issues are climbing in price. There is a marked difference of opinion as to the duration and extent of the current upward movement but, specialists agree that top prices are not yet in sight.

Local utility bonds, comparing favorably with most seasoned eastern issues are in strong demand. There has been considerable absorption of Edison, L. A. Gas and Southern California Gas issues. Associated Telephone 6s, of 1950, are in much smaller supply than a few weeks ago. Oil bonds have also had a notable gain in strength. The convertible feature of United Oil 7s for instance has made them popular with local investors. One statistician points out that a 10-point advance in United Oil Stock would make the bonds worth 130.

LOCAL STOCKS ACTIVE

Los Angeles Investment Company stock continued to be the leader in volume of shares changing hands on the local exchange. There has been no new development since the company leased 1000 acres of land to Standard Oil Company during the past week, and no basis of price change can be arrived at until oil operations are carried much further. Thus, it is reasonable to anticipate a trading market in this stock for the next few weeks or months.

Goodyear Textile advanced to 82 on filling of substantial buying orders but there have been no fundamental developments of importance. Utility stocks show little tendency to change in market value at the present time, but, on the local exchange this group shows promise exceeded only by oils and bank stocks. Current economic conditions are largely in favor of sound public utility stocks and bonds.

Local bank stocks, while practically unchanged in price quotations are in a stronger position due to particular conditions which are best summed up in Moody's Review of March 27. This states: "Bank stocks, according to general trade indications, seem to be in rather an attractive position. Instead of moving with either the stock market or the bond market, these stocks have a rule of their own. Their earning power depends mostly upon the movements of interest rates and of deposits. If general trade expands next fall, as it promises to do, interest rates should then move upward and deposits increase with a consequent enlargement of the earning power of these stocks. Hence it should be good investing or trading to pick up good bank stocks during the next two months in the expectation of higher prices later on."

These same economic conditions which are reflected in larger earning power and higher market prices for bank stocks also presage prosperity for conservative, well-managed finance companies. Pacific Finance common is in very small supply. Sun Finance is growing in popularity and a bid of $25 per share has failed to bring out any Whiting Finance common which, by the way, earned $4.70 in the past year after 8 per cent preferred dividends.

Indiana Plant to Have Coast Distribution

One of the results of Los Angeles's campaign for industrial expansion is the decision of the Steel Fabrication Corporation of Michigan City, Ind. to establish an assembling and distributing plant in this city. N. A. Leist, sales engineer of the Indiana concerns has been here arranging for the new industrial plant.

The California-Arizona-Nevada agency of the Michigan City concern, which manufactures "Stefco" ready built steel buildings, is the Steel Service Corporation, 506 Citizens National Bank Building, a newly incorporated company headed by Spencer B. Lane, president, and Robert R. Sehring, vice-president. This corporation, capitalized at $100,000, builds and erects steel industrial buildings.

By locating its Pacific Coast plant here, the Steel Fabricating Corporation figures to serve not only the Pacific Coast and Southwest, but is looking to develop through Los Angeles Port a Far East market for its products, according to Mr. Leist.

MAKE OUR OWN SHOES? WHY NOT?

Head of New Investment House Urges Industrial Expansion

S. F. Balentine, vice-president of the Guarantee Loan and Mortgage Company, with executive offices in Loew's State Building is another investment banker, who is thoroughly sold on the necessity of giving whole-hearted financial support to local industries looking toward expansion to meet the requirements of a fast-growing city and also to the interesting of capital and industries from other sections which will find in Southern California a splendid outlet for their products.

"We must not permit ourselves to become provincial," said Mr. Balentine yesterday, "and we should not be content to rest upon our laurels, fine though they are. The real future of Los Angeles resides in her industries; those we have and those which are to come, and the investor and business man with the vision and the courage to realize this fact is the one who will cash in a little later on.

"This city and its suburbs are ideally situated geographically, and climatically and from a labor and distribution viewpoint. We are as close to New York by water in the matter of freight rates as Cleveland, O., is by rail, and the great trade with the Orient and South America should pass through our harbor. Much of it will.

"At the present time I think a great opportunity is presented for the establishment here of a shoe manufacturing plant. There is none of importance west of St. Louis, and the home market, to say nothing of export possibilities, is almost limitless. There is a heavy import of hides from Australia and these are shipped East to be manufactured and then sent back to the Pacific Coast for distribution and export."

Mr. Balentine is president and general manager of Balentine & Co., also with offices in Loew's State Building. He has recently returned to Los Angeles, where he says he found a clientele of former financial associates and investors upon which he predicates a successful enterprise in a community which he declares the most forward-looking and impressively progressive in the country.

In addition to being fiscal agents for the Guarantee Loan and Mortgage Company, of which S. M. Hamilton is president, the Balentine company will specialize on junior issues of industrials together with listed stocks and bonds of the better class.

The Guarantee Loan and Mortgage Company will deal in first mortgages, first mortgage bonds, trust deeds subject to first mortgages, real estate contracts, personal property or chattel loans, including automobile sales with maximum loans kept well within the accepted margin of safety. The operations of this company will not be confined to Los Angeles, but will include the tributary country. Preferred and common shares are being offered on the basis of two shares of preferred to one of common, on the partial-payment plan.

ACTIVITIES ON HOME EXCHANGE

Spectacular Spurt of L.A.I. Feature of Week

Leaders in Oil Group Give Good Accounting

Utility Stocks in Demand; Mines Were Stronger

BY FRANK D. GARDNER

The past week's activities on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange developed trading throughout the general list at levels somewhat improved over the preceding week. Practically eclipsing the balance of the stocks, Los Angeles Investment, with a turnover of approximately 88,000 shares, again made a spectacular spurt and established a new high for the movement at $4.15, within 15 cents of its record price. The entire gain since the previous week—$1.02½—was not held and final transactions were around 3.90. Signing of the lease to the Standard Oil Company on additional acreage in the Baldwin Hills, through which the company receives a $500,000 cash bonus and an exceptionally favorable royalty arrangement, together with the declaration of a 4 per cent regular and 6 per cent extra dividend, provided the constructive influence which stimulated buying on a large scale. Considerable favorable comment resulted from the publication of details regarding the lease, which involves 1000 acres in addition to the 455-acre lease now under development. Payment of a 20 per cent royalty in oil and half the net profits of the operation of the lease is unusual and creates a real opportunity for profits should an oil field of large productivity be developed.

The substantial recovery in Globe Grain common from around 41 to 46½, attracted attention and Sun Finance and Investment, a comparatively new listing, slumped 20 points from 1.40 to 1.20. Showing an improvement of 2 points, Goodyear of California preferred moved up to 92½, while Goodyear Textile preferred lost a portion of its recent gain, and closed around 80.

OIL STOCKS

Leading stocks in the oil group gave a good account of themselves during the past week, gaining on the average, practically a point. Pacific registered the greatest advance from 50½ to 52½. From 61 to 62½, Standard Oil of California was up 1½ points, while General Petroleum, usually an active trader, exhibited only a slightly stronger tone at around 42½. Listed on the local exchange only this week, California Petroleum common advanced 1 point to a close of 25 1-4. Associated Oil rose 1½ points to 32, and Union Oil of California and Union Oil Associates were both slightly improved at 122½ and 55½, respectively.

Among the lower-priced oils, Mascot registered a 5-point gain to 1.10 and Republic Petroleum gained fractionally with sales at 4 cents. United States Royalties fluctuated within a narrow range and closed the week practically unchanged at 25½ cents. The first sale recorded in Holly Oil in many months was made at 4.50 and the stock closed strong around that figure.

PUBLIC UTILITY STOCKS

Despite the closing of transfer books for a 1.50 dividend, Southern California Gas preferred was in good demand at its former level 91 1-4. Los Angeles Gas preferred was unchanged around 90 3-4 and Southern California Edison 7 per cent preferred selling around 104 3-4, displayed a better tone. Edison common gained a half-point to 102 and Southern Counties Gas preferred fluctuated between 100½ and 99½. A firmer tendency developed in San Joaquin prior preferred with sales at 97 3-4 and 98 and the regular preferred maintained its former level in the neighborhood of 89 1-4.

BANK STOCKS

Very little change was noticeable in the bank-stock market this week. Citizens' National was in good demand at 300. Announcement on Friday of a regular dividend rate on the new capital stock of Citizens' of 16 per cent per annum, places the shares on a current yield basis of 5.33 per cent. First National displayed a strong tone around 376 and Security chaged hands at unchanged figures, 310.

MINING STOCKS

Tom Reed made a substantial recovery from its previous week's low of 30 and closed yesterday strong around 35. Although no dividend action was taken during the week due to lack of a quorum, United Eastern displayed strength at slightly improved levels. Telluride gained 1½ cents to 20, and Richmond Copper fluctuated narrowly between 13½ and 15 and closed at 14.

Metzler Takes Management of Loan Company

The United Mortgage & Loan Corporation will tomorrow move its offices from the Van Nuys Building to the quarters of Metzler & Co. of California, 727 South Spring street.

Irving S. Metzler, president of Metzler & Co. of California, which company has just assumed the management of the United Mortgage & Loan Corporation, having resources of over $1,000,000, in speaking of the duties of his company in this connection, said: "In taking over the active management of the United Mortgage & Loan Corporation, we shall act solely as operating managers. This is in no sense a merger or consolidation with Metzler & Co. of California. Our company specializes in first mortgage real estate bonds and will continue to do so. The United Mortgage & Loan Corporation specializes in building loans, representing first mortgages, which will enable our company to take care of the requirements of our customers who sometimes desire to diversify their holdings between first mortgage and real estate bonds. We find there is a very healthy demand for safe 7 per cent first mortgages, and it will be the endeavor of our organization to supply that demand. All mortgages offered by this company will be loans that it has purchased for its own account."

NEW CAPITAL FOR LOCAL INDUSTRIES

That additional capital is needed in Southern California for the expansion of local industries is evidenced by the expressed desire of many manufacturers to finance through the operating plan of the Standard Union Finance Corporation, according to Irwin Jordan, vice-president and general manager of the new company.

"The demand," he said, "has been greater than we anticipated when the company was first organized. Our capitalization may soon have to be increased to take care of the situation.

"Millions of dollars will be needed by the industrial concerns of Southern California within the next year for capital expenditures and more operating money. Our company will lend its aid through furnishing money on accounts receivable of reliable concerns."

BOND QUOTATIONS

...ER ISSUE SINKS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Heavy ... of American Agricultural Chemical 7½'s unsettled today's bond market, which developed marked irregularity after an early display of strength.

Selling pressure against the company's stocks, based on fears of ... and reports that ... earnings figures would show disappointing results than had been expected, was extended to the bonds. The 5 per cent issue yielded fractionally and the 7½'s ... more than 7 points, establishing a new 1924 price at 82 before recovering slightly at the close. Earlier in the year this issue sold as high as 101.

The best display of group strength was made on speculative railroad mortgages. Seaboard, International and Great Northern, Denver and Rio Grande and Hudson and Manhattan issues registered moderate gains.

Norfolk and Western convertible 6's were the individual feature, following a spurt in the stock with a 4-point advance. Profit taking wiped out recent recoveries in several railroad leins.

Offerings will be made next week of several small industrial and public utility issues, including $6,000,000 Remington Arms three-year 6 per cent notes at 98½ to yield over 6¾ per cent.

PRODUCE MARKET IN SAN FRANCISCO

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—Trading in all lines of fruits and vegetables was fairly active today. Liberal supplies of bananas have resulted in lower prices on the local market. A considerable shipment of apples from the Northwest has just reached this market by water. Receipts of strawberries were considerably heavier with demand about equal to the supply.

Best southern celery is now selling up to 6.50 per crate.

Demand for lettuce showed some improvement with best local stock bringing as high as 2.00 per dry crate.

Fancy bay peas topped the market at 14 cents per pound.

Cauliflower is very scarce and the hothouses are being drawn upon for local supplies.

The potato market is holding very firm on old stock.

Bananas, eastern and Hawaiian, 8@9 per pound.

Artichokes, 2.00@2.50 large lug; 5.00@7.00 per crate.

Celery, southern, 6.00@6.50.

Lettuce, dry, 1.25@2.50 per crate.

Peas, bay, 11@14c per pound.

Potatoes, Washington Gems, best, 2.00@2.60; Idaho Russets, 2.00@2.75.

No poultry or dairy markets on Saturday.

CRUDE RUBBER RALLIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—A slight rally took place in the crude rubber market today, advancing prices about a quarter of a cent a pound. Ribbed smoked sheets, 22 cents for April delivery. The upturn in prices was regarded as purely technical as demand remained small. Sentiment in the trade is not so optimistic as earlier in the week due to the influx of more discouraging news from the automotive trade. Dispatches from Detroit assert that not only have April production schedules been revised downward but that already some of the automobile factories there are laying off some of their workers.

NEW YORK CURB

Activity in Utilities

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, April 5.—The most important feature of the market on the curb the last week was the suddenly developed activity and strength in several public utility issues, Lehigh Valley Power securities being a special feature and advancing from 49½ to 60. American Power and Light rose 34 points to 250.

The changed conditions in the petroleum industry met a belated response in activity and strength in that group.

Mining stocks also became active during the week, a feature being the admission to trading of the stock of the May Corporation, which was traded in on a large scale.

Following are the closing quotations on the New York Curb market, furnished by Logan & Bryan, members of the New York Stock Exchange, 626 South Spring street.

INSURANCE AND DRUGS TO BE DINNER SUBJECT

COMPANIES SEEK TO LEARN BEARING DOPE HAS ON RISK POLICIES

Los Angeles life insurance men propose to learn what bearing narcotis have on their business, looking to the time, already anticipated, when the question of drug-using will be an important one in the examination of applicants and the granting of policies.

Leading insurance men have been instrumental in calling a dinner meeting for Tuesday at 6 p.m., at the auditorium of the Pacific Mutual Building, for a discussion of "The Narcotic Peril and Life Insurance." About 200 are expected with thirty-five companies represented.

George Aeyers, president of the Underwriters' Association, will preside. The speakers' list will include Frank F. Peard of Canada Life, C. I. D. Moore of Pacific Mutual, and Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, president of the International Narcotic Education Association.

Either "Human Wreckage" or another film showing the effects of habit-forming drugs on human life and happiness will be shown after the speaking.

LETTER CALLING MAN "SUGAR" WINS DECREE

A note in which another woman addressed her husband as "Sugar" was presented before Judge Burks by Mrs. Ada Haynes in a hearing which resulted in the award of a decree of divorce from Lem Haynes. The other woman was one Mrs. Shark, the wife testified. The note in question referred to a proposed meeting between Haynes and the writer. Mrs. Haynes asserted such meetings occurred at various times.

Easily Done

"Hello, Smith; glad I met you. Can you lend me a fiver for a moment?"

"Only for a moment?" asked his friend.

"Oh, yes, indeed," insisted Jinks. "Merely for a moment."

"Very well, then, wait a moment and you won't want it."—[Exchange.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE

On the existence of better buying than selling in the market, Los Angeles Investment sold up to 3.90 in yesterday's half-day session on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, and finished at 3.89, a gain of 1 1-2 cents over the final price of the previous session. Attempts to exert selling pressure were easily repulsed by the buying element, and the stock is holding its recently acquired ground without serious trouble.

Trading in oils was small, but the price tone was satisfactory. Union Oil Associates moved forward 3-8 to 55 3-8 and General Petroleum common at 42 1-2 was up 1-2 point. U. S. Royalties advanced 1-2 cent to 25 1-2 and Pacific Oil was taken at 53 1-2.

Activity in the mining shares was of a minor nature. Gold Dust sales were made at 3 cents, United Eastern around 86, Telluride at 19, Richmond Consolidated at 14 1-2 and North Star at 2 cents.

The interest in bonds was substantial, and transactions reached a fair volume. General Petroleum 6s of 1928 sold off 1-8 to 96 3-8 and Holly Sugar 7s of 1937 declined 1-4 to 97 1-4. Pacific Gas and Electric 6s of 1941 moved up 1-4 of a point to 102 and Edison 6s of 1944 acquired 1-8 at 101 5-8.

CAN YOUR TAXES BE CUT?

Series of Concise Articles on Cost of Government; Where the Money Goes and Why

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

[Copyright, 1924, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.]

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

The Department of the Interior was established in 1849. It started with four bureaus: the General Land Office, taken from the Treasury Department; the Indian Office, taken from the War Department; the Bureau of the Pensions, also from the War Department, and the Patent Office, from the State Department.

Many other duties of government during the succeeding seventy-five years have been added to the Interior Department—some important, like the Reclamation Service, some unimportant. But the four original bureaus are still the big important spending bureaus in the Department of the Interior.

Dr. Hubert Work is the present Secretary. When Will Hays resigned as Postmaster-General in March, 1922, his first assistant, Dr. Work became Postmaster-General. Then when Albert B. Fall resigned as Secretary of the Interior, March 5, 1923, Dr. Work was shifted from his position as Postmaster-General to that of Secretary of the Interior.

Dr. Work is from the West—Colorado. He can be seen at his office in the new magnificent Interior Building without a previous appointment. He is the most accessible to the public of the nine members of the Cabinet.

"There are two kinds of minds in Washington," declared Dr. Work, slowly, in reply to my question as to where taxes could be cut. "The organized mind and the organizing mind. Now the organized mind is needed, useful and careful. It is strong on details. It works on precedent. The vast majority of workers in the public service are of this kind.

"The organizing mind is different. It is very rare. It may be poor on detail, poor on order, but it is the one which spots the leaks. It is the one great need in the public service today."

GAVE AWAY BILLIONS

But let us see what this big Interior Department does, outside of Indian affairs and pensions. These bureaus will be taken up in a later article.

There is the General Land Office. It is a very old bureau. It was organized in 1812 under the Treasury Department. The Secretary in his 1923 report lists fifty-seven distinct accomplishments of the Land Office for the year. Probably no bureau in the whole range of history has handed over to the citizens, free of charge, such stupendous wealth in the form of agricultural land, mineral land, oil land, and timber land. For the fiscal year 1923 a total of $2,844,000 was spent by this office. This amount is increased by approximately $100,000 in the estimates for 1924.

It is safe to say that if the vast land wealth had been conserved for the people and not exploited for private gain, this department today could pay all the civil expenses of the Federal government. The total value of the natural wealth given away will reach many, many billions of dollars.

Many people now believe this policy was dead wrong. They contend that all these vast resources should have been conserved for future generations and that no lands in fee of any character should be given away. "Save what is now left," is their motto; "lease what may be absolutely necessary but give no more land away."

Then there is the Geological Survey. It was organized as a bureau in 1879. This bureau classifies all public lands, examines and reports the geologic structure, mineral resources and mineral products of the national domain. For some years it has been engaged in making a geologic map of the United States and Alaska, involving vast topographic and geologic surveys. It is collecting each year statistics on mineral production and conducting investigations relating to surface and underground waters. The Secretary in his 1923 report relates forty-seven important phases of this work carried on in 1923. It is an important work, having a wide appeal. The bureau received 340,000 letters in 1923 and sent out 1,400,000 pieces of mail and spent $1,413,000. The estimate for 1924 is about $300,000 more.

Espee Revokes Its Protest on Broadway Plan

Supporting the opening of Broadway from Pico to Forty-first street, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, in a communication received yesterday at the City Hall, formally withdrew its protest against this $2,000,000 improvement which will create a great traffic artery to the southern part of the city. The railroad company owns much property in the district, which will be assessed to pay for the improvement.

But few protests have been received from property owners against the plan and these will be heard this week. The ordinance of intention for the improvement was adopted by the Council about a month ago, and the next step, after hearing the protests, will be the adoption of the final ordinance.

SHORT COVERING HELPS COTTON TO ADVANCE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Spot cotton closed at 30.65, 5 points net higher.

The cotton futures list advanced further in active trading today, buying by the trade and shorts causing the additional advance. Liverpool interest also were good buyers while some New Orleans short covering was also in evidence. The market encountered more pressure, however, in the form of heavy realizing by recent bull interests and this probably stayed a more substantial advance. Demand was sufficient to absorb offerings from the outset and the list ruled firm around the top levels of the day until the late trading when the list got down close to the previous closing level on scattered week-end realizing by local interests. Final prices were a few points above the day's low but 6 points net lower to 13 points net higher.

Bullish Party Grows; Wheat Prices Respond

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, April 5.—A material change in the general character of the buying came over the wheat market and with strong commission houses and exporters on the bull side prices advanced sharply to a new high figure for the week and the close was about the top with net gains of 1¼@1⅝ with May leading. Removal of hedges against liberal sales of Manitobas abroad were the main influence. Corn was unsettled. May reacting toward the last but gained ⅛ for the day, while the deferred figures were up ⅛. Oats were ⅛ higher and rye up ⅛@⅜.

At no time in the past week were wheat values more than a fraction under the finish of the previous week and while the market was decidedly irregular the close was 1⅝@2⅜ higher as compared with the previous week. Corn was 1⅝@2⅛ higher with oats up ⅝@1⅜ and rye ⅛@⅜. For the week lard gained 20@22½ and ribs 20 cents while bellies were 2½@10 lower.

Buying of May wheat was of much better class than of late and was headed by houses with seaboard and cash connections. This absorbed the surplus in the pit and later when Winnipeg turned very strong and the reports of over 1,000,000 bushels Manitobas being sold abroad became general property, shorts and the pit element in general turned to the buying side.

Winnipeg gained 1⅛@1¼ for the day. May here closed at 1.03⅛@1.03⅜, July at 1.04⅛@1.04¼ and September at 1.05⅛.

Local traders were inclined to be bullish on corn but there was persistent selling of May in small lots by commission houses and toward the last the demand was mainly for the deferred deliveries which widened the May-July spread to about 1 cent. May closed at 78⅛@78¼; July at 79⅛ and September 79⅛.

Messages from parts of the West indicated that farmers were willing to sell cash corn at prevailing prices. The Pacific Coast was after grain at Missouri River points. Basis on spot here was slightly easier with receipts fifty-nine cars.

Oats held within a range of less than ½ and closed at intermediate figures. Basis on spot was quoted about ½ higher as compared with May and it is figured that on the basis of prevailing prices that Canadians are well out of line as far as this market is concerned. Shipping sales were 85,000 bushels with receipts fifty-seven cars. Seeding is expected to be fairly general in parts of the West next week with favorable weather.

Rye was dull but slightly firmer in sympathy with wheat.

WEEKLY CITRUS REVIEW

shipped a total of 4174 cars of oranges and grapefruit.

The combined total of both California oranges and Florida oranges and grapefruit shipped during the month of April last season was 10,341 cars, or an average of 341.2 cars daily for the month.

At this writing there are approximately 7000 carloads of navels and miscellaneous varieties of oranges remaining for shipment. Last season at this time it was estimated that there were 5700 carloads of navels and miscellaneous varieties yet to move.

Advices from Florida are to the effect that approximately 1,500,000 boxes of Valencias will be moved from Florida this spring. There is quite a divergence of opinion as to the number of seedling oranges remaining in the groves, and the same situation exists in the case of grapefruit. Shippers who have made a survey of the groves since the March rains and winds made such inroads upon the crop do not hesitate to take issue with bureaucratic reports, based upon statistical deductions. They express the belief that the volume of mid-season oranges, as well as grapefruit, has been reduced materially below the generally accepted figures, variously estimated as 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 boxes, all told—that is, all varieties of oranges and grapefruit. Then comes the question—how much of this will be shipped?

Last season at this time it was estimated that Florida had a total of 1,237,700 boxes of oranges and 2,000,000 boxes of grapefruit remaining for shipment.

F.o.b. California quotations on fancy California navels are as follows: Size 100s, $4.75; 126s, $4.50; 150s, $4.25; 176s, $3.50; 200s, $3; 216s, $2.75; 250s, $2.25; 288s, $2.00; 324s, $1.75; Choice fruit, 50 cents per box, less on sizes 176s and larger, and 25 cents per box less on 200s and smaller.

F.o.b. California quotations last season at this time for fancy navels were as follows: 96s, $1.85; 100s, $2.35; 126s, $2.85; 150s, $3.10; 176s and smaller, $3.85. Choice grades, 45 cents per box, less on size 96s, and 50 cents less on other sizes. Seedlings and sweets were quoted from $3 to $3.25 per box.

A well-regulated movement of California oranges from now on is imperative if the present advancing market is to be continued.

LEMONS

The demand for California lemons is increasing as the season advances. Considerable speculative demand is developing.

F.o.b. California quotations range from $3 to $3.50 per box.

There are on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days at all United States ports approximately forty-four cars of foreign lemons, as against 282 cars for the corresponding period last season, and 101 cars in 1922, same date.

COUNTRY BANKS BUY MANY LIBERTY BONDS

The Bank of Italy through its bond department, announces that there has been a phenomenal demand on the part of Country Banks and Institutions for Liberty bonds.

This demand continues in spite of the fact that Liberty bonds have reached high levels.

The rate for call money in the large investment centers has declined to such an extent that 4 1-4 per cent which is the approximate yield on Liberty bonds, is more attractive for these institutions.

Liberty bonds have the same element of marketability that is true of call loans and the rate at the present time is as attractive.

There are strong indications that a bull speculation of large proportions may shortly develop in railroad stocks. The outlook for well-selected transportation issues, particularly those in the low-priced group, is distinctly encouraging. There exists at the present time an exceedingly favorable background for rising values in this group, predicated on the theory that they have most to gain by a continuance of favorable operating conditions.

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The well of the Long Beach Petroleum Corporation in the Fruitvale-avenue district in the western portion of the Signal Hill field will have to be cemented again, before it definitely will be known whether there is a possibility of getting the water shut-off, according to officials of the California Drilling Company, which is doing the work.

Cores taken from below 4650 feet indicated rich oil sand, it is said, and for a time there were high hopes of getting a producer. Then there were indications of water, and the well was cemented at 4660 feet. The plug was drilled out three weeks ago, and it immediately became evident that the well was wet, and since that time, the crew has been swabbing and bailing in an attempt to locate the source of the water. Officials of the drilling company believe the water may be coming in around the shoe, and another cement job is to be put in immediately, it is said.

Operators, who have been watching the progress of the well closely because of its location as a western outpost, believe that the well is probably in the edge of the sand, and that the trouble may be with edge water which cannot be shut off.

Drillers assert that if the water trouble can be corrected, there is small doubt that the well will make a good producer, as oil-sand showings have been unusually good, it is said.

Deepen Oceanic

The Oceanic Oil Company's No. 3 well on Signal Hill, opposite the Shell company's shops, is being deepened, according to drillers. The original depth of the well was 4300 feet, from which it consistently flowed 700 barrels a day for several months until recently, when the production dropped to 400 barrels. By deepening the well, officials expect to increase production to 1500 barrels a day.

Well Holding Up

The Doyle-Clune No. 1 well, which was completed late last February by J. J. Doyle and associates, and was hailed at that time as one of the best wells in the field, is holding up to original estimates, according to reports. The well came in at 3800 barrels at a time when a 1500-barrel well was considered good, and is still flowing 3000 barrels a day, officials of the syndicate report.

Start New Well

The Standard Oil Company has started drilling operations on its Ellinwood lease in the Torrance field, according to field reports. Surface casing was set yesterday in the No. 1 well at 970 feet.

Near Completion

The Petroleum Midway Company, Ltd., expects to complete its well on No 1 in the Torrance field within the next two weeks, unless unforeseen trouble develops. Eight-inch casing has been set at 3023 feet, and drilling will be resumed in a few days.

Miley Starts Well

E. J. Miley has started his fifth well in the Torrance field. The first string of casing has been run, and the well is standing cemented at 890 feet, according to reports.

Down 2840 Feet

The Huntington Northern Oil Company's No. 1 well in the Signal Hill field is down 2840 feet, according to drillers. It is understood that a change in the management of the company's operations was made recently. Work was delayed for some time due to financial difficulties, it is said.

Down 4300 Feet

The Monrovia Oil Company's well on the southeast side of Signal Hill, on the Martinez property, is drilling ahead at 4300 feet, according to drillers. The well is to be drilled to 5000 feet, before a production test will be made.

Starts New Well

John McKeon is starting his fourth well in the Lomita district of the Torrance field two blocks east of Eshelman avenue, on Pine street.

McKeon has two wells on production in this field, and one standing cemented at 3570 feet, ready to drill into the oil sand, and go on production. McKeon No. 1 is pumping 300 barrels, and No. 2 is flowing 500 barrels.

CITY CLUB'S BUILDING IS WELL ALONG

Tenancy is Expected by November; F. C. Graham is Installed President

The City Club will be in its new building at 833 South Spring street before the end of the present year, it was announced at the seventeenth annual installation of officers at a noon meeting in the club quarters in the Chapman Building yesterday. It is expected that the building will be completed late in October or early in November, the report of the building committee disclosed.

F. C. Graham was inaugurated as president of the club. He was elected to the position for the second time at the annual election earlier in the week. Mr. Graham is one of the charter members of the club and served as its president in 1914.

Other officers installed were Marshall Stimson, first vice-president; John W. Kemp, second vice-president; John S. Myers, treasurer, and C. A. Dystra, secretary. Mr. Stimson, in the absence of Francis J. Heney, the retiring president, presided at the meeting.

Bombs were invented at Venlo in 1588 and used first in the service of France in 1634.

MARKET REVIEW

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—The outstanding movement on today's financial markets was the continued rise of sterling exchange which went more than 3 cents above Friday's closing, reaching a price of 4 5-8 cents above the week's low figure and nearly 14 cents above the low price of the year, reached on January 21, two days before the new Labor Ministry took office. It might no doubt be argued that this recovery from the January rate has abundantly reflected the change in financial ideas regarding the dangers of such a government, but sterling, considered as an indication of British financial sentiment has more reasons for retracing lost ground than the unexpected conservatism of the MacDonald regime.

The price of a few days ago was very low; it was practically the same as the lowest of 1923 and not much above the most unfavorable rate of 1922 and yet the conspicuous causes for the decline—the "pin pricks" of Lord Curzon against France, the political folly of Baldwin, talk of "British inflation"—were now all of them matters of the past.

How far the abrupt recovery in the latter part of last week had in view the possible influence on financial markets of the Dawes report, now shortly due for publication is a matter of pure conjecture. The foreign exchange markets as a whole have lately been subject to such violent fluctuation, caused by very different influences that there has been no chance to read in them any reflection of the financial community's expectations of this expert report on Germany and the reparations. At the moment, even the most sagacious financiers and speculators are at a loss to say how the publication of the findings ought to affect financial sentiment. Probably that will depend on two considerations—whether the Dawes proposals as a whole do or do not commend themselves to sober financial judgment as both reasonable and practicable and what attitude the various powers concerned will take concerning the proposals.

That Germany will raise objections is rather generally taken for granted; also that England could probably force Germany's acquiescence. This has made England's position the point of greatest interest in financial circles. It is at least conceded that, since the whole project of an impartial committee with American participation was adopted at the urgent solicitation of the British government, it would require a very faulty plan to make objections from London anything but diplomatic bad form.

The day's stock market was rather more active than has lately been usual on a Saturday. It was characterized by irregular movements with the general tendency slightly downward. The railway shares maintained their position fairly well; the industrials as a whole lost ground slightly.

LOCAL MAN PARTNER IN BEACH PURCHASE

THREE COMBINE TO OBTAIN PROPERTY AREA NEAR NEW YORK CITY

L. Roy Slater, Los Angeles real estate operator, is named as one of three purchasers of Graham Beach on Staten Island near New York City, with a mile and a half of waterfront and 220 acres of land at reported consideration of $1,000,000, according to dispatches from New York. The purchase follows negotiations extending over a period of several months, during which Howard A. Slater, a brother of the Los Angeles operator, visited this city in the interest of the deal. James S. Graham, millionaire New York real estate man and former owner of the Graham Beach property, is the third man involved in the purchase.

It is the intention of the new owners to spend a considerable additional sum in dredging and improvements before the acreage is cut up and sold. A beach resort in full operation is included in the purchase, and a new broadwalk is to be installed.

PARTNERS AT OUTS

Wife Wants Divorce and Receiver for Dry Goods Stores

Mrs. Lunetta Buckley not only wants a divorce from Frank Buckley, but she demands appointment of a receiver for two Hollywood dry goods stores, in a divorce suit on file before the Superior Court.

Mrs. Buckley asserts she is Buckley's partner in the dry goods business as well as his wife. She declares she owns a third interest in the stores. Cruel treatment, abuse and profanity are cited as grounds for divorce.

MYRA HERSHEY RANCH TRANSFER REPORTED

LARGE SUM DECLARED PAID FOR PROPERTY; PLANS INCLUDE DIVISION

It is reported in Hollywood that the Myra Hershey ranch along Cahuenga Pass and Lankershim Boulevard has been sold to the Wilbur Dunham Company of Hollywood for $1,250,000. It is to be subdivided immediately, half for business property along a new highway to be constructed on the east side of the Pacific Electric righ-of-way through Cahuenga Pass, and half for residence property, it is said.

The ranch contains 190 acres, fronting the Cahuenga Pass and on Lankershim Boulevard. It is said that the corner of Lankershim Boulevard and Cahuenga Pass will be used for a hotel to be built soon.

Bryan's Weekly Bible Talk

By William Jennings Bryan

Example of Great Faith and Courage

A Striking Example of Great Faith and Courage

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan

(1 Kings, xviii:30-24; 36-39)

So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto Mt. Carmel.

And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word.

Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the Lord, but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

Let them, therefore, give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under:

And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord: and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken.

And it came to pass at the time of offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou are the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God.

From time to time we have studied the prophet Elijah as the central figure in several historic events. Today we shall consider him as a striking example of great faith in God and of supreme courage.

But—first—Elijah's sudden appearance on the stage of biblical events deserves a moment's notice.

He was not an evolution—there was no gradual approach to him or continued ascent after him.

There is no reason to believe that he had the blood of any prophets in his veins, and we know that his blood did not flow in the veins of any of the prophets that succeeded him.

He emerged suddenly from an obscurity which no one has been able to penetrate. We know nothing of his preparation for his task, if he had any, we know not what traits were ancestral, what impress environment had made upon him in youth, or what experience had trained him for the prophet's work.

WHEN GOD NEEDED HIM

When God needed him, he was there; and he could hardly have been more efficient had he come from a long line of prophets and been trained for his work from childhood. Everything depends on whether one acts in his own strength or represents the infinite wisdom and strength of the God for whom one acts.

Elijah did not enter upon his work with the self-depreciation of Moses, whom God repeatedly reassured, saying, "I will be with thy mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do."

Neither was he as cautious as Gideon, who required the performance of two miracles before he was convinced that God had called him.

The introduction of Elijah merely says that he announced to Ahab the coming of a drought. In James we are told that Elijah "prayed earnestly that it might not rain."

The second fact to which I call attention is the courage of Elijah.

Ahab was a wicked king and whatever he may have lacked in depth and breadth and variety of wickedness, his wife Jezebel supplied. He might not have amounted to much had he reigned alone, but he shared authority, really if not nominally, with a queen who had determination enough for both.

A BEAUTIFUL SIMILE

God seemed to know the royal pair even better than Elijah did and directed the latter to retreat to a spot where he could find bread and water during the predicted drought.

It is not necessary to repeat the comments made in previous lessons about the providential care that the Lord extended over His servant. The narrative has furnished literature with one of the most beautiful of its similes—"fed by the ravens"—and an illustration of the raising of the dead by divine power exercised through a prophet.

Elijah and Ahab meet again three years and a half later when the Lord was about to bring the drought to an end. The brief dialogue between the prophet and the enraged king has lent itself to many similar meetings since. It is probably the best illustration given in history, sacred or profane, of an unjust accusation forcefully turned back upon the accuser.

To Ahab's pointed inquiry, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" Elijah replied:

"I have not troubled Israel: but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim."

Error always hides behind misrepresentations; it must do so because consciousness of weakness compels subterfuge.

THE BOLDEST CHALLENGE

Charity may require us to admit that the champion of error may sometimes be unconscious of his confession of weakness when he accuses others of the very sin of which he is himself guilty. Ahab charged Elijah with troubling Israel; Elijah replied with a much more serious charge, a charge against which the king could not defend.

Our lesson text deals with the fire test proposed by Elijah. It surpasses in boldness any other challenge known to history.

Elijah's faith was strong enough to stake all on God's power and—what required even more faith—upon God's willingness to act.

It may be remarked, in passing, that faith in God's willingness to exercise His power is a higher degree of faith than faith in God's omnipotence.

The evidences of a Creator are so overwhelming that but few have denied the existence of God, and belief in God's existence implies a belief in the infinitude of His power.

But will God exercise that power in a particular instance?

Can man know with certainty that God will answer such an appeal as Elijah addressed to him?

Elijah's prayer indicated that he had been in communication with God and was acting under specific instructions from Him, but it should be remembered that his own life would have paid the penalty had God failed to answer with fire.

A GREAT PRAYER

If Elijah did not enter upon his task with distrust in his own ability to do the work committed to him as others in similar positions did, he must be credited with complete humility when he prayed to God to confirm in public what He had directed His servant to do.

A beautiful prayer it was:

"Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word."

The purpose of his appeal, too, was noble in every sense of the word.

He was not seeking any glory for himself; his heart was with his [illegible] God to save them from idolatry:

"Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again."

The fire fell, the test succeeded and the prophets of Baal were slain, but the real triumph was not in the shedding of the blood of the prophets of Baal—that was but an incident—the triumph was in the return of the people who fell upon their faces and cried:

"The Lord, he is the God; the Lord he is the God."

CHALLENGE FOR CHRISTIANS

Elijah's prayer test suggests a challenge which Christians may well offer to those who reject the Bible as the Word of God.

The Bible is either true or false; it is the Word of God or the work of man—there is no middle ground.

If it is the work of man, then man should be able to produce at least as good a book as the Bible, unless man has degenerated.

Why should not those who boast that the Bible is man's handiwork be challenged to produce a book that equals the Bible?

If the Bible is a man-made book, man should be able to produce a much better book today than the Bible, for it must be remembered that he men who wrote the Bible were not, for the most part, men learned even for their day, and they had no such opportunities for acquiring knowledge as are now within the reach of all.

They had no universities to prepare them for their work, neither had they great libraries to consult.

They had no swift ships to carry them to distant centers of civilization.

They had no telegraph wires to bring them news from every corner of the earth, and were still father from the era of the telephone and the radio.

It was from a scantily supplied storehouse that the writers drew, if the Bible is a man-made book.

And yet, they dealt with every problem that confronts mankind, from the creation of the world to life beyond the grave.

They gave us a map of human experience and set up warning signs at every dangerous point.

AN AMAZING FACT

The Bible has come down to us throughout the ages, and what do we find? This amazing fact—that along every other line except the line of which the Bible treats, man has made marvelous progress—almost incalculable progress, but along the one subject with which the Bible deals, namely, the science of how to live, man has made no progress whatever.

The prohibitions against the principal crimes that curse society are as specific as though they were written today and are clearer and more easily understood.

If we turn from statute law to the rules that govern our spiritual welfare, we are again confronted with the fact that man has made no progress along this line.

The moral code of Christ that appeared like a new star in the firmament has not lost its brilliancy, and no later star has appeared as a rival.

Critics have attacked the Bible from every standpoint and with a bitterness which has been employed against no other book, for they feel that they must destroy the Bible or be destroyed by it, and yet their assaults have been in vain.

They have not been able to discredit a single sentence that Christ uttered or to add to His code a single sentence of importance.

What is their answer?

Will they admit that the Bible is impregnable because it comes from a source higher than man?

Or will they charge that civilization has so impaired man's constructive powers that, with all his learning, he cannot be expected to do as much today as he did nineteen centuries ago?

BAAL'S MODERN PROPHETS

The rout of the modern prophets of Baal is as complete as the rout that followed the fire on the altar built by Elijah on Mount Carmel.

Fortunately, religious decrees are not now enforceable by law; fortunately, freedom of conscience is guaranteed by our Constitution. But freedom of conscience is intended to encourage religion—not to suppress it.

Those who believe in God are at liberty to invoke history to silence atheism; they are at liberty to prove by the past that God still lives, that His word is without error and that His only begotten Son is the hope of the future.

The Christians of today should have as much faith in God as Elijah had, and enough faith in their Bible to compel its critics to confess the Bible's claim of inspiration or admit man's degeneracy.

Which will they do?

TIRE DEALER IS FINED FOR MAIL FRAUD

Barker Held by Judge to Have Failed to Repay as Pledged in Letters

Judge McCormick in the United States District Court yesterday fined T. J. Barker, proprietor of the Los Angeles Tire and Tube Manufacturing Company $750 on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. A jury convicted Barker a week ago on evidence introduced by the government to show that the defendant had misrepresented the value of rebuilt tires and had failed to make promised adjustments in connection with a 6000-mile guarantee.

Judge McCormick told Barker the evidence clearly showed that the latter at least had been negligent in the manner of conducting his business. The defense evidence had shown that persons dealing personally with Barker had obtained adjustments but had failed to show that persons dealing with him by mail had secured adjustments. On the other hand, he said, the government evidence had shown that Barker took advantage of the credulity of out-of-town buyers in the sales literature he sent through the mails.

The court said if a business man uses the mails in the conduct of his business he must exercise great care in seeing that the business is conducted honestly and with strict adherence to good business principles.

What Geologic Time Wrought

Drawings above show the geographical and geological location of the scientific find, which Dr. Hill believes to be the most unquestioned ancient occurrence of that nature yet reported. The diagrammatic section through the western part of Los Angeles as reproduced above showns some of the things that happened here during the late days of geologic time. The key to the letters is as follows: S—The folded and faulted Santa Monica Range, which makes the north border of the Los Angeles Basin, with vestiges of terraces on its southern slope. W—West Pico and other "heights" in the western part of the city, consisting of strata which were deposited and deformed since man appeared upon earth. B—Baldwin Hills, which make the south margin of the basin. P—The Ballona plain, beneath which the fossil remains were found at X. FF—Fault lines along which the strata have been displaced. C—An alluvial cone later in age, which has been deposited upon the surface of the plain.

FOSSIL BONES HERE HELD MOST ANCIENT BY NOTED GEOLOGIST

Dr. Robert Hill, After Minute Study of Strata Where Skeletons Were Found, Reaches Conclusion Men of Later Ice Age Have Been Revealed

BY ROBERT T. HILL
Geologist

It was the writer's good fortune to have been in Los Angeles recently when the announcement was made of the discovery of bones of fossil men in the excavations for the Los Angeles sewer system just west of the intersection of the Santa Monica Air Line Railway and Mesa Drive in the southwest portion of the city.

Thanks to Dr. W. A. Bryan, director of the Los Angeles Museum, who was the first to appreciate the importance of this find, and who, by right of precedence has charge of the discovery and the direction of researches concerning it, the writer is permitted to publish his individual observations concerning the geological antiquity of the remains.

After having studied the locality and become satisfied that we, indeed, had here a case of ancient stratigraphic interment, the writer sent the following telegram to Prof. Henry F. Osborn of the American Museum of Natural History, the leader of American anthropological and paleontologic research.

"Human remains found here completely fossilized. Occur twenty-five feet deep in horizontal stratified material of old recent or latest Pleistocene (age.) No possibility of intrusion or confusion with outwash or Santa Barbara occurrence. Consider most unquestionable ancient occurrence yet reported. Material well cared for by Bryan and Stock."

This telegram briefly stated the essential facts. It is the purpose of the present article to amplify these facts in the light of further and more extensive studies and comparisons of the exposures and the environment.

SIGNIFICANT DISCOVERIES

This is the Golden Age of scientific climax and achievement in all its branches, and if the present evidences of the antiquity of the "Los Angeles man," as the fossil remains probably will be known in the future, should survive the fire of criticism which will doubtless be made upon it, our city will add another laurel to its reputation of being the site of unique geologic discoveries.

As far as the remains are concerned, the writer's interest does not pertain to the particular species of mankind to which they may have belonged, but is centered entirely upon the questions of the mode of occurrence in the strata, and the relative age of the finds.

So far as the species is concerned, the bones will be properly preserved in the museum where they can be observed, handled, classified and reclassified indefinitely, but the excellent artificial exposures over a large area of the underlying strata of the Ballona Plain now being made for the burial of the pipes of the Los Angeles sewer system, will soon be obliterated by the refilling of the deep trenches, and the present opportunity to study the strata will hardly occur again. In view of these facts, the writer took occasion, last week personally to visit and compare all the many trenches in order that his observations and testimony might add their mite to that of others who should do likewise.

MAN-CONTAINING STRATA

The locality where these fossil bones were found is situated in the midst of the Ballona Plain about half a mile west of the large gasometer which rises as a conspicuous landmark on Mesa Drive. The flat at this point, between West Adams street on the north, and the west end of Vernon avenue on the south, is nearly 3000 feet wide. The surface of this plain beneath which the fossil remains were found is nearly but not quite the newest of the physiographic features of Southern California; and represents the surface expression of a geologic formation which is almost if not quite recent in age. ### Policewoman's Daughter to be Allowed to Go to Home in Chicago

Mrs. Ruth Norman, 19-year-old daughter of a Chicago policewoman, who has been in the Los Angeles County Jail sixty days awaiting trial in the Federal Court on a charge of forging the indorsement on a Liberty bond, pleaded guilty yesterday before Federal Judge McCormick. Taking into consideration the fact that the defendant had been made the dupe of men who stole the bond, and that she had not received any of the money, Judge McCormick continued the case until the 21st inst. in order that Mrs. Norman might receive from her mother transportation back to Chicago.

The court warned Mrs. Norman that any hope of leniency must be based on good faith efforts to go back home where she belonged. He pointed out that by permitting herself to associate with such persons as those with whom she was indicted she had entered the road that "leads to destruction."

The indictment was returned against Mrs. Norman, W. C. Murphy and John F. Schyler. It charged them with forging the name of Mrs. Willie Hubbard on a $500 Liberty bond. It is said the men prevailed on Mrs. Norman to present herself at the bank as Mrs. Hubbard and to make the indorsement. Murphy and Schyler later received indeterminate sentences of from one year to life in the State prison for burglary.

A seven-and-a-half pound baby boy was born at midnight Friday to Mrs. Kimpton Ellis, wife of Kimpton Ellis, attorney of the firm of Ellis and Vickers. Both mother and baby are reported to be doing well.

UNIQUE POLICY FOR UNIVERSITY

Will be Free to Study in Any Way Desired

That trained individuality, originality and initiative are among the greatest assets of the modern world was the statement made yesterday by R. B. Von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, when he announced a new educational policy to be followed by the University of Southern California in the selection of a small group of students to encourage originality and scholarship and to stimulate the student to achievement on his own initiative.

This plan, which has been carefully worked out by President Von KleinSmid and officers of the university, is expected to prove unique in the work of American educational institutions.

HONORS GROUP PLAN

Students selected for this group, which will be known as the honor group, must have at least junior standing toward a bachelor's degree.

Requirements will be a good record of scholarship in all studies in addition to the indorsement of teachers who have had opportunity to observe the work, as well as the approval of the committee selected to pass on applicants for the honors group. It will also be requested that he complete his next two years' work in the University of Southern California.

"The students in this group are to be given as large a measure of freedom as possible," declared President Von KleinSmid in outlining the work which will include a supervisorial committee of three, an individual committee being appointed for each student admitted to the group. This committee will assist in defining the objectives of study and something of the methods of reaching these objectives.

UNUSUAL PRIVILEGES

Instead of compulsory attendance on regular classes students admitted to this group will be free to complete their work in many ways, including private reading, attendance upon certain classes and research work.

"Students in this group may be relieved largely from the ordinary obligation of attendance upon classes and examinations and will feel free to use whatever means seems most likely to be of assistance in acquainting himself with the field of study," said President Von KleinSmid.

Each committee will be in constant touch with the individual student, giving direction and assistance as may be needed. In addition to the supervisorial capacity of the committee it will also conduct a rigid final examination of such nature as it may deem best.

CITY PLANS FOR FLEET'S RETURN

Soldiers' and Sailors' Club Prepares Welcome

Local Commerce Chamber Also Takes Steps

Gala Events to be Ready When Crews Land

With official orders issued yesterday that the Pacific Fleet would sail from Balboa, Canal Zone, the 12th inst., for the return journey to Los Angeles from the manuevers of the winter season, plans for the welcoming of officers and sailors were started.

At Los Angeles Harbor where the more demonstrative celebration will take place, civic committees and officials of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, conferred with a view to preparing a unique event.

CHAMBER AIDS

In Los Angeles, the Chamber of Commerce and the local branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club collaborated on plans to place the city in readiness for the influx of uniformed men, who will swarm to the city as soon as the ships arrive in the harbor.

At present, officials are unable to set the exact date of the arrival of the fleet, but they infer that unless a large amount of time is spent in manuevering during the trip up the coast, the ships will be in the harbor the 21st inst.

While many gala events will be staged for the men from the ships, the two clubs of the soldiers' and sailors' organization will play a prominent part in the welcome.

PLAN HOUSECLEANING

[illegible] M. Wisler and Emily [illegible], hostesses at the local club, which is situated at 331 South Main street, say they will hold a spring housecleaning at their headquarters in order to have the rooms spick and span for the return of the sailors.

Before making any elaborate plans for a reception, however, the two women, who are members of the Woman's Overseas Service League, are planning a drive for funds which will be handled by Secretary Frank Wiggins of the Chamber of Commerce.

The club obtains its quarters from the city as a gratuity and other articles needed for the pleasure of the service men have been donated by local firms and organizations.

WESTERN RANGERS TO [illegible] INDIAN POW-WOWS

[illegible] TRIBESMEN TO TEACH DANCES TO BOYS AT MEETING TONIGHT

The first of a series of special Sunday evening meetings for boys of high-school age belonging to the Western Rangers will be held this evening at 4900 South Pasadena avenue at the proposed future clubhouse of the organization. Four Hopi Indians will be present to teach boys the most important of their ceremonial dances and customs. Indian games will be played under the Indians' direction.

The meeting will be in the building for the purchase of which a [illegible] campaign will be launched Monday by the Western Rangers. A special appeal will be made to parents and friends of Western Rangers to help purchase the property, which consists of an eighteen-room house and two acres of ground.

The Western Rangers is an organization of 1650 boys divided into twenty-seven councils scattered in Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena, Glendale and Eagle Rock. Three camps are maintained for week-end parties.

MARINE RESERVISTS

Company is Authorized for City and Meeting Arranged

Authority has been received at the office of the Commandant, Eleventh Naval District, from Marine Corps headquarters, for the formation and organization of a company of Marine Corps reservists in the city of Los Angeles. It is proposed to enroll only former marines and to make an organization of which both the Marine Corps and the company may well be proud. A meeting of ex-marines and reservists has been called for 8 p.m. on the 8th inst., at the Naval Reserve Armory, 1965 South Los Angeles street, to perfect the organization. All ex-marines are invited to attend.

TIRE DEALER IS FINED FOR MAIL FRAUD

Barker Held by Judge to Have Failed to Repay as Pledged in Letters

Judge McCormick in the United States District Court yesterday fined T. J. Barker, proprietor of the Los Angeles Tire and Tube Manufacturing Company $750 on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. A jury convicted Barker a week ago on evidence introduced by the government to show that the defendant had misrepresented the value of rebuilt tires and had failed to make promised adjustments in connection with a 6000-mile guarantee.

Judge McCormick told Barker the evidence clearly showed that the latter at least had been negligent in the manner of conducting his business. The defense evidence had shown that persons dealing personally with Barker had obtained adjustments but had failed to show that persons dealing with him by mail had secured adjustments. On the other hand, he said, the government evidence had shown that Barker took advantage of the credulity of out-of-town buyers in the sales literature he sent through the mails.

The court said if a business man uses the mails in the conduct of his business he must exercise great care in seeing that the business is conducted honestly and with strict adherence to good business principles.

What Geologic Time Wrought

Drawings above show the geographical and geological location of the scientific find, which Dr. Hill believes to be the most unquestioned ancient occurrence of that nature yet reported. The diagrammatic section through the western part of Los Angeles as reproduced above showns some of the things that happened here during the late days of geologic time. The key to the letters is as follows: S—The folded and faulted Santa Monica Range, which makes the north border of the Los Angeles Basin, with vestiges of terraces on its southern slope. W—West Pico and other "heights" in the western part of the city, consisting of strata which were deposited and deformed since man appeared upon earth. B—Baldwin Hills, which make the south margin of the basin. P—The Ballona plain, beneath which the fossil remains were found at X. FF—Fault lines along which the strata have been displaced. C—An alluvial cone later in age, which has been deposited upon the surface of the plain.

EIGHTY PICK WINNERS

Something like eighty schools have already selected the winners in their respective institutions who are to deliver orations at these district meets as the representatives of their schools. These young orators of whom 80 per cent belong to the gentler sex, include all types of high-school pupils, from the grind with owlish horn-rimmed spectacles, who selects the Congressional Record for light reading, to the irrepressible youth of gaudy raiment with a profound knowledge of baseball lore dating back to the early days.

They all possess some characteristics in common, however, these orators, the same being a keen interest in the study of the fundamental law of their land, the ability to think clearly on that and kindred subjects and the art of expressing their thoughts with greater felicity than the other members of their respective groups of contestants.

The papers that have been submitted are remarkable for the knowledge of the Constitution and the history relating to it displayed by the pupils, according to their teachers.

PROFESSOR AMAZED

An expression on this subject is contained in a communication from Prof. I. D. Terry, head of the English department of the Los Angeles High School, who writes to Director Blanks:

"I have been amazed at the grasp of the principals of our government on the part of the pupils whose orations I have read. It reveals a great deal of study of the Constitution itself as well as a large amount of collateral reading and research. The papers show that the writers have handled the subject thoughtfully and with a knowledge of their subject matter surprising in view of their youth. It is safe to predict that the effect of this study of the basic law will remain with these students after they leave school and will make them more intelligent American citizens than they would have been without it."

The points particularly stressed by the orators are the liberty granted by the provisions of the Constitution and the necessity of familiarity with that document to insure its preservation.

"As the future citizens of this country, it is important that we be familiar with that great document which is the organic law of our government," says one young orator.

And another suggests that "the actuating force of civilization is, to a great extent, patriotism which finds its chief expression in obedience to law. And as the Constitution is the foundation of all our law, it behooves every American citizen to familiarize himself with its principles to the end that he may do his share toward furthering the interests of civilization."

CONTESTS TO BE PUBLIC

The preparations under way for the district contests in every case include arrangements for making these events public affairs. Most of the meetings will be conducted in auditoriums capable of accommodating 1000 or more and will take place at hours when the public can attend. In some places the district contest will partake of the nature of a semi-holiday, with citizens of prominence taking part in the exercises.

In each district three prizes aggregating $50 have been offered by the contest promoters. The winner of the first prize will receive $25, of the second, $15 and of the third, $10. In addition, the newspapers and citizens' organizations in many of the smaller towns have offered prizes which render the prize feature of the contest in each district an especially attractive one.

When the thirty-six district contests are over, the last one taking place on the 26th inst., the winners in these events which will number between 125 to 130 contestants, will meet in six semifinal group meets, to be conducted as follows:

SEMIFINAL SCHEDULE

Group A, including the city and county of San Diego, and the counties of Imperial, Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside, will meet at Riverside May 2.

Group B, including the city of Bakersfield and the counties of Kings, Kern, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Tulare, Inyo and Fresno, will meet at Bakersfield May 2.

Group C, including Ventura county and the towns of Long Beach, Redondo, Venice, Santa Monica, Inglewood, Compton, Huntington Park, Glendale and the sections surroundings these places, will meet at Long Beach May 2

Group D, including Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra, Claremont, La Verne, Pomona, Azusa, Whittier, Norwalk, Montebello, Downey, Covina, El Monte, Puente, Monrovia, Lomita, Gardena, Torrance, San Pedro, Wilmington and Hollywood, will meet at Pasadena May 2.

Group E and F, including all the schools of Los Angeles with entrants in the contest, will meet, respectively, at Manual Arts High School Auditorium May 2 and the Los Angeles High School Auditorium May 2.

This Good Looking Young Woman Uses Old Time Recipe of Buttermilk Cream in a New Way—A Gentle Massage with Fingers Before Retiring Is All That is Necessary."

The old-time application of Buttermilk and Cream to whiten and preserve the skin and remove harsh little wrinkles and ugly sallowness is grandmother's recipe and women throughout the country are again using it to ensure a beautiful complexion and snow white hands and arms.

Buttermilk, however, is not always obtainable, but a specialist has at last perfected a method of concentrating buttermilk and combining it with a perfect cream, which you can buy in small quantities ready to use at any first class drug store by simply asking for "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream.

There is no secret about it nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just common ordinary buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream. That's all. Howard's Buttermilk Cream gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth. —[Advertisement.

TEMBLOR MOVES SPANISH FARMS

Village Moves Five-eighths of Mile and Legal Mixes are to be Seen

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MADRID, April 5.—Most of the village of Monachil, 10 kilometers from Granada, moved a distance of 3 kilometers (five-eighths of a mile) during the recent earthquake. As a result numerous curious legal problems have arisen among the farmers whose farms suddenly moved to new territory.

FOSSIL BONES HELD ANCIENT

backward it was made but yesterday in geologic time.

A vertical geological section of the Ballona Plain, such as is being exposed by the deep trenches of the outfall sewers, reveals that within a depth of twenty-five feet from the surface it is underlaid by two distinct formations.

The uppermost of these consists of a bed of moderately fine whitish sand with very little clay. It is homogeneous in texture, and constitutes the surface formation of the plain adjacent to Mesa Drive and for at least half a mile east and west thereof, as actually exposed in the sewer trenches, as verified by personal examination. It is also more than probable that this formation constitutes the surface of most of the plain in its extent to the westward and eastward. No gravel, or fossils were found in this upper formation. The assumption is that it represents a deposit of well-sorted and long-traveled silt which was laid down in comparatively quiet waters void of strong currents as attested by the uniform character of the formation and the absence of gravel and cross-bedding.

STRATA DETERMINED

This formation was examined and measured by the writer in all of the various localities visited and it ranged between five and ten feet in thickness.

This upper rests upon another formation of quite a different character which consists of more compact sandy clays, bluish green in color and characterized by the presence of many small particles of mica. This formation is compact, and marked here and there by a few and faint stratification planes. At all exposures visited, its upper termination is marked by the presence of a band of black, carbonaceous material a foot or more in thickness, which with its vegetal content represent an old land surface where vegetation once grew, and upon which the upper formation was discordantly deposited. In some of the sections there were several of these black bands of vegetal discoloration in the upper portion of the clays of the lower formation.

The fossil bones were found in the lower portion of this last formation from twenty to twenty-three feet below the surface. In their lower portion, the clays of this formation are very compact, and of homogeneous texture. They probably were deposited in more or less quiet waters of a lake or lagoon. The presence of fresh water or brackish shell rather indicates that they were not laid down in the open sea.

The contact of these two formations in most places is marked by a water trickle resulting from the drainage of the upper and more porous sand formation to this level, where it rests upon the more impervious underlying formation, thereby further indicating that the two formations are entirely distinct from each other.

TEST DRILLS

It may be that below the clays of the formation there is a stratum of sand and gravel. The writer was unable personally to verify such a probability. The occurrence of such a formation at the base of the series by no means would be improbable and should occur at this position if these sediments represent a series of lacustral or lagunal estuarine deposits. Dr. Bryan informs me that he is going to ascertain the nature of the underlying material by test drills.

The fineness of the material of the formation in which the human remains were found, together with their composition and the bands of decomposed vegetable matter suggest that they were deposited in the comparatively quiet, or still waters of an ancient lake or otherwise impounded body of water.

The abundant presence of fine particles of mica also indicates that the material was deposited in quiet waters, as this mineral, owing to its light weight, is apt to remain suspended as long as there is the slightest current.

Lakes of this kind, Elizabeth Lake, for instance are known to occur along structural, or fault, valleys, such as we are provisionally presuming the Ballona Plain trough to have once been, before having been filled up to its present level.

EXTENT OF FORMATIONS

That the formation in which the remains were found were not merely a local "fill" or "slump," or any other limited occurrence was next proven by further observations of the underlying strata of the plain. The long and widely separated trenches of the Haverty Company afforded exposures at such wide intervals and so fresh in their character that the facilities for these observations were unusually good.

The writer visited four other localities in the plan where trenches were open, the farthest being over a mile away, in order to observe whether the stratagraphic conditions had lateral extent and continuity. To his agreeable surprise, we found that the two formations with the discordance between them were practically continuous between these localities, and therefore demonstrated that the formations and their characteristics had persisted interally beneath the plain. There formations undoubtedly extend much farther than the present exposures reveal. We consider this question of extent a most important point.

CONCLUSIONS ON AGE

If the reader will but remember that any conclusions now presented before investigations are completed are but temporary and conjectural, the writer will venture to project a few remarks of this character, with the full knowledge and belief that they may become obsolete at any moment, and that the last word must come in the final publications of the museum and its savants.

The chief point he wishes to make is to state his conclusion that the remains are not superficially or intrusively interred, but that they occur in prehistoric strata, and are therefore entitled to be considered as "ancient."

The relative antiquity of the interment is proven clearly by the stratigraphy. The strata in which the bones were found are those of a well-defined formation which has wide extent beneath the plain, and which are relatively old because they are overlain by a later formation, deposition having been separated by a land interval. The later formation while very recent looking is probably also relatively older than some ancient-looking talus fans or "cones" which are apparently spread over it. This is not positively proven.

Having at least ascertained that the remains had considerable antiquity and were actually entombed in prehistoric strata, I refrain from interpretation of this antiquity into human years otherwise than to express the opinion that they are many years older than any remains we heretofore have found in the United States.

GLACIAL EPOCH?

This, perhaps, is the hardest question of all to answer now concerning the Los Angeles Man. The writer's present but tentative opinion is that his time does not extend back quite that far, or if he did live in the great ice age, it was during the very last days thereof.

Those who at present try to assign a definite number of human years to the age of the Los Angeles Man are broadly guessing. Nevertheless all precedents concerning the nature of the deposits in which they were found suggest that they are many thousands of years old. Even if further study should prove that they were but 3000 years old such a fact would take the age of man on this continent back a thousand years further than we have any postive record now.

Many problems remain to be investigated. The stratum in which the remains are found may prove to be the overthrown continuation of strata which are continuous in the Baldwin Hills instead of a lacustral filling of the fault trough.

In this article the writer has followed the latter hypothesis but he anxiously awaits the further opinion of D. W. S. Kew, now absent from the city, who, from his familiarity with the details of these strata, is more competent to pass on this particular problem.

MAY BE SURPRISE

It is hoped, however, that in this city of many competent individual scientists the facts of this occurrence may be so recorded that no future question of its veracity may arise. Recorded observations from such eminent academic geologists and members of the Geologic Society of America resident in Southern California, as Wolff, Arnold, Gail, Kew, Vickery, Vaughan and others would be of great value. And Dr. Bryan willingly is trying to obtain them.

Back of the whole subject, however, as in every science, there is the misty beginning, and no one yet knows but that prior to the American Indian imported from Asia there may have been an American indigene, the discovery of which may some day be suddenly sprung upon us just as were the unsuspected animal fauna of La Brea, and knowledge of the wonderful Cro-Magnon race of Europe in the caverns of Altamira in Spain were but recently, suddenly and unexpectedly revealed.

YOUNG BRIDE WILL LEAVE AND FORGET

Wife of Few Days Seeks Annulment from Husband Forger Suspect

Pretty Mrs. Stephen Blakesley, whose husband of but a few days was arrested Friday night on a charge of forgery, is to go away to try to forget as soon as her annulment proceedings have been completed, according to a statement yesterday by her mother, Mrs. L. R. Post, at the Graham Apartments, where the arrest of young Blakesley took place.

Shortly after the marriage, which took place following a five days' courtship, Mrs. Blakesley learned from Blakesley's aunt, Mrs. Harry Forsythe of the Westlake Hotel, that his story of being a Yale graduate and the son of a wealthy manufacturer was untrue, it was stated. According to Mr. Forsythe, both he and his wife tried for years to make their nephew go to school. They finally had given him up as he had been nothing but a source of unhappiness to them, he said.

The arrest took place after an extended investigation of a draft cashed by him on March 24, last, at the Hollywood branch of the Security Trust and Savings Bank. The draft, which was for $800, bore the name of E. C. Van Tress, secretary of the alumni of the University of Indiana, and was drawn on the Citizens' Loan and Trust Company of Bloomington, Ind.

Following a telegram from that company to the Security Bank here, a detective agency took the matter in charge and the arrest of Blakesley followed. It seems that Blakesley had met Mr. Van Tress some weeks ago while they were on the same train.

Young Blakesley met his bride at a picnic given by the Ambassador Hotel, where she had been staying for more than a year. She was introduced to him by a former suitor. His dancing, charming manners, and his story of wealth and prominence, completely fascinated both her mother and herself. He apparently had both the friends and the background to fit in with his story. Both women have been unnerved by his arrest. The annulment proceedings are in the hands of Attorney Ray Nimmo.

WIFE OF DR. RHODES IN ANSWER TO SUIT

Mrs. Amy B. Rhodes denies that she falsely accused her husband Dr. Frederick B. Rhodes, former chairman of the Morals Efficiency Commission of Pittsburg, of misconduct with nurses in Pittsburg hospitals in an answer to Dr. Rhodes's suit for divorce, on file before the Superior Court. Mrs. Rhodes asks that she be awarded alimony of $400 a month. Dr. Rhodes is now practicing his profession in Los Angeles.

WARNS OF LAND SALE IN COUNTRY

State Real Estate Chief Advises Careful Buying in Distant Sections

Victimizing of real estate investors unfamiliar with country property values by unscrupulous real estate operators who evade the law and sell land fronting on country highways as good business property, was denounced yesterday in a statement given out by State Real Estate Commissioner E. T. Keiser.

Many complaints have recently been filed with the department which assert that boulevard frontage has been sold for five or six times in excess of actual value, according to the commissioner. Cases of this nature have been called to the department's attention, he said, in districts fifty miles from Los Angeles while boulevard property from twenty-five to thirty miles distant is generally being "worked."

The victims are said to be mostly widows, women with invalid husbands or people strangers in Southern California.

"Some of these real estate promoters are representing that buying along much traveled highways is a good investment as business property," the statement reads in part.

"Do not buy such property under any conditions, however, until local property owners or real estate brokers have been consulted. The promoters evade the jurisdiction of the State Real Estate Department by taking an option upon the property or purchasing it on a shoe string, thereby placing themselves in the position of the owner.

"Real estate brokers and salesmen are hereby warned against selling such property for these unscrupulous real estate operators."

Ancient Greeks asserted that there were four elements; fire, air, earth and water.

ARTIST FINISHES 'THE DOUGHBOY'

Plaster Model Sent East for Bronze Cast

Life Struggle of Sculptor Inspiring Story

Pedretti and His Masterpiece

Local Sculptor at Work

Finishes cast for statue to war dead to be erected in Pershing Square.

The plaster cast of the statue, "The Doughboy," formed by Humberto Pedretti, which is to be placed in Pershing Square in memory of the Los Angeles boys who died on the battlefields of France, has been sent to a foundry in Brooklyn, N. Y., where it will be cast in bronze.

Every effort is to be made to complete the work as early as possible, so that the finished statue may be here in time for the Memorial Day exercises.

Humberto Pedretti regrets he was not able to accompany this creation of his heart, head and hand to direct and supervise the casting of the great figure, but the committee that raised the funds for the monument through voluntary subscription was not able to pay transportation expenses.

"In the wax, one leetle accident—a good artist perhaps corrects eet, but eet is not my work. You see? My inspiration? Could I but half gone—" and then Humberto Pedretti shrugs his shoulders, makes a queer little grimace keenly regretful. With swift change of expression he continues: "It ees a wonderful demonstration to the memory of the poor boy who gave his life to his country. The most important monument morally speaking—the most high. In any new city the first development ees the material, the spiritual must come later, and I believe Los Angeles ees now arriving at that point."

SECRET OF SUCCESS

The marvel of Pedretti's success in creating "The Doughboy" fraught with a majesty in pride and protective spirit, lies within the sculptor himself. Those familiar with the life story of Humberto Pedretti know that he carried on as staunchly for the sake of his art and his family as did our doughboy for his country and his home.

Before he did "The Doughboy," Pedretti maybe was executing some design in stone for the exterior of some edifice, or perhaps decorating a shop-window with merchandise.

"And tomorrow? Maybe tomorrow I half to go to San Pedro to paint ships on sides. What of eet! I would never half my loved ones suffer—I do anything to make a living. Something better come later. For 'The Doughboy' I am not paid so much for my work—the committee very kind but half hard time, too, to raise money."

The tale of an artist's life is more colorful, more delightful to listen to than Humberto Pedretti's so far as it has gone these forty-five years. Born in Brescia in the Lombardy country of good, but poor family, he there attended school until 15 years of age.

LIFE OF STRUGGLE ALWAYS

"In school my only occupation, drawing. Drawing my best glad always. In the academy at night, drawing. Sunday morning more drawing in the academy." Thus did the sculptor describe that first early step in his career.

But his mother was opposed to this choice of occupation, whereupon this son ran away from home. Brought back, he left again a fortnight later, this time for good. At Milan, he studied in the academy for four years, earning his way by helping at household tasks for one of his professors. A romance sprang up between the struggling student and a young lady of the ancient city. Wise counsel from friends settled the matter. Pedretti saw he could not then have two loves, so he went over into Germany.

But there the young Italian was confused by the strangeness of manners and speech. So it happened he went to Zurich, the most beautiful of cities, as he still declares. Here, though practically penniless, he first gained an existence by burning matches under plates in a restaurant and then using the blackened surface on which to sketch faces of patrons.

"I have always found sympathy wherever I have gone. I don't know what it is—," the sculptor broke off from the story's thread. It is the sincerity of this Italian, the writer would say, which wins him that great treasure to an artist, sympathy.

And so the youth stayed on in Zurich for nearly a year obtaining work in sculptoring stone.

"To scrape out from the rough block a something beautiful—Ah, it ees so wonderful! Wonderful!" suddenly exclaims the artist. Always his "first address," as Pedretti put it, was the academy where he studied at night. This artist in him drove him on. Back to Germany he went. To Munich this time. And there the artist found his real atmosphere.

Come the time in later years when Pedretti finally followed the urging of a friend in Milan to go to Mexico. Some splendid work has been done by the sculptor in the capital city of that country, although the revolution lost him some notable contracts to have been executed under the Diaz regime. A Mexican admirer of Pedretti's work and a poet of merit dedicated the following lines to the sculptor which have been translated exactly:

He is the artist who with skillful hand
wrests from the clay the supreme vibration of life and thought;
He is the artist who at his whim creates with tender eagerness, out of the granite
the plastic beauty, the exquisite smile,
the pain, the plaint, the tears,
the burst of laughter and—meanwhile his wandering chisel causing the flying particles to groan, imprints upon the hard and obdurate stone
a kiss of truth and another of life.

Pedretti said this verse summed up his philosophy. Rather it sums up his art.

DRIVE ON TO SAVE GIANT SEQUOIAS

Chamber Directors Urge $1,750,000 Fund to Make Tree Park Safe

Efforts to preserve a 4000-acre tract of giant sequoias, situated at the gate of Sequoia National Park, and to prevent the commercial exploitation of the great forested area were launched yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce.

Resolutions were passed by the chamber's board of directors for accumulation of a sum of $1,750,000 by popular subscription to be tendered Miss Victoria Scott, 5617 Lexington avenue, Los Angeles, for conservation of the timber land. Collection of the sum, it was said, will be undertaken through the American Reforestation Association.

If the project is carried to a successful conclusion, it was pointed out by C. S. Whitcomb, chairman of the agriculture and horticulture committee of the chamber, the Sequoia land may be set aside as a national monument, or the tract may be added to the National Park, which lies in close proximity.

Miss Scott, the owner, is said to be in favor of the project, as she has fought for some time against the endeavors of commercial interests to gain possession of her valuable and historic property.

Mr. Whitcomb described the proposed reserve as being the most wonderful exhibit of the remnants of the Sequoia forests not protected by Federal legislation.

MUSIC CLUB HEAD COMING

Mrs. John F. Lyons to Be Guest of Mrs. Frankel; Two Weeks' Entertainment Arranged

The music world of Los Angeles is agog over the coming on the 13th inst. of Mrs. John F. Lyons, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, and, according to the announcement of Mrs. Cecil Frankel, of whom she will be house guest during her two weeks' stay, a complete round of entertainment has been arranged for the chief executive, the high light of which will be the banquet at the Ambassador on the evening of the 14th inst., tendered by the Los Angeles Music Federation, of which Mrs. Frankel is honorary president.

She is also first vice-president of the national federation and in her official capacity she will escort Mrs. Lyons through the maze of entertainment scheduled.

The banquet reservations are open to all music patrons and lovers regardless of membership in either federation, it is announced, and may be made through Miss Antonette Ruth Sabel, executive secretary, at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters or of Mrs. Clark Ryan at phone 726-26. The features of the banquet program are a symphonic number by the Philharmonic Orchestra, through the courtesy of William A. Clark, Jr., and the singing of Cecil Fanning, baritone, whose services were secured through L. E. Behymer. The national federation claims Mr. Fanning as an artist member.

Mrs. Lyons will be received as an honorary member by the Kappa Alpha Sorority, alumnae chapter of the Sigma Alpha Iota National Sorority at the home of Mrs. F. A. Maginnis, 357 South Commonwealth avenue, the 16th inst., and with Mrs. Frankel will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the music section of the Hollywood Woman's Club on the same date. A loge party will be tendered Mrs. Lyons by the board of directors of the Philharmonic Orchestra at the concert on the evening of the 19th inst., and at a luncheon on the same date she will be the chief guest in the junior music clubs of Southern California, with Mrs. William Duffield in charge.

Mrs. Frankel will entertain Mrs. Lyons at a Mission Play Theater party and luncheon at San Gabriel the 15th inst., and at a dinner the 19th inst., Mrs. Lyons will be special guest of the Southern California Public School Music Teachers' Association, Mrs. Emma Bartlett presiding. The Wa Wan Club will be host to the busy executive at a program and tea at the Gamut Club the 23rd inst.

Mrs. Lyons will be motored up to San Francisco in company with Mrs. Frankel on the 26th inst., by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gustlin of Santa Ana, Mr. Gustlin being first vice-president of the California Federation of Music Clubs and vice-chairman of the national publicity committee. The distinguished officials will continue on from San Francisco on a comprehensive tour of the music centers of the Western States, concluding the survey at Kansas City, May 15, at which time the executive board of the federation opens sessions.

At a general council meeting of the music federation, plans for a drive to secure a fund of $25,000 for the expenses and further extension of the work of the organization, were made, Marco Hellman, treasurer, participating, and under whose auspices the campaign will function. The first big subscription was that of $3000 by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, which is also giving office space to the federation as headquarters. The balance of the fund is planned to be raised by selling associate memberships to those interested in making Los Angeles the music center of the West.

BEAUTIFIER SCORNED BY HAPPY WIFE

All Other Women Seek to Add to Charms, Says Noted Specialist

BY OLIVE GRAY

"All women like to be beautiful and most seek to enhance those charms which are the gift of nature," said Madame Rubenstein, but hastened to add: "All women except those who are happily married."

Allowing time for expiration of my gasp over the statement, Madame went on to explain that the only women who truly scorn beautification are those declaring that since their husbands love them as they are, it would be folly to add further charms. "These are hopeless," said she, "and yet I cannot but think that possibly even they are mistaken, for time is sure to erase the daintiness of unguarded feminine charms and too late, it may be learned that, after all, hubby is inclined to rest his eyes upon beauty wherever found." Madame Rubenstein, having approached the question of beautification, through a medical and surgical training during her first ventures into the professional world, for many years devoted her skill to making more lovely the haute monde, the royalties who appealed to her. Success in this field lead her to understand the need of women in ordinary circumstances to obtain that so highly prized by her more wealthy sisters.

"It was my dream to reach the mass of women who, perhaps more than those of independent means, are in need of such assistance," said Madame. "She who by reason of her business or profession, must remain youthful and maintain a good appearance; she whose heart aches because of loss of natural good looks, a calamity which has placed her 'on the shelf'—these appealed to me and it was with these in mind that I studied for years, to produce unguents and formulas which could be sold at reasonable prices. I have triumphed! And it is to advise with women thus situated that I am now making this tour."

The lovely smile irradiating the face of the famous specialist proved even more than did her words, that her deepest interest is in this work. Herself, a striking example of what care and fine beauty applications can do, the unwrinkled skin and glowing complexion contradicted the fifty-two years that she avows, Madame has a personality not soon forgotten.

To benefit women, her untiring effort, to inspire them to be their best in looks, which she believes will lead to the best in every way, Madame Rubenstein is now en route to the Orient, there to probe further into the beauty secrets said to have been treasured by celebrated beauties of the Far East. With homes and salons in the capitals of Europe and in London, as well as in New York, Madame studies ever the types of feminine loveliness and whatever may enhance their qualities.

During the coming week at Coulter's this world-famed benefactor will confer personally, as to complexion and skin requirement, giving gratis, priceless secrets and advice.

Service on Two Tram Lines to be Speeded Up

Through service to the far terminals of the Eagle Rock and Hawthorne line of the Los Angeles Railway is provided in the evening rush hours under a new schedule established today. This arrangement replaces the previous system whereby cars were operated on a four-minute headway between Avenue 45 on the north end and Arbor Vitae Station on the south end and an eight-minute headway to the far terminals. The new schedule will give a car every three and a half minutes in the evening rush period over the entire twenty-one miles of this line.

In the mid-day period seven and a half minute service will be given over the main section of the line in place of the former twelve and a half minute service and alternate cars will run through to the far terminals beyond Avenue 45 and Arbor Vitae Station on a fifteen-minute schedule.

Kindness to Animal Week Opens Today

"Be Kind to Animals Week" will be observed here beginning tomorrow. Today has been designated Humane Sunday and ministers are expected to stress the subject of kindness to animals from their pulpits.

A proclamation setting aside the week and designating today as Humane Sunday has been issued by Mayor Cryer. Schools and civic organizations have promised their co-operation in observing the week.

The movement to observe one week each year as "Be Kind to Animals Week" is fostered by the American Humane Association with the various humane organizations co-operating.

SLOW WORK

It appears that only 9 per cent of the soil in the republic of Finland is under cultivation. Evidently the Finns are not extending their fins to a proper achievement.

THE SEAMY SIDE

Among those indicted at Washington in a liquor conspiracy are three Federal marshals, a police lieutenant, a patrolman and an officer of the marines. All the departments for the enforcement of law are sometimes found on the wrong side of the fence.

WORN OUT WELCOME

A family that was invited to a birthday party came in full strength and stayed for two weeks. Now the head is being sued for board for the overtime and the court is inclined to hold the claim as good. If folks who overstay their welcome can be sued for board it will establish a wonderfully refreshing precedent.

SNUFFED OUT

Augustus Thomas, orator and playwright, who was to have made the speech presenting the name of Gov. Smith of New York to the Democratic National Convention, was beaten for delegate in his district. This is not going to keep the wet hope out of the running, but he will have to find another silver tongue or else supply Augustus with a proxy.

FOREST FIRES

There were nearly 10,000,000 visitors to the various forest reserves of the country last year and some 60,000 fires were reported as a result. Some of these blazes were disastrous and swept over thousands of acres. No wonder the government is compelled to insist upon the exercise of care and caution in all contacts of the public with the nation's timber. Every man with a cigarette is a potential firebug so far as Uncle Sam is concerned, and a camp fire may develop a holocaust. The forest reserves afford no place for fireworks.

BIG BUSINESS

More corporations are being organized in California today than there were in the days before there was any regulation or restriction. During the month of March a total of 526 new companies received their charters from the Corporation Commissioner. This is the highest number ever licensed in a single month in the history of the State. It doesn't mean anything in particular except that the affairs of the Coast are prosperously advancing and that business by a corporation is established as an advantage.

MIDNIGHT CALLS

It must be understood that in Los Angeles county, beyond the expansive limits of the beautiful city, public dancing must cease at midnight. Whether in hall, roadhouse or inn, the music must end when the hour of 12 has chimed. If the young folk cannot get enough of the jazz before midnight they must needs begin in the afternoon. The idea is that country folk should be in the hay so that they may acquire a refreshing ration of sleep before milking time. Under certain conditions the city dwellers may shake their heels an hour or so later, but in the rural districts midnight means midnight.

REMEMBER THE MAINE

It is asserted that for the first time in its history the State of Maine sends an instructed delegation to the Republican National Convention. That means that there wasn't even an arbitrary obligation when the favorite son of the Pine Tree State, James G. Blaine, was the nominee. But this year the fifteen delegates who go from Maine to the gathering at Cleveland are definitely instructed to cast their ballots for Calvin Coolidge. The President has now assembled 377 delegates and within the next two weeks will have enough pledged or instructed to compel his nomination on the first ballot. There will not even be a suggestion or look-in for any other candidate. The dramatics of the convention will have to be supplied in the choice of a running mate. It should be recognized that no man is too big to put away a Vice-Presidential nomination.

HOW ABOUT THE RENT?

The National Association of Real Estate Boards seeks to find out about the rentals of America. Are they going up or down? A survey covering more than 500 cities is being made. This inquiry is expected to be the most complete ever made. Surveys have been made at different times by the United States Department of Labor or Industrial Conference Board, but these surveys covered only the homes of workers and the housing of the poor. The present inquiry will cover at least three classes. Particulars are required of the building program and rental charges for high-class residences and apartments; for flats, houses and apartments in moderately priced locations and for the cheaper homes and tenements in the poorer residential districts. In nearly all cases the surveys are to be made under experienced and competent men under the direction of the local real estate boards. When the task is completed the figures will be of both general and local value. They will afford a barometer to hang on the wall of America.

THE NATIONAL HANDSHAKE

A NATIONAL event of more than passing news interest has just taken place at our door. The Republic of America and the Republic of Mexico have just shaken hands in cordial recognition. By this act these two nations are saying, "We be brethren." It is finely significant for these two nations themselves and it is a good example to set for all nations. Why shouldn't nations shake hands in honest friendship. Can any man point out a single lasting good that the enmities of nations have done for mankind?

One of the wisest educators of our day has just been pointing out to us the recent work of a brilliant Frenchman who now comes on the stage of history to show that the so-called "Napoleonic Legends" are, in many important respects, fables. The star of Napoleon's fame is setting deeper and deeper in the clouds of infamy. The world is learning the belated lesson that no man has ever achieved an honorable renown by specializing in the hates of men. The Corsican himself discovered this in the dark aftermath of memory on St. Helena. He wailed across the night of his despair, "I find myself out of harmony with the purpose of the universe." No man who specializes in the destruction of men ever was or ever could be in harmony with the purpose of the universe. Leigh Hunt was right when he said that "Napoleon had no great principles to stand by him at the last." Neither did Nero, nor Pompey, nor Alexander, nor any of the war specialists of history. What comforting principle is now standing by the stupefied prisoner of Doorn.

How true it is that the "name of the wicked shall rot." And Time says, "Let it rot." Righteousness says, "Let it rot." Death says, "I will see to it that the name of the wicked shall rot." This is not a preachment. It is destiny. It is on all the sign posts along the well-worn roadway of the ages. Militarism has always traveled the road to infamy and not the road to fame. The prizes of real renowns are always in the zones of living service to mankind.

America's handshake with Mexico is a refreshing example of national friendship. The hour is ripe for such expressions of national friendship, the more the better. God knows the world is sick enough of the sword. President Coolidge stands for the great international policy of fraternity. When Ambassador Warren of the United States was so graciously received by President Obregon of Mexico a few days ago it was a fine word of Obregon when he said, "President Coolidge's expressions plainly indicate and reveal his good intentions toward Mexico's constitutional government and hopes for the prosperity of my country." It is great for these next-door-neighbor republics to be cementing such national friendships. Of course the supreme thing is the spiritual significance of it all. It means that Mexico will co-operate with America and that America will co-operate with Mexico to help put across the world's program of international world peace. It means as it means with the Dominion of Canada that a line of fence posts is a sufficient boundary line between two friendly nations.

It means away with all thoughts of bayonets and butchery and blood. It means mutual upbuilding and mutual service. And is not the friendly fence post better than guns and swords? Let the line of posts between the United States and Canada be the answer. The policy of the gunman is a policy of insanity. The policy of the post is the policy of intelligent, co-operative and constructive peace.

This handshake of the United States and Mexico will surely be of economic value to both countries. It will encourage the exchange of products which will be mutually profitable. The United States has some things that Mexico needs. Mexico has some things we need. By fair exchange let each help to supply the other's need. This will create a business fellowship of mutual service. This is desirable, not only between America and the Republic of Mexico, but it is a good economic example for all nations. A fair national and international exchange of products will help much to national and international friendships.

The same should be true industrially. It is but fair and honest that the State of California, at least, should cordially recognize the usefulness of the Mexican in the sugar-beet fields, street and excavation service, as well as valuable service in constructing and keeping in repair railroad and street-car tracks. Much of this is done here by the faithful Mexican's mind and muscle. It is a valuable service. Let the American citizen be fair enough minded to appreciate this sort of arduous toil.

Educationally the Mexican will appreciate the advantages offered by American schools. In Los Angeles city there is a great community center conducted by Christian Americans wholly in the interest of Mexicans and their children. This is a sincere Christian handshake with Mexico. American men of means have given large property values to this Mexican plaza enterprise, and others will do so when they are fully aware of its educational, civilizing and humanitarian significance. Hundreds of Mexican children are now being taught the principles and practices of good citizenship in this great civic center in Los Angeles. Men and women will go from this educational community whose lives and characters in the years to come will touch many pivotal points in the Mexican Republic. And the influence of these Mexican men and women educated here will make largely for happier homes and better social conditions when they take up enlarged activities in their native Republic of Mexico. The whole purpose of this educational enterprise is to teach and train people for good, honest, industrious, and wholly reliable citizenship. It now ministers to the sick and suffering and helps in every honest way that it can the needs of the Mexican people and the Mexican Republic.

There should be a growing social, educational and patriotic fellowship between these two republics for a thousand years. Why not? It is not to the real interest of either to do other than help the other. Let this be the mutual attitude and it will make mightily for a lasting peace. Is it not a far greater thing to help build up a neighbor nation in every honorable way than it is help tear it down? Each nation will prosper when it sincerely rejoices in the other's prosperity. Let the spirit shown so lately by Ambassador Warren of America and President Obregon of Mexico permanently characterize these two national neighbors.

Let the citizens of these republics school themselves more and more to think in terms of friendship, industry, honesty, education and Christianity. Shall we not take home to our hearts the lessons which are now coming to us afresh from the tumbled tombs of the Pharaohs?

And what is the record we read in the dust of those tyrants. It is this, that the tramplings of rulers on the rights of others trample at last the thrones of tyranny into the drifted dust.

The weapons and scepters and time-tumbled thrones
Are wasted and worn like a dead pauper's bones;
No beauty remains in the mummy dust pile,
Where Death sets the fashion and fixes the style;
And the wind of the desert still heedlessly flings
The drifts of dead dust in the Valley of Kings.

Live and let live, love and be loved, that is the way to happiness and immortality, both for individuals and nations. Let us be wise and travel these highways of the heart. Let the national handshake in the Mexican palace be the symbol of a long and lasting peace.

BEAUTY IN DISTRESS

Ask the average American what Bessarabia is and he will probably guess that it is a variety of oriental rug or tapestry. But in Eastern Europe Bessarabia has become a fighting term, a word that fans the fires of national and racial hatreds, a word that deepens the wrinkles in the brows of aged European diplomats.

For Bessarabia is a new Alsace-Lorraine created by the World War. It is a debatable land lying between Rumania and the soviet Ukraine, one of the great wheat bins of Europe. It is capable of producing enough grain to feed a population of 15,000,000 and it has a population of less than 2,000,000 to support.

Rumania has it—on paper—but the soviets have been harvesting the crops. Russia has not relinquished its claim; and the soviet Cabinet has called upon the other European governments to support its claim to the territory, based on prior right and possession.

Rumania feels that it is too weak to defend the territory against the powerful soviets single-handed; and King Ferdinand and Queen Marie are making a tour of the European capitals ostensibly paying social visits, but in reality seeking new pacts to lend military aid in repelling probable soviet aggression.

They are royal diplomats, propagandists. Queen Marie is said to be the most beautiful, the most fascinating of the royal consorts of Europe. It is for her to win hearts; and it is axiomatic that where the heart has gone the head soon follows. Rumania sought a defensive pact with Italy; but it seems that Mussolini preferred to go to the aid of the strongest and made a pact with the soviets instead. It now develops that it was to avoid a discussion of the Bessarabian question that the Italian government declined to receive a visit from the Rumanian monarchs.

Now the Rumanian King and Queen are proceeding to Paris. The French are notably defenseless before beauty. The Poincare Cabinet has steadily declined to enter into a Franco-Rumanian pact. But Poincare and his associates must now undergo a siege by the beautiful Rumanian Queen.

Rumania has claims against the soviets that the Allied powers cannot deny, but that they apparently seek to evade. When Rumania entered the World War the government sent $100,000,000 in gold and the crown jewels to the Russian treasury for safe-keeping. Pledges for safe return as soon as the war should be over were given by the Czar. Lenin and Trotzky seized the gold and jewels and the soviets still retain them. Their rightful possession was recently offered as a counter-claim against Rumania's titular possession of Bessarabia.

So Queen Marie will appeal to the European chancellories as beauty in distress. She will implore Latin and Anglo-Saxon chivalry to restore her diadem. It all reads like a romance of the days when knighthood was in flower with a twentieth-century setting. Mussolini, the practical, ungraciously quibbled and dodged the issue. One wonders what impression her royal plea will make upon Poincare and MacDonald.

DON'T BE A CLAM

There is a dispute on over the question whether a clam suffers pain. It appears that a clam has no brains and it is urged that it has no sense of hunger, thirst or pain. On the other hand, there is an instinct of self-preservation that prompts a clam to resist efforts to open its shell. While Congress is investigating things it might make an effort to determine the status of the clam. It seems to be assured that the clam has no sense of humor and, therefore, might accept the attentions of the solons as a serious attempt to mitigate its condition or advance its interests. In the matter of keeping its mug closed against efforts to draw it out the clam furnishes an example which successful statesmen have followed. In the face of this it may be rash to assert that a clam has no brains. It would possibly be better if we should devote some attention to the humble clam instead of engaging in resultless wrangling over the German reparations.

FROM HEADQUARTERS

Secretary Hughes is expected to serve as temporary chairman of the New York Republican convention. As a keynoter for the Empire State he may also sound the tocsin for the national campaign.

RIPPLING RHYMES

THE RIOT ACT

I searched throughout the flat and couldn't find my hat; I whooped around and pawed the ground and kicked the Thomas cat. All up and down the stairs and underneath the chairs and in the hall and on the wall I looked and growled like bears. I dared the cellar's gloom, explored the sitting room; I sternly scanned the parlor grand where "Yards of Roses" bloom. I looked in bin and vat, 'neath curtain, doily, mat, shook all the rugs and emptied jugs and couldn't find my hat. I to the women went and voiced my discontent; "You hide my tile with fiendish guile and do not care a cent. I've seemed a total loss, I've put no bluffs across; but when you've hid my stately lid, I'll show you who is boss. I put my foot down flat; I ask you, where's my hat? Where is the toque that left me broke? Where is my kelly at?" "Your hat is on your head," the giggling housewife said; "and while you searched your lid was perched upon your ringlets red." 'Tis thus with married gents who voice their loud laments; the riot o'er they walk the floor and feel like twenty cents. Their wrath is burning strong, they spring their dance and song; and when the fray has ebbed away they're always in the wrong.

THE SAGE OF CALABASAS

The New York Legislature is wrestling again with the so-called pure-book bill, a version of which was defeated last year. Newspapers and publishers alike declared it imposed a virtual censorship. Though everybody agreed the line had to be drawn somewhere.

The trouble is, where? The New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, defeated in several recent court actions, says the old law is as full of holes as a sieve.

The society won't concede that the courts might be right and the society wrong about the books the society tried to suppress.

But it can easily be proved that judgments differ, even among people acting with the best motives in the world, such as librarians.

Here's the proof:

The Pasadena Public Library has at least one book on its open shelves that is barred from general circulation in Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn public library has on its open shelves several books that are kept locked up in the Los Angeles Public Library.

The librarians in all three cities are doubtless acting according to their best judgment and no criticism of them is here intended. Certainly not even the Vice Society would impute to them ulterior motives. But they do not agree where the line is to be drawn—and they are book experts.

It isn't any use to suggest that the place for censorship is in the home, even though that is the fact.

EDWARD C. KRAUSS.

PEN POINTS

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania spoke a mouthful when he said immigration must be regarded from a selfish standpoint.

Cal Coolidge is the first New Englander in the White House since Franklin Pierce. Seventy-two years is a long time between Presidents.

Flood of European convicts and other trash reported coming this way and Congress is still hemming and hawing over the immigration bill.

An eminent writer says that we do not sing enough. It isn't that so much as it is that frequently the wrong people persist in doing the singing.

A prominent Britisher is being tried in Mexico for selling arms and ammunition to the rebels. Has England already forgotten the "Alabama Claims"?

Los Angeles is now nearer to last year's rainfall than San Francisco. Well, we have more thirsty mouths to satisfy. The law of supply and demand still works.

"Jamie" Brown, former Scottish miner, now lives in Hollywood Castle at British expense. Labor government may be of the reform variety, but it is not overlooking the plum tree.

Maine, for the first time in history, has sent an instructed delegation to a national convention. And Coolidge is the precedent breaker. But Maine has another tradition that holds good.

A few more arrests and a few more killings will make the local bandit business decidedly unpopular. A lot of footpads have lost their occupations this year—feet first. May they have no successors.

China has decided not to levy a tax on blind singing girls. She might go a step further and give a bonus to the dumb ones. But only those who have heard a Chinese singing girl at close range can appreciate these acts.

A citizen of Iowa can instantly extract the cube root of any number, even if it runs into the millions. An amazing feat. Now we would like to know under what head an employment bureau would classify him if he applied for a situation. "Unskilled Labor"? Probably.

The street in Genoa, Italy, named only five years ago for President Wilson, hailed as the savior of Europe, has just been renamed for the leader of the Fascisti. But, then, a street name in Italy doesn't mean any more than a cigar brand in America. Neither confers immortal honors in the hall of fame.

THIS IS THE DAY

First Congress under the Constitution met at New York in the year 1789. George Washington was chosen by count of electoral vote President of the United States.

The battle of Shiloh was fought in the year 1862—Gen Grant, with an army of 45,000 Union men, against 40,000 Confederates under Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston. The battle lasted till late the next day, when Gen. Lew Wallace arrived with Union reinforcements and the Confederates retreated in good order. Gen Johnston was killed in the first day's fight. Shiloh was one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War.

Commander Robert E. Peary, U.S.N., discovered and reached the North Pole in the year 1909. For this feat he was promoted to be a rear-admiral in the United States Navy.

Resolution by Congress declaring war against Germany was signed by President Wilson in the year 1917.

The Lancer

PEARSON W. BANNING, perpetrator of the fake Franklin Fund and other lies of international proportions, found a good outlet for his peculiar form of genius in his business life.

He was in the business of tracing genealogies—inventing family trees for social weeds.

During the war he also found scope for his imagination. He was one of the leaders of the amateur secret service men who sleuthed around Los Angeles—lurking and listening in the shadows in the hope of hearing some fat old German cobbler say that the Kaiser was a nice feller; Ja!

The Tired Sleuth

ONE of these patriots who liked to play detective during the war days was detailed to watch Gen. Obregon—for heaven only knows what reason—when the present President of Mexico visited Los Angeles.

Gen. Obregon felt so sorry for the poor chap—seeing him snooping around the hotel corridors at all hours of the night—that he opened the door of his room and asked the amateur detective if he wouldn't like to come in and sit down a while and do his shadowing at closer range. The sleuth gratefully accepted and spent the rest of the evening smoking the general's cigars.

All Is Good

BUT I believe in the doctrine that something good can be said about everybody. Even about the amateur secret service. So I will say this: that they weren't as tiresome as the four-minute men who made speeches at the movie theaters.

Hate Factories

LOOKING back upon the hysteria of those war days, only one feature is absolutely beyond forgiveness.

The army officers who put up the stuffed figures of German soldiers in our training camps and told the boy recruits: "Now there is the Hun who raped your sister and murdered your mother;" and thus urged on the venom and hatred of boys at an impressionable age have a lot to answer for.

Germany needed to be licked and the Allies made a workmanlike job of it; but there was no reason why the task should have been stained by the shame of lies and fakes. No reason why hatred, the lowest of all human emotions, should have been ground into the souls of young boys. This nation is paying the penalty for that, right now, in crime waves. And there are still many installments to be paid.

What Gen. Otis Said

I REMEMBER once asking Gen. Otis if, during the Civil War, he hated the enemy against whom he fought.

His reply was shocked and indignant.

"Of course I didn't hate them." he said. "Do you think I am a murderer? If I hated them I should have refused to fight against them as a soldier. The only possible moral justification for a soldier is that he kills without malice—as a public duty."

Mary Takes a Chance

MARY GARDEN is going to take a flyer on the stage in connection with "The Miracle" in New York.

Mary had better stick to opera. She has a wonderful reputation for the fine acting she could do if she were of a mind to really try her hand at it; but she had better not try her hand at it.

Remember Geraldine Farrar. Miss Farrar was another singer who had won renown for her active ability in connection with her operatic work.

Geraldine yielded to the blandishments of Cecil De Mille and went into pictures in order to give her histrionic art full scope. The result was that she spoiled De Mille's superb picture, "Joan the Woman."

Her version of Jeanne d'Arc was truly amazing. It suggested something about halfway between a scrub lady and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg.

The Real Joan

THERE is this much to be said for the lovely Geraldine, however. No actress who ever lived could possibly play Jeanne d'Arc with satisfaction to the public. The sainted Jeanne was a dream lady. Your dreams of her are not my dreams.

The more they attempt to analyze her the more dim and misty does she become. One theory is that her success as a soldier was due to divine messages sent straight from heaven. An Australian physician, on the other hand, has written a book recently to prove that she was a case of retarded sexual development and had the mind of a moron.

No one has ever been able to account for her success as a soldier.

The truth is all military successes have largely been unaccountable.

At Waterloo Napoleon, the greatest expert of all modern warfare, allowed himself to be outfigured by a very crude military device originated by the Duke of Wellington, who was probably the stupidest gentleman who ever led an army into battle—assisted by a stodgy, fat-headed, old German named Blucher.

A Dangerous Precedent

IN CONVICTING this man Clark in San Diego of the murder of Schick, who is missing, the distinguished judge on the bench probably had ample legal justification. But from the standpoint of the mere layman it is a discomforting decision.

It would seem to be stretching a long judicial point to declare a man murdered because nobody can find him. In this particular case it seems to be morally certain that the man was murdered and by Clark. But such a legal doctrine certainly opens alarming possibilities.

ancer

Last year Otis Skinner pro a play called "My Antonio" and critics almost hooted it of stage because the hero of the had been convicted of the m of a man whose body was found and who afterward turned alive.

Tax Unfairness

ONE of the blessings that w herited from the Wilso ministration was the income tax.

It operates in favor of rich y men who inherit their money, almost renders success impo for a young man trying to fig own way up.

Consider the case of a wright, for instance. Let us that during his writing lifetim has succeeded in getting six to the stage. Of these, five probably be failures; the six knock-out.

Trend of Political Thought and Action

By the Sentry on His Beat

Thirty days from today the Republican and Democratic electors of California will name delegates to their respective national conventions.

It is probable that before the California Presidential primary occurs other States already will have pledged a sufficient number of delegates to guarantee President Coolidge the Republican nomination on the first ballot. Such a situation would enable the Republicans of California to virtually assure the President's nomination without opposition and by acclamation, as it is almost certain that the few delegates Senator Hiram Johnson now has and the few he will be able to add prior to the Republican National Convention will demand their release if California declares for the President.

The first real test of strength in the Coolidge-Johnson contest, if, in view of the President's overwhelming lead, Mr. Johnson may be accepted as a contestant, will come in Michigan tomorrow and in Illinois and Nebraska Tuesday. The national Coolidge headquarters confidently expects victory not only in these States, but in the various other State primaries and conventions to be held within the next few weeks, as predictions are constantly made that President Coolidge will have far more than the necessary 555 votes for the nomination before May 1.

Registration for the May primary in California closed yesterday. Reports from various sections of the State, including local figures, indicate that more than 1,200,000 voters are registered and that the current registration, although below a possible maximum, will be the largest in the history of California. Approximately one-third of the total registration for the State is located in Los Angeles county.

The nearness of an election is having its customary deadly effect upon certain enthusiastic campaigners, and optimistic predictions as to local and State majorities for the rival candidates are being recklessly made. This form of political sport is particularly attractive to Johnson managers and workers, who appear to be in disagreement as to whether their candidate will win by 50,000 or 150,000—such predictions, of course, being made for publication and not for mutual self-delusion. As for actualities, the Johnson camp is not too sanguine and many of the best informed supporters of the Senator believe he will be defeated.

Inasmuch as this gloomy outlook has served to redouble the efforts of Mr. Johnson's proponents it has had a healthy influence on his campaign in this State and doubtless will continue as a spur to sustained activity.

The Watchman is convinced that altogether too much complacency exists in California as to the certainty of President Colidge receiving the Presidential delegation from this State. From everywhere, north, south and central, reports are pouring into the Coolidge headquarters here and in San Francisco to the effect that the Coolidge victory will be a memorable one. There are many reasons for believing that such reports are as accurate as may be, but it has been inevitable that many well-wishers of Mr. Coolidge have permitted themselves to become overconfident.

Elections ordinarily are positive and not negative affairs. That is, an election is won rather than lost, and while the declining political prestige of Mr. Johnson in California indicates that his machine has lost its grip on the State, that fact alone does not guarantee a Coolidge victory.

Hiram Johnson established the foundation of his personal political machine in San Francisco and from that point has made himself formidable through affiliation with local politicians and organizations in other sections of California. During the time he was regarded as the leader of the Progressive party in this State he was backed by thousands of sincere men and women who now accuse him of hypocrisy, duplicity and selfish expediency. He retains in large measure, however, the support of the professional politicians to whom he has given political place and patronage. It is this element that now urges California voters to hand him the empty honor of an indorsement for the Presidency when such indorsement is meaningless and, in its possible effect upon Republican party interests in the nation, mischievious and harmful. Victory for Mr. Johnson in this State will in no manner whatsoever affect the candidacy of Mr. Coolidge, but a victory for Mr Coolidge in California will effectually remove opportunity for a division of Republican strength in the November election.

Mr Coolidge, as President of the United States, may not become an active candidate or permit his official acts to degenerate into campaign maneuvers. As a candidate, while enjoying the advantage and prestige of office, he must rely upon the fairness and discernment, rather than upon the enthusiasm and sentiment of the people to assure his election. The dignity of the high office he occupies prohibits him from replying to misrepresentation and unfair attack. He proceeds on the realization that if he administers his office calmly and judicially he will be accused of hesitation and vacillation, and if he acts expeditiously and energetically he will be charged with snap-judgment and precipitancy. Or, in other words, that whatever he does or does not do will be criticised by such of his opponents as are to be catalogued as political Hessians and claptrap orators.

Mr. Coolidge has had more than an ordinary share of attack and vilification, yet no man in contemporary public life has a stronger hold upon public confidence and respect. For campaign purposes some of his adherents may regret that he is lacking in qualities that appeal to emotions rather than to reason, but his very honesty and integrity and earnest dedication to duty are the factors that make him great—greater than any personality seeking to succeed him as President.

In view of these and other phases of the 1924 Presidential contest there is every reason why California Republicans should join with the Republicans of the nation in keeping him in the White House.

The Democratic mass meeting held in Los Angeles last week and addressed by William G. McAdoo, candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, was a success in point of numbers. It was more than a success in this regard and several hundred exasperated men and women were turned away. In fact only a large amount of persistence and argument enabled such stalwart Democrats as Federal Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Mattison B. Jones, John B. Elliott and Robert Hanley to squeeze into crowded Philharmonic Auditorium. The speech delivered by Mr. McAdoo was desultory and with few exceptions a typical campaign utterance. His hearers for the most part were friendly and responsive. Yet Frank P. Doherty, manager of Senator Johnson's campaign in Southern California, who attended the meeting, agreed with The Watchman that the McAdoo rally might be ascribed as much to curiosity as to party loyalty, and as for Mr. McAdoo's advertised topic—"The Scandals in Washington"—he skirted this subject so far as he himself is concerned and dismissed the whole subject with a most uninspiring and stereotyped partisan attack upon his Republican opponents.

McAdoo headquarters in Southern California have been opened in the Stowell Hotel under the direction of John P. Carter. Northern California headquarters are located in the Democratic State Committee rooms in San Francisco.

Mr. Carter, who never lacks for expression, has this to say concerning Mr. McAdoo and the McAdoo meeting here:

"We want the people of the country to know where the Democrats of California stand as supporters of McAdoo, and we want the record to be made clear by the greatest Democratic vote in the State ever polled at a primary. It is our earnest hope that the so-called opposition manages to keep alive until that date on the printers ink diet of their great and good friend, William Randolph Hearst, which seems to be their sole sustenance and their one visible means of support up to this time.

"In his speech at the Auditorium Wednesday evening Mr. McAdoo spoke for the true Democracy of the State when he challenged this so-called opposition to name its choice of candidate or candidates, to record publicly its principles and to take a stand upon national issues which must come before the Democratic National Convention in its consideration in platform building."

WOMAN IN SLAYING FREED; COLLAPSES

RELATIVES FOR AND AGAINST ACQUITTAL PRAY AS JURY DELIBERATES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Mrs. Essie Gross was acquitted last evening by a jury in Judge Mancuso's Court of General Sessions on an indictment charging her with the murder of her husband, Irving, last December.

As the foreman announced, "We find the defendant not guilty," Mrs. Gross collapsed in a chair. She was raised to her feet again by a matron, and as the jury was being discharged she reached down and kissed the right hand of her lawyer, Leonard Snitkin.

When Judge Mancuso began his two and a half hours charge to the jury, twelve men and twelve women, relatives of the accused woman, led by her father, Samuel Kaufman, a peddler, obtained permission to hold a prayer service in an adjoining vacant court for the liberation of the defendant. Many of those who participated in the service were elderly.

Relatives and friends of the slain man then grouped in a distant end of the corridor and joined in a prayer that she be convicted.

Mrs. Gross admitted she killed her husband but declared they were scuffling for a gun. She said he had been brutal to her.

Costume Class of University to be Opened

If mother likes cream puffs, is getting corpulent and her clothes won't fit, there's no excuse. Thin women and plump ones are joining the University of California's class in costuming in order to learn just what type of materials and what styles to chose in order to make ungraceful lines of figure look otherwise.

The class will meet at Bullock's, ninth floor, the 16th inst., from 9 to 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Louise Pinkney Sooy, assistant professor of art at the University of California, Southern Branch, conducts the class.

The ten lectures of the course will also take up the subject of color, its becomingness and emotional significance, costumes as a background for personality, correct in dress and will even delve into the subject of hats, accessories and hair-dressing.

A fashion review in which attractive university girls will act as mannequins will terminate the course.

Registrations for the class are taken at 815 South Hill street.

Chamber Fights Curtailment of Drill Officers

A report that the personnel of the training officers engaged in conducting military classes in local high schools and universities for the Reserve Officers Training Camp would shortly be curtailed by 50 per cent resulted in the passing of a resolution by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce requesting the War Department not to make the proposed change. According to information gained by Andrew J. Copp, Jr., chairman of the committee on military and naval affairs of the Chamber of Commerce, the staff of seven officers in Los Angeles, headed by Col. E. W. Clark, will shortly be reduced by three or four men.

As there are ten institutions where the Reserve Officers Training Camp units have been formed, it requires a large force of training officers. In the ten classes, there are approximately 1500 students. If the force of training officers is depleted, it is feared some of the units may have to be given up.

Veteran Home Project Given Aid by Chamber

In support of the movement launched by the board of managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which requests the erection of a new hospital building at the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution yesterday requesting Congress to make an appropriation for the project.

Support was given the movement by the Chamber of Commerce upon the request of Gen. George H. Wood, president of the board of managers for National Homes. In his communication, Gen. Wood pointed out that the Pacific Coast territory was receiving the large share of new inmates in soldier homes throughout the country.

Owing to this fact, hospital facilities at Sawtelle have become extremely inadequate and in order to relieve the situation, Congressman Fredericks was urged to present a bill calling for an appropriation of $500,000 for the erection of a new hospital.

The bill is now pending before Congress and according to its plans, a two-story fireproof building with a capacity of 500 beds will be constructed providing the appropriation is made.

DETROIT PLAN VERSUS OURS

Public Ownership Minus Politics Described

Pay Taxes But Not Officials; Fare is Six Cents

No Depreciation Fund is Set Aside from Earnings

Municipal ownership with a difference, the Detroit as contrasted with the Los Angeles plan, was described here yesterday by Griffith C. Ellis, president of the Detroit Municipal Railway Commission, who is spending his winter vacation this year in Southern California as the guest of relatives in Altadena.

Detroit has probably the largest municipally-owned street railway system in the world—375 miles of tracks and rolling stock and equipment which constitute an aggregate investment of approximately $41,000,000. Responsible for the administration of the property are three men, unfriendly by training and disposition to the experiment which they are now conducting, unacquainted with politics, and receive for their work not one cent.

Griffith C. Ellis, president of the commission, is vice-president of the Bank of Detroit and president of the Sprague Publishing Company.

John J. Barlum is president of the American State Bank and owner of two Great Lakes shipping companies.

H. A. Esselstyne is a civil engineer in private practice.

William B. Mayo, general manager of the system, is chief engineer of the Ford Motor Company. He gets no pay, either.

"My training as a business man," said Mr. Ellis yesterday, "led me to the conclusions shared by most other American business men—I was opposed to government ownership or, for that matter, to encroachment by government upon the functions of private business, except when absolutely necessary, and then as little as possible. I am not active in politics, never have been and have no ambitions to be.

AGNOSTIC ON SUBJECT

"Perhaps agnostic is the best word to describe my attitude toward the experiment which Detroit is now conducting under the commission of which I am president. I am not prepared to say that municipal ownership is a success, even in Detroit—only time can demonstrate that—much less that it would be a success for the cities of the nation at large. I do not claim that we are pleasing everybody, for I know we are not. All I say is that, if our administration be reasonably reviewed, we shall be shown to have accomplished as much as could rightfully be expected of us.

"We are paying all charges against the property. We are putting back into it about $1,000,000 a year, in the shape of extensions, equipment and rolling stock. That represents our net earnings, over and above interest and sinking fund charges of about $4,000,000 annually.

"We accept no aid or favors from other departments of the municipal government, just because we happen ourselves to be a part of it. If we borrow money, whether from the banks or, by way of an advancement, from the city comptroller, we pay the ruling interest rate. When it was proposed that the city pay for pavement laid between the rails of the municipally owned street railway, we refused to concur. In Detroit as in most other American cities, the railway always had been required to lay the pavement and we insisted that our experiment be conducted under precisely the same conditions as governed private business in the same field elsewhere. By accepting a gratuity from the city and permitting the taxpayers to do the paving, we could have saved $1,000,000 a year, but we refused on principle. And, of course, we pay full taxes.

"We have been censured because we carry no depreciation account. We believe in the principle of such accounts and the time is not distant when we shall open one of our own, but for the present we need all our money for repairs and replacements. Our best answer to criticism, perhaps, is that admittedly the property is now in far better condition than it was when we took it over.

"All repairs and replacements have been paid for out of earnings. I do not know whether we are required legally to do so or not, and it makes little difference, for we assumed that we were and we knew that if we were not we ought to be. Money raised by bond sales has been spent on nothing but extensions and the purchase of new equipment.

GET NO PAY

"Our chief engineer, Mr. Mayo, is getting no salary. His predecessor received $15,000 and we expect, when Mayo has been relieved of the emergency duty he is now performing, to pay his successor on a scale commensurate with what his abilities would command elsewhere.

"We ourselves get no pay. That, too, is probably a condition that cannot endure. Our duties do not take all our time, but they require a considerable share of it.

"Such success as has been ours I attribute to first, our strict adherence to sound business principles, as established in the general fund of business experience, and, second, freedom from political interference. Under the Detroit charter we are responsible to nobody but the Mayor. The City Council cannot meddle.

"We are appointed directly by the Mayor, not subject to confirmation by the Council, and our terms run indefinitely—that is to say, at the pleasure of the Mayor.

"Municipal ownership was undertaken by Detroit as an emergency measure. The city and the Detroit United Railways had been at loggerheads for years. The people were getting more and more exasperated, the city was being strangled for lack of adequate service, the company was getting more and more apprehensive of the future and was spending less and less money, the property was running down, and there was nothing in such a situation to attract new capital.

"Finally, in 1920, the people authorized a bond issue of $15,000,000, and eighty-five miles of new track were laid, for which $13,500,000 was spent, together with the rolling stock and power equipment.

"In February, 1921, the new cars were running and the following spring the franchise of the Detroit United ran out. We took over the property. The final price paid for 275 miles of track, rolling stock, power-houses and all, was $19,835,000. Since then the people have voted $10,000,000 more and nearly 100 miles of added track have been laid.

BUY PART OF POWER

"Part of our power we generate ourselves, part we buy from the Detroit Edison Company. The company and the city have always got along together very smoothly, but there came a time when the company told the city quite frankly that it did not care to concentrate too much of its business in one large account.

"That, of course, was sound business from the investors' viewpoint, but it left the city with a shortage of current, and now it is building a lighting plant of its own, on a rather ambitious scale.

"Increased wages to platform men, awarded by an arbitration committee to which a dispute was referred, have forced us to raise fares from 5 cents to 6, with strips selling at twelve for 50 cents, which brings the average down to about 5.55 cents.

"We are paying the second highest wages in the country—exceeded only by New York and Chicago—and giving the second cheapest fare. Raising the fare higher would have put us in better financial position, but we chose to reimburse ourselves only for the actual loss imposed by the arbitration award."

Spoiled the Dinner

An unexpected visit of some relatives threw a North Side home into a flurry in an attempt to produce a very tempting dinner for the hungry guests. As the call for dinner came, the smallest member of the family ran to the dining room and seeing the chicken which was the crowning glory of the feast, broke out with: "Oh, mother, is that the chicken that had the broken leg."—[Columbus Dispatch.

CHORUS IS REHEARSING FOR OPERAS

Advance Sale of Seats for Season Next Fall Now Under Way

Under the direction of Alexander Bevani, the 100 members of the chorus of the Los Angeles Opera Association are making splendid progress.

The words and music of the difficult opera, "Andrea Chenier," have already been mastered and the singers are now working on "Manon." Rehearsals are held four nights a week at the Y.M.C.A., where a rehearsal room has been given the association without charge.

Members of the executive committee of the opera association were at the rehearsal Friday evening.

"We have the making of a fine troupe," said Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, president. "With the great stars we have under contract, the Philharmonic orchestra and such a splendid chorus we ought to be able to present Los Angeles with a season like it has never had before."

Merle Armitage, business manager, reports there has been more than $12,000 subscribed to the fund. Before June 1, $39,000 must be raised to assure the season of opera. Committees of women working under the direction of Mrs. Dean Mason will this week attempt to put several thousands in the treasury.

Unlike past attempts to stage operas, no funds are being solicited. The seats in the Philharmonic Auditorium are merely being sold in advance. This is to be accomplished by means of patrons' and founders' books, selling at $50 and $100 each. These books are exchangeable for tickets prior to the season.

The repertoire for the season next October includes "Andrea Chenier," "Manon," "Rigeletto," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Traviata."

Some of the famous stars who will sing are Benjamin Gigli, Tito Schipa, Claudia Muzio and Guiseppe de Luca.

Haiti was founded by ex-slaves who had revolted against their masters.

MISSIONARY PIONEER OF INDIA DEAD

Dr. Van Allen, Founder of Great Hospital, Brother of Social Worker Here

News has reached here of the death at Madura, India, of Dr. Frank Van Allen, brother of Miss Jennie Van Allen, well-known Los Angeles social worker. Dr. Van Allen was internationally known as the founder of the largest hospital in Southern India and as a pioneer medical missionary in that section. His hospital, Prince Albert Hospital, was built as a result of one of India's worst epidemics of famine and disease and the funds for it were contributed by Rajas and native princes whom Dr. Van Allen converted to philanthropy.

Dr. Van Allen, in his youth, was the center of a famous controversy in which his father sought for four years to get him into Lake View High School, in Chicago, without taking the required course of study. The United States Supreme Court in 1878 decided the case in favor of the Van Allens and the selective course of study got its first start.

He graduated from Yale, taking degrees in divinity and in medicine one year apart, married and sailed for India. In the first year of its establishment his hospital treated 29,000 patients from all parts of India and Ceylon, and his reputation became widely established. He has several times offered charge of British government hospitals in India, at good salary, but preferred to stick to his own institution at $500 a year. He was a victim of his profession, becoming infected while performing an operation with a disease which caused his death. He was forced to retire two years ago.

His son, Dr. Chester Van Allen, and his daughters, Dr. Dorothy Van Allen and Miss Martha Van Allen, born in India and educated at Yale and Vassar, are now in charge of the Madura institution and are carrying on his work.

MICHAEL DOLAN SOUGHT

A request for assistance in locating Michael Dolan, 72 years of age, who disappeared from his home at 923 East Tenth street a month ago, was received yesterday by The Times from Attorney Thomas T. Robinson, with offices at 928 Merchants' National Bank Building.

Taxicab Parade Marks Start of Checker Service

Traffic in the business section was almost at a standstill during the noon hour while Mayor Cryer and other city officials assisted in the inaugural ceremonies and parade of the Fuller Taxicab Corporation. Following the defile, drivers carried everybody free until 6 p.m.

Amid blares of bands, honking of horns and cheers from the crowds, the new Checker cab fleets staged an elaborate parade. A squad of motorcycles led off. The band followed. Then came a platoon of costumed chauffeurs wearing San Browne belts.

In the first cab rode Mayor Cryer, Boyle Workman, president of the City Council, and O. R. Fuller, president of the taxi company. In the second cab were Ben C. Herschfield, vice-president and general manager of the taxicab corporation; Councilmen Criswell, Mushet and Allen, and F. D. Howell, secretary-treasurer.

More than thirty new cabs formed the line that wound through the streets, starting from the City Hall, proceeding down Broadway to First street, to Spring street, to Fifth, back to Broadway, to Ninth, back down Spring street to First and Main, south on Main to the Pacific Electric Building. After the parade the Mayor and guests were conducted to the Jonathan Club for a banquet.

Bandmaster Is Back From His Old Home Visit

Dr. E. M. Hiner, director of Hiner's Band, which has played five times at KHJ, returned Wednesday from a visit to Kansas City, his old "stamping-ground," where he organized a municipal band and served as a leader for thirty years. He was accompanied by Mrs. Hiner, whose lovely soprano voice is featured in programs with band accompaniment, and by his son Everett.

The veteran bandmaster was given an ovation in Kansas City, and responded with a series of ensemble lectures on band music and interpretation. "I returned to Los Angeles more than ever convinced that one of the greatest needs of Southern California is a great municipal band for Los Angeles," he said upon his arrival.

DOWNFALL OF WIFE IS LAID TO SMOKING

Early in 1923 Mrs. Pearl Harbold McGuire began to smoke cigarettes, her husband, Neil B. McGuire, relates in a divorce suit on file before the Superior Court today. One thing led to another, the complaint recites, until finally she ran away with Paul Suggs last December.

KHJ REDOLENT OF SPRING

Concert by Galaxy of Stars Bears Radio Fans Into Resplendent and Fragrant Woods

The waves which rolled from KHJ last night seemed to sing "Spring is Here." The refreshing atmosphere which was created by the galaxy of talent present, called back the years in their flight and took one into the shaded woods resplendent with gold and green, fragrant with the aroma of flowers.

Berenice Van Loan Gaine, the well-known pianist-composer, played an important part in producing sunshine. Her program was made up entirely of her own compositions and were rendered by her associates in a fashion that reflected her art and added credit to themselves. Tilda Rohr, contralto; Marjorie Vorhes, violinist; Henrietta Cugley, 'cellist; Sheldon Swenson, baritone, and Vera Van Loan, pianist, constituted the composer's ensemble.

SHELDEN SWENSON SINGS

Sheldon Swenson sang two numbers, one of which entitled, "Lady Silver Heels," was a song of the West and California to which Mr. Swenson's resonant voice and the spirit properly carried the song's message. Marjory Vorhes still possesses a magnetic violin, judging from the attention she attracted with her solos and splendid accompaniments. Her numbers with Tilda Rohr exhibited a complete understanding of the singer's requirements.

Tilda Rohr, whose beautiful contralto voice is not unknown to the listeners of KHJ, has an indefinable and still definite quality which enables her to render a sacred song with appropriate delicacy and then offer a catchy melody with the vim of youth. In several numbers she was also accompanied by Henrietta Cugley, in whose hands the 'cello was an instrument to charm and soothe. Her interpretation of the "Intermezzo" from "Cavalleria Rusticanna" was an example of the work this artist has always presented and which has earned the plaudits of her audience at every appearance. Vera Van Loan, one of the faculty of the Olga Steeb School, displayed rare technique in her piana solo. Beatrice Van Loan Gaine accompanied every additional number on her program.

RAYMOND COUCH RETURNS

Raymond Couch, evangelist and delineator of negro spirituals, returned to KHJ by popular demand with some new gospel songs. The infectious character of his offerings spread to the studio audience on his last appearance and when he appeared before the microphone last night, everyone who recognized him was prepared to sing. This germ took its toll in Radioland also and many were the requests for encores that followed each number. Raymond certainly has a persuading voice and personality.

The Isabelle Block String Quartette, composed of Isabelle Block, steel guitar and ukulele; Rowland Robson, ukulele and violin; George Reynod, ukulele and guitar, and Gordon Reynod, ukulele and guitar, fresh from an invasion of the East, where they won the praise of critics and the plaudits of audiences, were welcomed back to KHJ and the reception was more than cordial, if the expressions of pleasure and requests for additional selections, received over the telephone, are to be considered indicative. Spanish, Hawaiian and other popular numbers were played in the entertaining style that marks Miss Block's programs and undoubtedly the grade of training given to her pupils.

C. B. WOODRUFF SINGS

C. B. Woodruff, baritone, sang four songs of another day that must have awakened youthful memories in many of his hearers.

Fred C. McNabb delivered another of his well-constructed garden talks.

The unique, but fascinating form of preceding each vocal interpretation with a word portrayal of the character has given the matinee programs presented at KHJ through the courtesy of Barker Brothers, a nation-wide popularity and won for this public-spirited organization the gratitude of Radioland. Claire Forbes Crane, pianist-composer under whose careful direction these lecture recitals are being arranged and presented, described in word and song the meaning of "Interpretation."

A term that is usually associated with none but the more famous artists, Miss Crane defined its various applications. Miss Crane's discourse indicated a comprehensive knowledge of the subject and her piano accompaniment was rendered with finesse. The difficult task of conveying to the audience every shade and meaning of music interpretation called for an appreciation of artistic phrasing not found in the ordinary violinist. In Sol Cohen, however, were found the necessary qualifications. His serious training and broad experience gave to his performance, the delicate touch that spelled success for the program.

JUDGE LINDSEY SPEAKS

Judge Benjamin Lindsey, whose Juvenile Court in Denver enjoys a national reputation for its conversion of erring youth, came to KHJ yesterday afternoon and delivered a stirring address on the unborn-infant mortality, a condition to which the judge is now giving considerable time and thought. In his early career on the bench, Judge Lindsey's efforts were confined to the street Arab and newsboy. Later, however, the girls compelled his attention until investigations attendant upon his work brought him into contact with the peril he warned against in his radio talk, yesterday.

Claude Williams, who has been heard in the past by Radioland, rendered several piano solos in her own manner, which is tantamount to describing a very cordial reception for her offerings. Monte Weeks returned with his soft tenor voice and some new songs. The combination received its usual warm welcome and upheld the expectations of his friends.

The childen's hour would not be complete without their old friend Prof. Walter Sylvester Hertzog and his tales of history. The youngsters enjoy his lectures immensely and the professor derives much pleasure from the work.

Raymond Couch's knowledge of song is not confined to the gospel or the negro for he sang a group of children's songs that tickled the lads and lassies and made them hope he will return very soon.

PARTY FOR CHILDREN

Berenice Van Loan Gaine had a wonderful party arranged for the children. To assist her, there were Richard Headrick, the youngest radio announcer in the world, Billy Haynes, 9-year-old screen juvenile; Rosalie Tuso, 6-year-old soprano, who sings selections from opera; Tilda Rohr, contralto; Marjorie Vorhes, violinist, and Henrietta Cugley, 'cellist.

Richard sang a song and then played on his violin to the 'cello accompaniment of Miss Cugley, while Billie Haynes and Rosalie Tuso sang the number in duet. Little Rosalie offered a solo accompanied by the mandolin and Miss Gaines at the piano. Richard gave his usual talk and this was followed by another duet of Rosalie and Billie. It was a song of Easter and Miss Vorhes and her violin helped to ring the joy bells in the story glorified by music. The songs were all the compositions of Berenice Van Loan Gaine and showed a faculty of reaching the child's heart.

The children's program was one of the most delightful ever heard at KHJ and much praise is due to the men, women and children who so ably carried out the spirit of happiness in Miss Gaine's compositions.

A marked improvement in the condition of Mrs. E. R. Brainerd, prominent club woman, who was seriously ill as the result of a nervous breakdown and pneumonia, led yesterday to the announcement that her recovey is assured.

ROBBERIES ARE REPORTED

More than $300 worth of jewelry and silverware was taken by thieves who broke into the home of H. L. Reid at 711 North Formosa avenue sometime Friday night, Hollywood police were told yesterday. ## VARIETY TO MARK PROGRAM

KHJ During Next Week to Broadcast Entertainment of Widely Diverging Nature

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

Arranging programs to suit an endless variety of tastes is one of the most difficult features of broadcasting. Vocal offerings strike a responsive chord in listeners who would tune out from a jazz orchestra. Instrumental music appeals to hearers who would remove their headsets in despair if the announcement came through the air that Mr. Loud Speaker would relate tales of Africa. And the condition may reverse itself.

With this thought constantly in mind, KHJ seeks to assemble talent that will satisfy the diverging desires of its ever increasing audience. To this end, the coming week is replete with variety and is reflective of the lofty ideals that guide KHJ in its work of spreading kindness, happiness, joy and sunshine.

Sunday night the famous Russian orchestra will be introduced under the direction of Alexander Dodrohotoff, who is not only a conductor and musician of note, but is a finished craftsman in the manufacture of stringed instruments. Every member of this organization is a musician of repute and they should make an impression Sunday night at KHJ not to be erased soon.

HARMONY HOUNDS

The Hollywood Harmony Hounds, who were to appear the 4th inst, but were prevented by the illness of two of their aggregation, will be on hand Monday noon.

On Tuesday, Naum Coster, whose beautiful tenor voice was heard during the past week at a matinee program of KHJ, will appear in duets with Norma Hewlett, a soprano, who is not a stranger to Radioland. The Areon Trio, which has youth, personality and ability will be present to assist in plans for a pleasant evening.

On Wednesday a group of Marshall Stedman's dramatic pupils will display the training they are receiving to fit them for the screen and stage.

Thursday the studio will resound with the offerings of the Al Malaikah band. This organization stands high in Masonic musical circles and much is expected of them. Hatch Graham will bring his hypnotizing banjo. The Studebaker Radio orchestra will send irresistable dance melodies racing through the air. Ex-Senator George W. Cartright also will be on hand to solve some of your business problems.

STUDIO TRIO TO PLAY

Old-fashioned songs requested by her admirers will bring Floryane Thompson back on Friday and it will cause considerable surprise if she departs without singing at least a dozen. The interest in her programs never lags and every appearance adds numbers to her large following. The Frank Lloyd Studio Trio will provide music which sends actors of the silver sheet heights. This trio emotion-producing in the past.

The week will by a splendid program ranged by Mr. and Hessler both of whom vocalists and will be equally as good coming presentations doubt reach the level former performances.

UNCLE JOHN'S COLUMN

BY JOHN S. DAGGETT

is nothing more beautiful life than the faith of a child. Its pattering feet as to your arms, find their part in the sweetest music. The all-trusting smile of "Blue-eyes" reflects the purity and beauty of the wild flower the same name. The grip arms about one's neck is of happiness which nothing break asunder.

The loss of that faith is the calamity that can come father, mother, sister, brother friend, for the faith of a child portal of warmth and sunshine the human heart—a portal once closed, brings darkness the home.

Uncle John recalls a few in his life bearing on the of a child.

When he was in the first grade the public school in Kansas cyclones became so common the Board of Education di that when a storm was impending the principals of the various schools were to dismiss the children, as the schoolhouses were then made of frame and were not considered safe.

STORM APPROACHES

One afternoon the sky became dark and threatening and as the storm approached, the principal sounded the alarm for fire drill which was used to empty the building quickly. The principal stood at the main entrance at the foot of the stairway winding up the big tower to the second floor. He held the children there—those of the upper floor massed on the stairway and those of the first floor packed in the hallways waiting for him to open the door. The storm burst sooner than expected, and he feared to send the children into its fury.

My teacher was a Miss Rosenberg, and she had a little nephew who was in my grade.

Oh, how the building trembled and creaked when the storm struck it! Forgetting all else, except the safety of her little nephew, the teacher ran down an upper hall to a room on the sheltered side of the building, opened a window, climbed out on the sill, took her little nephew in her arms and jumped into a sandpile in the yard below. I had followed her because I had faith in her—I loved her as a little boy of 6 can love his teacher, and I, too, jumped into the sanpile. It was faith which gave me courage to do this.

BELFRY CRASHES

A few moments later the great belfry collapsed and the big school bell crashed down the stairway, mangling and killing many of the little children who had gathered there.

In attempting to cross the street, the wind picked me up bodily and dropped he into a wire netting which was fastened to four sticks around a tree to keep horses from gnawing the bark. There a policeman found me, extricated me from the wire and took me home. When saw my mother, I began to cry, and I remember that she told me not to be frightened, and that I said "I am not scared, but I have lost my hat"—and that was why I was crying.

Once my father took me rowing on the Kaw River, and as the boat was drifting down the middle of the stream I said that I wished that I could go swimming. "Well, jump overboard," said father. I was very lightly clad, as a little boy is, in summertime, and had taken off my shoes and stockings, and my bare feet had been hanging over the side of the boat in the water. I looked at father, apparently in doubt, and my father again said, "If you want to go swimming, jump overboard." "Do you mean it, Papa?" I asked. "Yes," he answered.

To his complete surprise, I jumped, and though I did not know how to swim, I had such faith in him that I obeyed. The faith was not misplaced for father knew the river bed and laughed heartily as I stood up in two feet of muddy water. He did not realize that he was really testing my faith. But neither one of us ever forgot it.

BITTER EXPERIENCE

Tests of faith are often bitter experiences. I call to mind the story of a little Jewish boy who was asked by his father what he wanted to be when he grew up, and he said:

"Oi sure, I'm going to be a beezness man."

"Vell, vhat kind of a beezness man?" inquired his father.

"I'm going to get somebody who makes sumthing to geev it to me for nothing, and thrust me for it until I can sell it."

"Dot's fi-i-ine, Ikey," said the father. "You're going to ask somebody to thrust you—ahh?"

"Shure, papa."

The father then took little Ikey and stood him on the sideboard in the dining-room.

"Now," sal dthe father, "Jump right into my arms, Ikey."

And little Ikey, with the wonderful faith of a child, jumped. But the father stepped back, allowing him to fall to the floor, where he bumped his nose so hard that it bled.

"Vhy did you do dot, papa?" sobbed the little boy.

"My son, I did dot to teach you dot you can't trust any one—not even your own fader—vhen it comes to beezness."

The foundation of all faith is faith in oneself, and the wise lad is he who has faith in himself and who does nothing to break it. Do not test your faith too severely. You know when you reach the danger point. That still small voice always calls to you its warning "Foolish, foolish!" it whispers. Heed that warning and you will never lose faith in yourself.

When I was a lad about 15 years of age I was spending a wonderful vacation at Catalina Island. One afternoon I was out rowing alone and beached the boat on a narrow shelf beneath a cliff. I thought it would be great fun to see if I could climb up that wall of rock above me. At one end of the tiny beach the wall shelved under so that the waves rushed up into a miniature cave. I climbed into this cave and, waiting for the water to recede, finally rushed across to the other side and worked my way out to the rocks. Then I began climbing up the face of the cliff. When I was probably fifteen or twenty feet above the water I found that I was stuck. I could neither go up nor could I get down. There I clung against the rock. Cold beads of perspiration came out on my forehead. My hands and feet got cold and I began to tremble all over. I was losing my nerve, which is nothing more nor less than faith in one's self. "The longer you hang here the worse it will become" said my inner self. "You must do something and do it quickly. You will have to jump and trust that you will land in water deep enough so that you will not be hurt."

Mustering all my courage I leaped outward from the rock, turned in the air as I catapulted and was facing the ocean when downward I splished into the water. It did not hurt me, but I admit to you that I had been very foolish and that I had unnecessarily tested that faith in myself.

These examples of actual experiences represent faith well placed, faith misplaced and faith ill-used.

ADVANCED RADIO TO BE UNIVERSITY COURSE

Students in the radio classes of the University of California have become such ardent radio fans that they have requested the university to give a course in advanced radio. This will be done at once, starting Tuesday evening in Room 810, Pacific Finance Building. Arthur Paul Hill, radio transmission engineer of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company will conduct the class. Registrations for the course may be made at 815 South Hill street.

STATIC FLASHES

A broadcasting station in the Middle West proudly announced recently that Strongheart and his Lady Jule had barked out stories from their studio. Radio broadcasting was then an old experience for Strongheart as his first appearance before the microphone was several months ago at KHJ, The Times.

University professor predicts that lying in bed and listening to that 9 o'clock lecture Monday morning may become more than a dream. Harry Lauder's famous song hit has been broadcast so often that its influence apparently is reaching into college circles. Somebody page Mr. Arbuckle and inquire of the gentleman if coffee will be served in the same manner.

One of New York's leading actors stepped to the microphone of an eastern station and related his journey from architect to actor. It was undoubtedly a "constructive" talk but the question is how did it "act" upon his listeners.

The successful musical comedy, "Lollipop" was broadcast in its entirety directly from the stage of the Knickerbocker Theater, New York City, on Friday, the 4th inst. Would the honorable society of authors, composers and publishers consider the show manager a "sucker" for letting the public in through the air?

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks agreed during their recent visit to the East to broadcast several smiles from a particular station. The event was hailed by newspapers of that section as the debut in Radioland of these two film luminaries. It happens, however, that Doug made several bows to Radioland from KHJ a considerable time in advance of his trp to the East.

What is believed to be a precedent in radio broadcasting was set recently by the Sweeney Automobile and Electrical School station when they remained on the air for thirteen hours and thirty-five minutes. The marathon craze has hit radio. Where is its next stop?

In 1915 some Brazilians caught a shark off Pernambuco and, opening it, found inside it a bag containing the papers of a steamer named Maria Quesada, which proved beyond doubt that the vessel had been chartered by the Germans and had sailed from Newport News for the purpose of helping German submarines.

ENJOYS KHJ PROGRAM ON HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

An excerpt from a letter received this week from Honolulu follows: "From about 6:30 to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 22 last, at Waimanalo, Island of Oahu, Hawaii, I listened to the splendid program of KHJ with unusual interest and pleasure. The receiving set with loud speaker is in the home of George Chalmers, manager of the Waimanalo Sugar Plantation on the windward side of Oahu and facing the California coast. These islands are said to be the farthest removed from continental lands of any islands in the world."

LIBERTY OF AIR FRAY IS HEATED

Composer Society Seeks to Prey on Broadcasters

Copyrighted Music Fight Up in Senate This Week

People Urge Trust Group be Taught Their Lesson

BY UNCLE JOHN.

Radio broadcast flashed conspicuously in the national limelight last week. No less than 15,000,000 persons are taking an active interest in connection with rapid developments taking place regarding broadcasting in relation to "freedom of the air."

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has dislodged a hornets' nest of public protest against tactics for collection of royalties on copyrighted music controlled by the society and broadcast by radio. The Dill bill, No. 2600, is the present pivotal point of the issue, and will come before the Committee on Patents of the United States Senate next Wednesday. This bill aims to release broadcasters from the payment of fees for the broadcast of copyrighted music.

Supervised by the National Association of Broadcasters, of which Paul B. Klugh is executive chairman, with headquarters at 1265 Broadway, New York, practically all major radio studios of the country sent an appeal on the air urging the support of the Dill bill. Senators, Congressmen and the Committee on Patents of the United States Senate have been deluged with letters, petitions and telegrams estimated to represent the signatures of a million citizens, and the radio storm has not abated.

DECISION AWAITED

If the bill is passed, broadcast stations probably will at once present the compositions controlled by the music trust, whose membership includes some 326 composers, authors and publishers. If it does not pass, the broadcasters will continue to ignore the publications controlled by the society and rely upon the productions of more than 5000 composers, authors and publishers who are not members of the trust.

Hundreds of letters received by KHJ, The Times, point out that musical programs have been even more attractive since the last broadcast stations ceased using the music trust numbers, and an unquestioned revival of appreciation for old-time songs has been noted.

An important development of the week was the turn-down of E. C. Mills, "czar of the music trust," by the Chicago Federation of Musicians, who decided to throw off the yoke presented to them by Mills and to go on the air whenever they so desired, with or without pay. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, addressed a letter to Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, suggesting that members of the Federation refuse to broadcast unless compensated for all appearances on a minimum basis of eight dollars for three hours or less, all payments to be made to the union and not to the individual performers. It is predicted that this matter will come up for discussion at the next national convention of the Musicians' Union, and events of the week clearly indicate that the music trust is endeavoring to use the Musicians' Union as a sledge-hammer to browbeat the broadcasters into submission to trust methods.

SUIT IS STARTED

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, through its vice-president, W. E. Harkness, has been the storm-center of still further difficulties for those broadcasters whose radio equipment was not installed under the supervision of the Radio Corporation of America, or its allied organizations. This situation was brought to a head by a suit against a broadcast station for infringement of eighteen patents controlled by the American Telephone and Telegraph. Mr. Harkness disclosed the fact last week that the Telephone and Telegraph Company would be willing to issue licenses where their patents are used, "the license fees to run as high as $2000 for a 500-watt station operated by commercial concerns or others for their own benefit," adding: "The licenses are for the entire life of the patents."

Henry M. Shaw, president of the Radio Trade Association, announced last week, "There will be no monopoly of broadcasting, because the public will not stand for it." The fight for monopoly is still under way, in the opinion of leading broadcasters, and undoubtedly will eventually call for action by Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce, under whose jurisdiction broadcast stations now operate.

LISTENER BENEFITS

The American Radio Association has offered $500 for the best answer to the question, "Who Is to Pay for Broadcasting?" — which only adds avidity to the complicated problem of "the compensation of artists who appear on radio programs"—and the contention that "the listener-in is getting something for nothing."

A few stations during the week went on the air with appeals for cash contributions to defray expenses of broadcasting and to supply legal talent for meeting various suits that have been brought. KHJ, The Times, has maintained a policy of minimizing to the greatest degree possible the broadcast of appeals of any nature for money.

Radio Copyright Proposal Stirs Hawaii Resident

In correspondence of the week is found the following letter addressed to Uncle John from Wailuku, Hawaii:

"With an earnest desire to do my bit against the selfish demands of the association of music composers, I have circulated a petition among radio fans here to our delegate in Congress to support the bill now in the Senate to amend the copyright laws. As I do not know the number of the bill, I am sending you herewith the petition, and will ask if you will be kind enough to attach it to anything that will identify the bill so that our delegate will know at once what it is about.

"In spite of all this trouble we are enjoying your programs just the same.

"A. F. COSTA."

International Radio Exhibit Plans Finished

Final arrangements have been made for the world's first annual International Radio Show which is to open at Madison Square Garden on September 22, and continue until September 28. The Radio Manufacturers' Show Association, under whose auspices, this show is to be given, will conduct two other expositions of similar character. One will be in Chicago at the Coliseum, November 18 to November 23, and the other on the Pacific Coast early in 1925.

Radiola Grand

This Handsome, Efficient Receiving Set Now Purchasable at a New and Lower Price

$265.00 Formerly $350.00

Complete with Tubes and Batteries and Installed in Your Home, Ready for Attachment to Your Aerial.

Incomparable for local reception, and excellent on long distance when connected to an aerial and ground of proper construction, the Radiola Grand makes an ideal set for those who want fine tone, simplicity, beauty of appearance and ease of upkeep in their radio receiving set.

Radiola Grand is equipped with a regenerative circuit, four dry cell vacuum tubes and a self-contained loud speaker. The instrument has been designed by the makers to give a strong signal, free from distortion and disagreeable tube noises. It is compact, efficient and simple to operate over its entire wave length range of 180 to 530 meters.

Radiola Grand is unique in that it is a complete radio receiving set, including a self-contained loud speaker, and having space for all necessary batteries within the case. One of the principle features of this instrument is the use of low current vacuum tubes, the filaments of which are operated from three ordinary dry cells, thereby eliminating storage batteries together with their charging trouble and risk of injury by spilled acid. Such other distinctions as a powerful amplifier, a highly perfected loud speaker and mechanical devices for the elimination of vibration contribute much to the very successful operation of the complete receiver.

Radiola Grand has quite regularly reproduced in good volume, broadcast programs from stations 1000 miles distant. Not least among the many improvements of Radiola Grand is what is known as the famous "push-pull" circuit employed in the second stage of amplification. Two vacuum tubes are used in this particular stage, with very pleasing results in the quality and volume of reproduced sound.

DUCE CLIFF MENACE

ording to J. C. Cushing, technical engineer for the Powder Company and in the Panama Canal years, the explosion will the most spectacular event kind. Some idea of the of the explosion can be gained from comparison of the volume of rock to be thrown through space with the combined weight of the battleships in the United States Navy. The total tonnage of the eighteen dreadnaughts in the American Navy is 525,000 tons while almost four times this weight volume will be shattered and hurled through the air on Easter Sunday.

The purpose of the giant shot is to reduce the menace of towering cliffs which rise perpendicularly from the quarry floor. In order to tear the cliffs down it is necessary virtually to break the back of the entire mountain with one shot costing $75,000.

Three tunnels, representing a combined length of 1000 feet, are being drilled into the base of the mountain. Cross-cuts are bored to thirteen pockets which will be loaded solidly with dynamite. These pocket charges will be connected with electric wires and will be fired simultaneously.

The main pocket is a room twelve feet square in the heart of the mountain, where ten tons of the explosive will be placed around the detonating caps.

A large hill owned by the company opposite the mountain will afford spectators an excellent view. It was only after the blasting engineers calculated definitely that this region was entirely outside of the danger zone that the Blue Diamond officials decided to invite the general public to witness the explosion.

TICKET DEMAND HEAVY

The sale of tickets for the play "The Piper," to be presented by Hollywood High School pupils on May 29 at Hollywood Bowl, is progressing rapidly. The proceeds of the play are to be used in the construction of an organ in the auditorium of the school. The organ will serve as a memorial to Hollywood men who fell in the war.

Mountainside to Be Blown Off

World's Greatest Explosion

Whole side of mountain will be blown off near Riverside, on the 20th inst., by the Blue Diamond rock quarry, with between 168 and 200 tons of dynamite. The area affected is that lying within the white line and is 500 feet high.

POSTAL MEN PLEASED

Stand of Chamber on Salary Rise Appreciated

A letter of appreciation was received by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday praising the stand taken in supporting the movement for better salaries for employees of the postoffice.

"Your action is doubly appreciated," the missive read in part, "because we feel that your body was actuated not only by the knowledge that the postal service would be impaired unless salaries were raised but also by the more lofty view that postal employees are entitled to a just wage."

The letter was written by A. L. Maynard, secretary of the better salaries committee of postal workers.

EVANGELIST MEETING

Brig. Jordan, evangelist, will conduct a week of revival meetings at the new Salvation Army Citadel, 932 West Ninth street, beginning Tuesday evening. Brig. Jordan is one of the oldest Salvation Army officers in the United States, his service extending over a period of forty-five years. He began his career in England, has served many years in the foreign missionary field, chiefly in Africa, and finally was transferred to America.

SCHOOLS AID MUSIC WEEK

Operas and Pageants by High Students Will Be One of Outstanding Features

One of the outstanding features of the coming Music Week, according to a report from Executive Director Alexander Stewart, issued yesterday, will be the contributions of the city schools, which, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Evelyn Stone Guernsey, are planning whole operas, music festivals and pageants for the week's festival.

Polytechnic High has announced it has a special evening's program ready for any auditorium that may be selected. The plans of the high schools include colorful pageants and musical offerings enhanced by scenic investure, costumes and their own orchestras, the programs, as are all of the events scheduled for Music Week, being free to the public.

ANOTHER FEATURE

Another feature will be the combined efforts of the international groups, which, under the chairmanship of Henry C. Neiss, and assistance of Miss Elsie D. Newton, will present to the public a massed sing, in which Jugo-Slavs, Russians, Italians, Mexicans, French, Poles, Swiss, and others of foreign birth, will stage their individual and characteristic programs.

At a big meeting of representatives of the foreign-born citizenry at the Edison Company grill, high enthusiasm prevailed and folk and fancy dancing, yodelling, opera and community sings were decided upon, the main massed gathering and carnival to take place at Exposition Park probably the closing Sunday of Music Week.

The county communities have reported through their various chairmen that extraordinary programs are assured all over the county, definite assurance coming from Mrs. Katrinka Valentine, Burbank; V. M. Hollister, Glendale; Lloyd L. King, Huntington Park; Mrs. Emma Bartlett, Inglewood; Miss Lucy Wolcott, Long Beach; Ralph Lyman, Pomona College; Miss Vera Best, Pomona Ebell Club; John R. Bayley, Monrovia; J. O. Westervelt, Oxnard; Mrs. C. J. Golden, San Pedro; Arne Nordskog and Stella Tegnar, Santa Monica and Bay Section; Mrs. Milton Steinberger, Sierra Madre; Mrs. A. F. Hopkins, Montrose, La Crescenta and Verdugo City.

MONTROSE CONTEST

In Montrose a contest is reported on for a name for their newly organized community chorus and a banner bearing the name will be placed over their section when the county choral festival puts on its opening program at Hollywood Bowl Sunday, May 4, under the general supervision of Mrs. J. J. Carter.

Miss Ann MacPherson is coaching a class of youngsters representing nearly every race and religion, color and disposition, she reports, at the Community Settlement House, and plans a unique "sing" that will interest every foreign-born citizen. Mrs. H. P. Hoffman, president of the music school settlement, also promises a splendid program by her small army of pupils.

An open-air orchestral-dance program will be featured under the chairmanship of Arthur H. Perry during Music Week, wherein a large group of girl classic dancers will interpret symphonies on the sward at one of the centrally located parks, it is announced, and further that some sort of entertainment is desired for every park in the city.

TO INCREASE STAFF

Chairman Pearson states that the headquarters staff for Music week will be heavily increased immediately as the work of organizing and coaching programs and stunts which will probably number 300 during the week demands an army of helpers. The latest important acquisition, reported yesterday, is that of Miss Wave Mirian Adee, formerly of Seattle, who will have general charge of program assembling, embracing thousands of music and entertainment items.

Four contests will flourish between now and Music Week, a balloting contest for the ten most popular folk and patriotic songs; a competition in submitting the best picture interpretation and poster design among the public and art schools; a childrens' hymn selection contest, wherein the ten most popular hymns will be named and described by the youngsters, and a two-day band contest open to all the amateur and professional bands of Southern California, including the Army and Navy.

DEDICATION TODAY

Special Exercises to be Conducted At New Home for Aged

The dedication of the Norwegian Lutheran Home for the Aged will be today at 3:30 p.m. This home is located in the center of Eagle Rock City at 3226 Merton avenue. A number of Lutheran pastors will take part in the service. Rev. N. G. Stub of Minneapolis, the president of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America will deliver the chief address and officiate at the dedication service.

Adolph Larson, the president of the society, will preside. It is through the efforts of Mr. Larson that this home for the aged has been made possible.

BRAGGARTS BOTH

A Yankee visitor to a London club was making himself rather unpopular by bragging about the American Navy. "The fact is, friends," he said, "Mrs. Britannia no longer rules the waves. Why, if it ever came to war between your country and America, our fleet would come out and tow your fleet right into New York Harbor, and that would be the end of it."

"Perhaps you're right," said one of the listeners quietly, "but it would take a better man than Columbus to discover America afterwards."—[Boston Transcript.

PARTY FOR POOR TOTS SATURDAY

Assistance League to be Host to Unfortunates at Gala Event

Lads and lassies of Los Angeles who know the need of warm clothing and who know how it feels not to have warm food during the winter months have a big surprise in store for them.

Next Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Assistance League, the Community House at 5604 DeLongpre avenue, Hollywood, is going to have an Easter party. And it is going to be for the benefit of the boys and girls to whom life has not been as kind as it might have been.

Twice each year, the Assistance League carries on a sale of beautiful clothes—hats, gowns, shoes and everything. Every cent earned from the sale goes toward helping the poor. The league represents the Children's Charities of Los Angeles. Social leaders and club women join hands in aiding the unfortunate youngsters.

There will be a lot of little boys and girls at the Easter party and chief among these will be Baby Peggy.

Baby Peggy is going to have help. Several of Screenland's leading girls will be on hand to assist and to display some of the beautiful hats and gowns to the prospective buyers. Chief among these are Virginia Browne Faire, Maryon Aye, June Marlowe, Kathryn McGuire, Marjorie and Priscilla Bonner, and others.

WASTE WATERS ROB SOUTHLAND

Every Drop Not Conserved is Loss in Resources

Food Supply Dependent on Necessary Fluid

Costs Go Up When Need of Rain is Felt

BY OLIVE GRAY

What if every river in California carried on the crest of every wave a load of vegetables, or meat, or poultry, or eggs, or butter, or bread?

Can you vision such a calamity?

Well, that is exactly what happens constantly, directly under our eyes!

Water going to waste is food being destroyed. This is true, not only during floods, when the untamed waters are like ravening beasts devouring all that lies in their way; but it is true every day throughout every year.

We may not have thought to reckon it thus; but when we realise that land without irrigation possibilities, in California, is land utterly useless; while land well watered brings forth a lavish yield of products for both man and animals, we must know that to waste water is to subtract in advance from all that which our larders most need. Directly, in the form of vegetables, grains, seeds; indirectly in the shape of foods for cattle and poultry—and thereby for the production of milk and eggs, these waters, allowed to go to waste, are robbing us daily; conserved, they will generously provide for us and for those who will in future crowd our cities and our lands.

It is folly to believe that flood control or water conservation concerns only the rural districts; for although these are first touched by the shortage or plenty in the liquid which is the very blood of life to all earthly products, the effect upon the city dweller is as certain and as pinching in its diminution of supplies and in the increased cost of such commodities, when scarcity prevails.

Scarcity of grains and grasses, a higher figure in the milk bill and in the cost of meat, decreased area for raising vegetables, shrinkage in the salad and in the soup, more expensive chicken feed owing to water shortage, fewer eggs and more costly ones—hence the housewifely struggle to compass good cookery with inferior ingredients. So on, with every article used for the table. Does this not strike home to us in the cities?

Does not this phase of the question appeal to us to put to use our vote in gaining control of those waters which mean so much in daily provisioning?

Shall those ravening waters destroy our food—or shall we put them to work and make them produce that which is most needed to sustain life? your life and mine, and the life of those to come.

UNIVERSITY CAMPUS EYESORE REMOVED

Lawn to Replace Old Auto Parking Station

[Don Gillum Photo]

Installing Automatic Sprinkling System at University of Southern California

KEEPING pace with its rapid growth, the University of Southern California is replacing the unsightly automobile parking ground on the south side of the old college building with a large lawn that will serve as an outdoor study hall for students.

The automobile park has been an eyesore to the campus for years. It was a familiar sight in wet weather to see a co-ed cautiously picking her way across the muddy path en route to a class. In dry weather it required skill to dodge automobiles moving around the lot.

One of the features of the new park will be the installation of an automatic sprinkling system to simplify watering of the lawn in summer months.

A Longer Sentence

"How long is it going to take to get through with this case?" asked the client who was under suspicion of house-breaking.

"Well," replied the young barrister, thoughtfully, "It'll take me about two weeks, but I'm afraid it's going to take you about four years."—[Exchange.

Have You Any Kiddies in Your Home?

PRICES ARE LOW!
that's a surprising fact about
OAK KNOLL
Marino—
A comparison of prices here on a square footage basis shows Oak Knoll, Marino property to cost much less than in ordinary subdivisions.

OAK KNOLL "MARINO"

OFFERS to the family with children certain striking advantages that you cannot afford to overlook.

Consider, for instance, this fact: An Oak Knoll, Marino, homesite is three and four times as large as a lot in the ordinary type of subdivision or home district. This means abundant room for play . . . a sand pile, a croquet plot, and later on a tennis court and swimming pool, if you like. A garden, too, of considerable proportions can readily be maintained on the left-over space.

Motoring over the Oak Knoll, Marino, drives is leisurely, for visitors come to admire the attractive homes, and it is thus of a nature as to not endanger the children when they wander from their own yards.

The aesthetic environment is admirable, too. The beautiful Huntington Library, with its world-famous collection of books, and the magnificent Huntington Hotel and grounds form the two extremes, creating a much-to-be-desired atmosphere of culture and refinement.

Please don't let any pre-conceived idea of this property deter you from paying it a visit in the near future. You will be delighted with the many special features not indicated here, such as the wonderful type of improvements being introduced.

SOCIETY

BY JUANA NEAL LEVY

Lovers of out-door sports are looking forward eagerly to the polo and sports ball at Hotel del Coronado next Saturday evening, the affair being the fitting climax to a season which has witnessed a series of interesting and important events in polo, golf, tennis, archery, horseback riding, aquaplaning and other water sports of the famous "millionaires' playground."

The polo games at Coronado Country Club fields have attracted lovers of this sport from all over the State and there also are a number of eastern visitors who have deferred their departure until after the ball.

The guests have all been requested to wear sports attire and no doubt the event will witness smart and modish models of early spring and summer sports costumes. There will be the poloists, who will wear the colors of their teams, golfers, yachtsmen, tennis enthusiasts, aviators, equestrians and equestriennes.

The sports ball has become an annual event at the hotel and is one of the most enjoyable and best attended of the many balls and fancy dress affairs given at this popular resort.

Among those who will attend will be Mrs. Alfred F. Smith of Portland, Or., Mr. Smith and their children, who have been enjoying a delightful visit at the hotel this winter, coming down as is their custom each year, for several months' visit.

Mrs. S. R. White, wife of Lieutenant-Commander White, U.S.N., is one of the most popular members of the navy set in Coronado. Mrs. E. B. Nixon, whose husband also is a lieutenant-commander, and Mrs. J. H. Carter, wife of Lieut. Carter, all officers of the Pacific Fleet anchored in San Diego Bay, also are prominently identified with all the social activities in Coronado an dSan Diego navy set.

Mrs. Walter Baker Williams of New York City is passing the winter in Coronado where she is the house guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Poor. Many charmingly arranged affairs have been given in honor of this charming young visitor, among them being a tea with which Mrs. Poor entertained for her niece at the Coronado Country Club.

Mrs. Claus Spreckels, one of California's most charming and popular hostesses, always is active in social affairs in the hotel and will entertain with a dinner party, taking her guests afterward to the ball. She and Mr. Spreckels most probably will be hosts at a midnight supper party in the Silver Grill after the ball.

Mrs. Muriel Dolph and her mother, Mrs. George Perringer, formerly of Seattle, but now making their home in Los Angeles, are frequent visitors at Hotel del Coronado and will motor down for the ball.

Both Mrs. Dolph and Miss Louisette Moser especially are interested in archery and are expert in this branch of out-of-door sports. Miss Moser and her mother, Mrs. [illegible] Mosher, prominent in social circles of their home city, St. Louis, have been at Hotel del Coronado since early in the winter.

There are numerous week-end parties from Los Angeles and Pasadena planning to go down for the ball. Among those who have been at the hotel and who enjoyed the polo games are Mr. and Mrs. John [illegible] Miller of Pasadena, who were honor guests at a dinner party with which Capt. Robert Gil[illegible] Ervin, U.S.A., entertained at the Coronado Country Club, twenty guests having been bidden.

Miss Louise Burke of Berkeley [illegible] and her brother, Carleton Burke, have been at Hotel del Coronado for the past ten days, Mr. Burke playing in the polo games at the Country Club.

Wedding Date Set

Miss Cecile McLaughlin, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O. McLaughlin of Figueroa street, has chosen Wednesday, the [illegible] inst., as the date for her wedding with Richard St. John. The ceremony will be read at high noon in St. Vincent's Church, Grand avenue and Washington streets. Father Henley and Father Tonnello will officiate. Miss Hortense McLaughlin will assist her sister as maid of honor and Mrs. Edward H. McLaughlin will be the matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Eleanor MacGowan, Miss Olga Simpson and Miss Nora Norres. Henry Grandon will be the best man. Ushers have not been chosen. After a wedding breakfast at the McLaughlin home for relatives only, Mr. St. John and his bride will depart for an extended wedding trip. After their return they will make their home in Beverly Hills. Honoring Miss McLaughlin and Mr. St. John, a dinner party will be given Saturday evening preceding the wedding by Henry Grandon and Clyde Burr, the affair taking place at the Ambassador.

At Crags Country Club

Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor of Berkeley Square entertained a party at the Crags Country Club, motoring up yesterday. They will return late this evening. Those included were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Tully Marshall and Miss Irene Rich. Others enjoying the week-end at the Crags are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Irwin Rogers and Frederick W. Flint, Jr.

Dinner Party

One of the most delightful affairs of the past week was the dinner party with which Mr. and Mrs. Secondo Guasti entertained at their home in West Adams street, Thursday evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny. Among those included were Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. O'Melveny, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O. McLaughlin, Dr. Ernest A. Bryant and Michael J. Connell. Mrs. Guasti entertained informally Friday afternoon with a luncheon at the California Club, the guests all going later to the Symphony Orchestra concert at the Philharmonic.

Home from Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Purcelle Gillmore have returned from their wedding trip and will be at home to their friends after the 15th inst., at 2945 North Fair Oaks avenue, Pasadena. Mrs. Gilmore was formerly Miss Carolyn Allen, daughter of the Carroll Allens of Altadena, the wedding being one of the events of last month.

In Honolulu

Mrs. Howard Scott Dudley of Western avenue is enjoying a delightful trip in Honolulu and the Hawaiian Islands. She went over several weeks ago and is planning to return about the 20th inst. Mrs. Dudley met a party of friends with whom she made the trip in San Francisco.

Billtoppers' Revue

Plans are progressing finely for the "Billtoppers' Revue," which will take place at the Philharmonic Auditorium Thursday evening, the 24th inst. The yearly benefit for the Children's Hospital is always a source of much interest to society in Los Angeles and its environs. This worthy philanthropy is sponsored by leading society matrons, and its auxiliary is looked after by the young matrons and debutantes who each year also give a benefit, usually a card party. The revue, which will include ten vaudeville acts, will be under the supervision of Donald Crisp, and will include two playlets. One of these will be "The Bride," featuring Enid Bennet, and will be directed by her husband, Fred Niblo. The other will be "Omit Flowers," by Montague Glass. Both are contributions from the Writers' Club.

Another attractive feature will be on the stage, which will have as a background a charming garden with growing flowers and plants, where numbers of leading society matrons and young girls will form the "atmosphere" during the performance when the entire stage is not being used.

Included in the general committee who will have charge of the various branches of the event are Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks, Mrs. Harold Braly, Mrs. Thompson Buchanan, Mrs. Charles Gardner Bullis, Mrs. Albert Llewellyn Cheney, Mrs. Albert Crutcher, Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny, Jr., Mrs. Herman Henneberger, Mrs. William May Garland, Mrs. William Rhodes Hervey, Mrs. Harry Dana Lombard, Mrs. Isaac Jones, Mrs. Lyman Ross McFie, Mrs. Malcolm McNaghten, Mrs. Cecil De Mille, Mrs. John Milner, Mrs. Alfred John Murietta, Mrs. Thomas E. Newlin, Mrs. Claire Peck, Mrs. Thomas Caldwell Ridgway, Mrs. Walter Seeley, Mrs. Silsby Spalding, Mrs. Stanley Woodruff Smith, Mrs. Rob Wagner, Mrs. Barbee Hook, Miss Mary Forve and Miss Mary O'Connor. No effort is being spared to make this event the biggest benefit ever given for the Children's Hospital.

Castner-Soyster

One of the most beautiful of the spring weddings was that of last Sunday when Miss Elizabeth Mary Castner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Castner of 109 South Manhattan Place, became the bride of Hale Bryan Soyster, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Soyster of Pomona, the ceremony being performed in the St. Cecelia Chapel of the Mission Inn at Riverside. Just as the sun was turning its rays directly down the strains of the wedding march were heard and the bridal party entered the exquisite little chapel which has as its only decorations the great tall silver candelabra with its many lighted tapers.

The bride was attired in an exquisite creation of white satin crepe with trimmings of rich old lace. Her veil was of tulle, held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm shower of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Ysabel Bowen sang "Beloved it is Morn." Mr. Castner gave his daughter into the keeping of the bridegroom.

Miss Elsa Virginia Castner assisted her sister as maid of honor, wearing a gown of blue and silver, and she carried pink bridesmaids roses and sprays of delphinium. The bridesmaids, Miss Gail Soyster, Miss Verda Huntley, Miss Margaret Soglinger and Miss Elsa Mathews, wore costumes in the pastel shades of rose, lavender, yellow and green, respectively, and carried arm bouquets of sweet peas to match their frocks which were made in the old-fashioned style of hoopskirt, and pantalettes with lace ruffles.

Edgar Musser, cousin of the gridegroom, served Mr. Soyster as best man. The ushers were Randolph Yerxa, Kendall Thurston, Huntley Castner and Morris Milbank, all excepting Mr. Castner being fraternity brothers of Mr. Soyster.

The tiny little flower girl, Dorothy Evelyn Soyster, 2-year-old niece of the bridegroom, scattered rose petals in the path of the bride. She wore a fluffy costume of rose pink satin and tulle.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Spanish Art Gallery which had been decorated for the occasion. Two hundred guests were present, and at the close the chimes rang out a wedding march, "Abide With Me," and finally "The End of a Perfect Day."

One of the delightful features of the reception was the singing by Miss Ysabel Bowen and Miss Gail Soyster.

Mr. and Mrs. Soyster have gone for an extended wedding trip to Grand Canyon. After their return they will make their home in Los Angeles. Mrs. Soyster is a member of the Phi Delta Pi sorority and attended Pomona College, La Salle University and the University of California, Southern Branch. Mr. Soyster's Alma Mater is the University of California. He is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

Afternoon Tea

One of the delightful affairs of yesterday was the tea with which Miss Dorothy Thayer and Miss Mary Hampton entertained at the home of the latter on St. Andrews Boulevard, the house being transformed into a garden of spring flowers and fruit blossoms. One hundred friends of the young hostess called between 4 and 6 o'clock. Assisting them in the tea room and presiding at the tea tables were Misses Consuello Baker, Harriet Eugenie Andrews, Polly Hampton, Margaret Hampton, Elizabeth Schaefer, Janice Jackson, Camilla Crocker and Florence Stoner. Misses Mary Hampton and Dorothy Thayer enjoyed a delightful outing at Palm Springs, motoring down Sunday morning with Mrs. Charles H. Baker and her daughter, Miss Consuello, and returning home late Thursday afternoon.

How Much Is A Diamond Worth?

THE price you pay for a diamond may or may not represent its actual worth. That depends on the quality of the stone.

A perfect diamond always has a definite market value. But perfection in a diamond can only be determined by expert, critical examination under a powerful microscope.

It is highly important, in the purchase of a diamond, to make sure that the stone you select is perfect—even beyond the evidence of the keenest eye.

You can make sure of this by reliance on Feagans & Co. for this house confines all its diamond selections [in stones of one fourth carat and larger] to perfect gems.

You will find here one of the most important collections of rare gem stones on the Pacific Coast. And you will get the advantage of the Feagans & Co. buying power. Value comparisons are sincerely urged.

Pearl Scarf Pin

Any woman who observes that the best groomed men always wear a scarf pin with every appropriate costume—

And then observes that her husband does not—

Has her course of action clearly outlined. The result may safely be left to her intelligence and tact.

Our co-operation comes into play in helping her make the selection. In the event that she has no specific idea of his taste and wants to be sure of pleasing him, a Pearl Scarf Pin will probably be one of our first suggestions.

PASADENA

The home of Dr. and Mrs. Willard J. Stone of 1030 San Pasqual street was the scene of a pretty, quiet wedding Tuesday evening when Miss Alice Martha Welch of Concordia, Kan., became the bride of Dr. James Robert Sanford of Pasadena, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. Sanford of Tennessee. With about twenty relatives present, Dr. John Marvin Dean, pastor of the First Baptist Church, read the marriage service. Dr. and Mrs. Stone were the attendants. The bride's gown was of white georgette crepe. Quantities of beautiful spring blossoms were used in the decorations, and following the ceremony a reception was given the young people and a buffet supper served. After their honeymoon Dr. and Mrs. Sanford will be at home to their friends at 500 South El Molino avenue.

At a delightfully appointed tea, Mrs. A. E. D. Carscallen of South El Molino avenue entertained on Thursday afternoon, receiving about 175 guests. Honored guests were the sister of the hostess, Mrs. J. W. Cruthers, who recently returned from an extended trip, and is planning to make her home in Pasadena, and Mrs. Walter Palmer Marshall, who is building a handsome home in the Oak Knoll section. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Stillwell Jamieson, Mrs. Grank Suffell, Mrs. Frank Furnival Peard, Mrs. F. M. Alkin, Mrs. Harrison McLauren, Mrs. Willis Saxe Montgomery and others.

Very enjoyable was the dinner party given by Dr. and Mrs. John Marvin Brooks at their home at 728 South Los Robles avenue one evening recently. Bright blossoms of the spring season adorned the long tables, with yellow jonquils and other golden flowers to carry out the yellow motif. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Cannon (Ellen Beach Yaw,) Dr. and Mrs. John R. Sackrider of Covina, Mrs. Emily Crane, Miss Imogene Crane and Mr. and Mrs. James Reed, all of Los Angeles; also Mr. and Mrs. George Darsie, Mrs. James Darsie, Dr. and Mrs. Frank C. Farmer and the host and hostess.

Celebrating the birthday anniversaries of Miss Anita Bischoff and Miss Alice Higginbottom, friends were entertained at the home of the former at 126 West Pearl street Friday evening. Pink and white blossoms, carnations and lilies of the valley, with a handsome birthday cake, made the tables most attractive. Mah jongg and cards furnished the evening's diversions. Among those present were the Misses Clara and Dorothy Higginbottom, Miss Ruth Crisman, Miss Adele Kenr, Miss Grace Meisenheider, Mrs. Arthur Lippiatt, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Mallory, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Bischoff, George Bischoff and the honored guests.

An attractively appointed tea was given by Miss Polly Holbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Holbert of 621 Alpine street recently. Bridge was the diversion and garden blossoms were used in decorating the rooms. Included in the guests list were Mrs. James B. Gibson, Miss Katherine Crowley of Detroit, Biss Frances Sellwood of Duluth, Minn., Miss Katherine Kumler and her cousin, Miss Phyllis Kumler of Dayton, O.; Miss Alice Erdman of Princeton, N. J., Miss Helen Dakin, Miss Agnes Clarke, Miss Margaret Avery, Miss Betty Bettingen, Miss Mary Ella Cooke, Miss Fern Fisher, Miss Ruth Jones, Miss Gretchen Kayser, Miss Mary Elizabeth Jacobs and the hostess.

Complimenting Miss Alice Thorngren, whose marriage to Ben Butler will take place April 16, Mrs. G. Chase and Miss Aileen Brower entertained with a linen shower Tuesday evening at the home of the latter at 864 North Manzanita avenue. The honored guest was completely surprised, adding to the pleasure of the event. Among those present were Miss Thorngren, Mrs. G. Chase, Mrs. Henry Siebrecht, Mrs. William Mayhew, Mrs. Clyde Warren, Mrs. E. V. Rhodes, Mrs. Rust, Miss Helen Glass, Miss Kathleen Smith, Miss Ruth Thompson, Miss Edna Stout, the entertaining hostesses and Mrs. Brower.

SANTA ANA

The parsonage home of Rev. Moffett Rhodes, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was the scene of a quiet wedding when Ethel W. Loveridge and Maurice J. Cahill took their vows. Mrs. Loveridge was unattended. The ceremony was followed by the return of the bride and bridegroom to the Rossmore Hotel, of which Mr. Cahill has been the proprietor for the past two years, where the couple will make their home. Mrs. Cahill came to Santa Ana four years ago from Alabama. Mr. Cahill was formerly connected with a large hotel in Indianapolis.

Following their marriage at St. Catharine Hotel, Catalina Island, Mr. and Mrs. Herman B. Paisly were at home here today. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Burke of Long Beach witnessed the ceremony. Mrs. Paisley was Miss Peggy Jones of Long Beach, where she was connected with the Long Beach National Bank.

Honoring Mrs. Maude Askerman, house guest of her aunt and cousin, Mrs. M. M. Crookshank and Miss Lida Crookshank, at their home, 802 French street, Mrs. George S. Smith entertained at an informal evening at her home, 915 French street. Bridge was introduced after luncheon. Mrs. Ackerman will return to her home in Boston April 8.

Miss Martha McCune was honor guest Saturday at a miscellaneous shower arranged by Mrs. Ross Howe and Mrs. James Russell at the home of Mrs. Howe, 702 West Eighth street. The event was one of several forecasting the marriage in June of Miss McCune to Harold Hill of Santa Ana.

HERMOSA BEACH

Mrs. S. E. Arey entertained recently for members of the Entre Nous Club, an afternoon of bridge proving a delightful diversion. Brilliant decorations of red roses and ferns were used and following a delicious luncheon officers to serve for the coming year were chosen as follows: Mrs. C. J. Funk, president; Mrs. Louis Somers, timekeeper, and Mrs. Roy Smith, secretary. Guests and members present were Mmes. Miriam Burney, C. A. Buttam, J. P. Erickson, C. J. Funk, F. J. Haneschka, George Johnson, Al Protsch, Roy Smith, Louis Somers and Paul Temple.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grannis gave a most enjoyable costume party at their home on Monday evening, followed by an elaborate dinner served at midnight. The

was in the nature of a morning, welcoming the friends of the Grannisses to new beach home. The numbered about fifty ing a business and social the Parent-Teacher Association held a pleasant session Wednesday afternoon with a well-arranged program in charge of E. T. Harwood, principal of the Hermosa Beach schools, assisted by Mrs. M. M. Sweet and Mrs. C. O. Woods. In the late afternoon a reception was enjoyed.

LONG BEACH

Taking precedent over everything in society circles during the week was the "Festive Spring Extravanganza," a brilliant entertainment given by Ebell Club members last Wednesday afternoon and evening in the lovely home of Mrs. Charles Harlow, 25 Fifteenth Place. The literary and musical program was given three times, under the leadership of Mrs. R. J. Booth, for the purpose of raising the funds with which to build a new clubhouse. Conspicuous among the attractions was the one-act play, "The Modern Triangle," directed by Mrs. O. G. Hinshaw, with Mrs. Julius Blum as the hero. Mrs. W. T. McConnell, Jr., gave a cornet solo and dancing number, the Highland Fling in costume. She was accompanied by Mrs. Myrtle Hill, who also furnished the music for the fashion revue, the models having been selected from the Junior Ebell membership and included Mmes. L. P. Steepleton, Cora Armitage, M. E. Dillman, Richmond Varney, A. J. Van Ands, M. A. Byel, J. M. Gillies, W. H. Young, Stewart Chapman and E. R. Gibson. Hostesses were Mmes. Charles F. Van de Water, club president; Mmes. P. E. Hatch, C. C. Lewis, Charles Harlow, Charles Lownsberry, R. P. Smith, John Hones, H. E. Ware, Nelson McCook, J. W. Lowther, C. A. Whitney, George Young, Frank Shiek and C. A. Bradley. Assisting hostesses included Mmes. A. B. Crouston, Henry Kinzel, F. E. Huston, Charlotte Higgins, Wiley Warmsley, H. B. McLeod, Mel Biled, C. Keller, C. Krauseneck, E. R. Gibson, Stewart Chapman, W. H. Young, J. M. Gillies, M. A. Byel, W. F. Tracy, A. J. Van Ands, Richmond Varney, M. E. Dillman, L. P. Steepleton and Cora Armitage.

Miss Dorothy Rominger, whose marriage to Milton McGrew is scheduled for this month, was the inspiration for a bridge tea on Wednesday afternoon given by Miss Violent Andrews of Los Angeles, a sorority sister, who will be one of the bridesmaids. The guests, members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, included several active Kappas, because of the spring vacation at Stanford University, Miss Rominger's alma mater. Typical of spring, violets, sweet peas and ferns were combined in the decorations.

Another prenuptial affair given for Miss Dominger was that on Friday, when Mrs. Horace Birdsell and Mrs. William Bowen of the Hatfield House entertained with a bridge luncheon in Hotel Virginia. Again the spring note was observed in the table embellishments. Covers were laid for twenty-four guests who at one time had been residents of Oskaloosa, Iowa, the former home of Senator and Mrs. Rominger. A guest prize was presented Miss Rominger at the close of the tournament.

Miss Irene Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Moore of 3600 Weston Place, Los Cerritos, became the bride of William H. Burkhalter at 9 o'clock Saturday morning at a pretty home wedding, Rev. I. Frank Roach, pastor of the First Methodist Church, officiating. Wearing a rust-colored canton crepe going-away gown and a corsage of cream-colored roses, orchids and orange blossoms, the bride was given away by her father. Immediately after the wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Burkhalter left in their automobile on a wedding trip. They will make their home in Long Beach.

Weighs 314 Pounds—Only 35 Years Old

Could Not Walk Due to Gas on the Stomach

"I am 35 years old, weigh 314 pounds and suffered terribly with gas and cramps. Could not walk four blocks without suffering pains in my right side. After taking one bottle Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) I was entirely relieved of the cramps and of the gas on the stomach." (Signed) Leo Bonesa.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports from Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. P. (Name given on request.)

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—[Advertisement.

HUNTINGTON PARK

What proved to be a most unique stork shower was given a few days ago by Mrs. Lloyd Hardy, the guest of honor being her sister-in-law, Mrs. Finch Simmons of Los Angeles. A book of advice was arranged by the seventeen guests present and then each wrote a nursery rhyme in the book, after which it was presented by the little sister of the hostess to the honoree with compliments. Quite a great amount of amusement was created in the decoration arrangements. One of the rooms was converted into a nursery and a score of baby dolls and other toys filled each corner. The dining-room decorations of pale blue tissue paper were hung in such a manner as to cause them to sway with the breath of the guests. A profusion of blue wild flowers and pink carnations added perfume to the fresh spring air. The centerpiece for the table was a perfect miniature bassinette in pink and blue; ribbons were hung from the center lights, which had been transformed into pink roses reaching to the edge of the table. Refreshments consisted of individual cakes, ice cream and strawberry whip. The favors were tiny physicians' valises and baby dolls.

TOMORROW DAWNS

Fairbanks's Director Sees Flush of Day in Night of Filmdom; Predicts New Art Arising

"The art and drama of the motion picture will advance more in the coming year than it has in the last five," prophesies R. A. Walsh, director of the Douglas Fairbanks production, "The Thief of Bagdad," one of the most discussed films of recent years. Mr. Walsh feels confident that great artistic achievements will soon be presented on the screen, and he predicts that the silent drama is about to enter a new era that will bring many innovations to the silversheet and wipe out most of the old producing standards.

"Many radical changes are needed, and are coming," says Walsh, in commenting upon what the future holds in store for the photoplay. "The old hackneyed methods and conventions of the screen have lived long enough, and are worn threadbare. It is time to discard them and venture into new channels.

"It is a peculiar fact, that the motion picture has made least progress in the field to which it seems most ideally suited and in which it has unrivalled opportunities—the filming of imaginative works. It is in this direction, the picturing of stories of pure fancy, tales, fantastic, humorous, bizarre, dealing largely with the unfettered flights of imagination, that the silent drama has greater possibilities than any other form of expression. Yet these opportunities have been knocking at the motion picture door in vain.

"In the production of 'The Thief of Bagdad' we endeavored to do something different. We have tried to cut loose from the old traditions and conventions. In planning the production we gave ourselves the utmost latitude in regard to settings, story and treatment, and whatever else may be said about the picture, I think it will be conceded that it is at least a definite step in the direction of making the photoplay a distinct and independent art within its own realm.

"The regarding of the motion picture as a substitute or half-sister of the stage has been a big mistake. The two are quite dissimilar in most respects and must tread separate ways. The further the photoplay departs from the forms and traditions of the footlight drama, the greater will be its achievements.

"It is encouraging to note that the theater-going public has been educated to the point where intelligent pictures can be profitably made, to a certain degree, at least. Recently there have been two or three fine films which have

There is apparently no chance of a change in the present schedule which will bring the Douglas Fairbanks picture before the public here in the early fall. It is an interesting fact that that will make only the fourth production shown at Grauman's Egyptian Theater since the opening, and that "The Thief" will open there nearly two years after the premiere of "Robin Hood."

Dough very easily takes the record here for length of time elapsing between showings of his films.

ONE of the interesting high lights of the present season of picture making are the adventures abroad, of which "Ben Hur," "The Arab" and "The Son of the Sahara" are examples. "Ben Hur," will of course not be seen for many months but an early release will be "The Son of the Sahara," and "The Arab" will probably follow shortly. Both of these were made on the African desert.

There is no doubt that backgrounds of beauty that are unfamiliar add a certain impressiveness to the drma. Sometimes, as in the instance of "The Eternal City," they even give color to a rather uncertain interest of the story. And while it is doubtful whether any considerable percentage of pictures will or can be made on a foreign location, they do help to bring a note of variety which will probably cause these several new releases to be much relished.

His Casualty Record Shows 100 Per Cent

Wallace MacDonald has sworn to remain in motion pictures until he plays in one film without being killed!

A review of the most recent of his past performances reveals that in each of them he met his death. In "Foolish Matrons" he died from too much liquor; in "The Spoilers" he died from exposure; he was torn to pieces by the mob in "The Day of Faith;" in "Maytime" he was shot in a duel; he committed suicide in "A Fool There Was;" he was shot in "The Heart Bandit;" as the villain in "Thy Name is Woman" he was condemned to prison, where he died; and in "The Sea Hawk" he was killed in a sword duel with Lloyd Hughes.

Now, featured in "We Are French," Rupert Julian's new production for Universal, he dies, at the age of 70 years, from the strain of a 100-mile march to Paris, where he was to have been honored by the French nation.

SHOPS WHILE RESTING

Jacqueline Logan is now on a general shopping tour of the exclusive shops of Los Angeles. She is enjoying a vacation following completion of her featured role in "Code of the Sea" for Paramount. Miss Logan rates a line of notice on the fact that she went through this entire production without getting seasick once.

Mantell Here for Two Weeks in Shakespeare

With an excellent company of players, headed by Genevieve Hamper, to play the feminine roles, Robert B. Mantell will come to the Mason Operahouse Monday April 14, for a two-week engagement. With the exception of Lytton's "Richelieu," Shakespeare will hold sway.

The engagement will be inaugurated with "Richelieu," Tuesday night, "Hamlet," will be the bill; Wednesday matinee, "As You Like It;" Wednesday night, "Julius Caesar;" Thursday night, "Hamlet," will be repeated; Friday night, "Macbeth;" Saturday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice;" Saturday night, "Richelieu."

The second and last week of the engagement will be devoted to the following plays: Monday "King Lear;" Tuesday, "Othello;" Wednesday matinee, "Merchant of Venice;" Wednesday night, "Richelieu;" Thursday, "As You Like It;" Friday, "Macbeth;" Saturday matinee, "As You Like It;" Saturday night, the engagement will be brought to a close with "Julius Caesar."

MELFORD SOON THROUGH

"Tiger Love" will be completed within one more week at the Lasky studio. George Melford is producing this picture with Antonio Moreno and Estelle Taylor leading the cast.

MOMUS NEEDS MUNSEY

Merger for New York Plays Only Salvation Visible, Opines Critic; Week's Bills Hopeless

BY GILBERT SELDES

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

[Copyright, 1924, Public Ledger.]

NEW YORK, April 4.—It would be idle to pretend that anything of moment has occurred in the theater here since ever so long. Morris Gest hasn't imported anything for months; George M. Cohan has left town. We are in the doldrums. What we need, of course, is some one to do for the theater what Mr. Frank Munsey does for the newspapers. He buys, sells, amalgamates, merges, combines, wrecks, builds up, changes whatever his eyes lights on.

Now, if the local Keith's Palace should be merged with the Theatrical Guild, a thing I have suggested in more serious moments, we might have nice clean fun for the whole family. In keeping with Mr. Munsey's traditions the theater would first be known at the Palace Theater and Theater Guild, then as the Palace Theater Guild, and finally as the Palace Theater, proving that you can't keep a good man down.

At the same time I would suggest that Andre Charlot and Florenz Ziegfeld get together, combine their wisdoms and produce one revue. For each has something the other lacks, and the Charlot revue has weaknesses Ziegfeld could cure, and vice versa.

TO DISTRACT DEMOCRATS

The revised Ziegfeld Follies opened last week and is, or are, interesting. This production is a midstream affair and has nothing whatever to do with the absolutely new and fresh Ziegfeld Follies which will open here in June and distract the minds of the delegates to the Democratic convention.

The revision has added several set pieces to the show which opened last season, but most of the fun resides in the original work. Miss Brice remains and, in everything but a highly sentimental "monhommish" number, is as good as she ever was, and that, as the little boy said to his teacher, is perfect.

One of her new songs is quite on a par with her "Yiddish Squaw" of blessed memory; it is another spring song with dance. Another of the original cast is Bert Wheeler; this young man had an accident at the beginning of the run, just when he had made him-

OLD STUDIO HUMS

Two Units Producing in Balshofer Plant in Hollywood

The Balshofer Studios, 1329 Gordon street, Hollywood, after a lapse of six years are again humming with activity, two pictures now being in production under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer.

In 1918, Mr. Balshofer closed the studios after making "Over The Rhine" with Julian Eltinge in the stellar role. At the close of the war the producer went to New York City where his activities have been confined until this year. An organization called the Great Western Productions, Inc., has been formed by Balshofer and William W. Gardiner.

The present series of six pictures, presents Fred Church in the stellar roles, surrounded by all-star casts. Additional units will be added from time to time until five are producing, to supply the demand for territories controlled by Great Western Productions.

Katherine Grant, who represented Los Angeles in the international beauty show in Atlantic City last year, is featured opposite Mr. Church, and will head the second unit in the organization, making society dramas.

Associated with Balshofer and Gardiner are James J. Tynan, who will head the scenario and publicity departments, and G. Clifford Reid, exchange executive.

ROMANTIC STAR HAPPY IN HOME

Antonio Moreno, Perfect Lover, Just That to Wife

Cinema Luminary in Idyllic Domestic Menage

Characteristic of Film Hero Appealing Modesty

BY ALMA WHITAKER

It doesn't seem reasonable to couple the almost royal magnificence of that new home, with its long retinue of servants, its lovely grounds and swimming pool, its furnishings breathing of pomp and circumstance, its queenly chatelaine, and its two adorable children, with that naively youthful, handsome but albeit dangerously modest motion-picture hero, Antonio Moreno.

But they are all his—and none more so than the charming chatelaine and the two adorable children, recently acquired in one marital transaction, when he married the popular Mrs. Daisy Danziger, nee Canfield.

And Tony gazes at them with possessive adoration as he rapturously declares that he is the happiest man in the world. No one could doubt him. Tender content radiates everywhere. You don't see this couple feverishly seeking social excitement in the smart cafes—you are much more likely to find them playing checkers with each other at home, after having told the children a bed-time story and seen them safely off to bed.

TONY, THE HEARTBREAKER

But all the same Tony is one of the most popular male picture stars. All the same he is a perfectly fascinating, dashing screen lover, and all the same he does receive mountains of fan mail every day, chiefly from romantic maidens who have witnessed his compelling charms in "The Spanish Dancer," in "Lost and Found," and all those Edith Story features that made him famous. And that fan mail is going to be twice as large after they have seen him in "Bluff" (Grauman's Metropolitan this week) and in the picture he is making now, "Tiger Blood."

It was in the costume of this last picture that I lunched with him at Lasky's studio, dashing debonnaire, Spanish bandit stuff, in which he shows just how much of a cave-man lover he can be as he crushes the infuriated young heroine (Estelle Taylor) to his dagger-decorated belt — which leaves its bruised impress on the lady's chest with quite realistic discomfort.

Most of the pictures in which Tony has captured the feminine fancy are costume stuff, so highly becoming to his slender person. But in "Bluff" he is just a modern young man, a rather romantic Scotland Yard detective, frightfully in love with Agnes Ayres, and garbed in the prosaic clothes of ordinary masculinity. His beauty stands the test and arouses hope for his entire sex.

A MODEST HERO

Senor Antonio Garrido Monteagudo Moreno is quite the most engaging male motion-picture actor I have interviewed. There wasn't a hint of pose anywhere. He regards himself as a fortunate child of destiny—to whom destiny has been very kind. Yes, he was a poor little Spanish boy with a widowed mamma. Yes, he did sell bread for a living when he was 10 years old. Yes, a couple of nice American gentlemen did happen to take a fancy to him and send him to school. Yes, he did meet some nice theatrical people on the trip over and it did lead to his immediate engagement in a minor role (that of a Spanish boy) with Mrs. Leslie Carter.

And after that it was so easy to get into pictures—did both pictures and legitimate at first, and managed to keep nicely busy and save some money. Tony wants one to know he always saved money. He wants one to realize that he is quite a good business man, that he made some little investments in Mexican oil that turned out pretty well and certain little real estate interests he has are quite substantial. And his picture salary is quite stylishly considerable.

But he tells one all this with a sort of appealing air—not bragging, not purse-proud. He doesn't want you to think he was unusually clever or fascinating or even persistently industrious in doing so well in his profession—he skips over those little matters as just fortunate happenings. And he quite frankly designates his career as a "climb." He doesn't claim noble birth.

Why, then, does he seem to stress that old money, those assets?

Ah, you see, there is just one little fly in the ointment of Tony Moreno's happiness. He married a wealthy widow. And he ardently loves her, too. So it is simply lacerating for anyone to suppose that he married for anything but love. I really believe it would give him infinite satisfaction if Mrs. Moreno lost some of her private fortune.

And one gets this "money complex" so easily when one understands. The most natural thing in the world. And Tony looks so boyishly relieved when he sees one does understand. After that he can talk easily and frankly on a hundred subjects. He isn't, he confesses, at all well educated, "but," he will add, "my wife just wants me to learn everything."

But Tony's speech and manners show no hint of any lack, and I can't believe that "culture cramming" could be any sort of a necessary improvement. In fact, this young man has a most lovable personality and I can see where Mrs. Moreno would not have cared if he had been a penniless actor.

That home of theirs high up on Moreno Heights is a regal affair, obviously designed for much lavish entertaining. Madame takes care of the entire interior, but Tony looks after everything outside, and under his supervision the grounds are becoming very lovely. And the children just adore their attractive step-father, and crowd into his bed in the morning, and rush to greet him when he goes home. Some of the exquisite furniture self a good solid hit, and was out in the hospital when I saw the performance.

Seeing him now I understand the hit. He lies upon a little board over the footlights and expires in agony over the second-rate witticisms of his partner. And then he does his famous stunt of singing a sentimental song and eating a sandwich at the same time.

The idea is colossally good; but Wheeler has, quite unnecessarily, chosen to exaggerate it, not by natural comic methods, but by pasting some sort of isinglass over his face, or buttering his cheeks, in order to make them glisten as with tears. The result, if you are anywhere within seeing distance, is hideous.

Mr. Ziegfeld has, it seems, got tired of delicate fun, for he has James J. Corbett on hand to do a piece of violence which isn't funny. On the other hand, however, Ann Pennington dances extremely well, and Paul Whiteman plays, and there is much entertainment.

HIGHBROW STUFF

The Charlot revue hasn't any of the elaboration needed for an American revue and goes strong on a higher class of entertainment in the lines and situations. That is why I suggest the two get together.

A peculiar situation has arisen in regard to Eugene O'Neill's "Welded," which was described in detail last week. The critics panned it, using the worst word of all—dull. Yet something in it appealed to audiences. It "grossed" something like $16,000 last week, and that is rather good for the off-season for a play which has only four characters, in a smallish theater. The production is in the hands of the Selwyns, associated with the three directors of the Provincetown Playhouse, Messrs. Eugene O'Neill, Kenneth Macgowan and Robert Edmond Jones.

The Selwyns, after the first night, must have thought they had a "flop" and probably began to look around for another play to put into the house. But the box office is a serious matter; the first week gave pause. At the same time some one discovered that whatever dullness there was in the play arose from the conversation; that the plot itself had direct moving qualities. In short, rumors of moving-picture rights rumbled around the place.

In spite of fervent denials on the part of experts, quite a number of copies of the script were demanded by producers. With this in mind it becomes necessary to back the play, for the producers of a play do not usually get the moving-picture rights unless the play has run somewhere between 70 and 100 performances.

So "Welded," through the combined help of the people who do not believe the reviewers, and the moving-picture people, who will try anything once, may have quite a run in New York. Of course this is a small matter, but it indicates what complexities there are in the vast business of play-producing in New York. How anyone gets the courage to do it I cannot see.

Nor even how they summon up courage to start a musical show. I wanted to have a talk with Guy Bolton and Jerome Kern, librettist and composer of the Princess Shows, and went to the theater to meet them. They took me into the smoking room, where a costume rehearsal of the new piece, "Sitting Pretty," was going on.

Of the show itself I know nearly nothing, and report on it can well wait until the opening here. But I saw the infinite detailed work put on this single department, and I was impressed. Every costume was examined and re-examined; it was considered singly and in connection with the other costumes which would appear at the same time on the stage.

An imperceptible difference in the shade of the stockings worn by two ladies of the chorus called forth such pointed gentle remonstrance from the director that the young women eventually explained. "These are our own stockings, Mr.——; the others are upstairs, but we were afraid to wear them and get them soiled."

Wigs were elaborated and changed; there was no end of detail about the straps and buttons on the shoes. And at the same time photographs had to be taken, singly and in groups. All this took place betwen 3 and 6:15 in the afternoon, and there was a regular rehearsal at eight prompt.

"The Main Line" opened in special matinees. The title is more familiar to Philadelphia, but New York knows that there it covers a section of suburban country highly desirable as a residential district, and not worried particularly by financial troubles. Grace Griswold, who had to do with the composition and with the acting of this play, gave herself the name of Daisy Rittenhouse, so there was no effort at realism. The play failed to impress the New York critics; it did not give them the laugh of "Across the Street," which intentionally or not, caused riotous outbursts.

MYSTERIES OF FINANCE

I do not understand the finances of French plays in this country; but they come and seem to make their way. Mme. Simone has played a recent success of Paris, the "Dressmaker of Luneville," and will do a famous "drama d'amour," "Le Passe," by Georges De Porto-Riche, and she has her faithful following. There is a small French colony here, there is a certain amount of official patronage, but there is a remnant of mystery in the whole matter.

There is, of course, a much greater Jewish population; and that accounts for the fact that the first play of Ernst Toller, to be given here at the Jewish Art Theater, where Maurice Swartb is playing "The Bloody Laughter," "Man and the Masses," is shortly to be produced by the Theater Guild.

Lee Simonson is directing the production (as well as providing the investiture,) and, with his usual enthusiasm, says it will be great. The "Masses" are being trained by a young Philadelphian, Philip Loeb, and are already at such a point of perfection that they can be conducted like the chorus in a cantata.

Footnote on "All God's Chillun." The row about this production has died down. But before it died down the following occurred. The producer of one of the least interesting and most pompous plays of the season called up an editor for whom Kenneth Macgowan, one of the producers of the O'Neill play, writes dramatic criticism.

This serious-minded producer of worthless goods announced that he disapproved of the production of O'Neill's play, and would therefore not invite Mr. Macgowan to review his production. Mr. Macgowan does not know of this, so he does not know to what he is indebted for missing a bad show.

WA-WAN JUNIORS

Miss Lorain Noble, president of the Junior Wa-Wan Club and also a member of the Ebell Juniors, will sing at the Wednesday afternoon meeting of the Ebell Juniors. Henrietta Horton Kapp will speak on decorative art; Mrs. Charles V. Craig will discuss current events and Miss Coral Atkins will assist at the piano. Miss Esther Soule and Mrs. Fred Turner will act as hostesses.

been successful in spite of the fact that they depended upon mental appeal instead of physical appeal with the usual film hokum. These pictures would most certainly have failed if presented a year or two ago. This is a good sign as it will give directors and producers an incentive to make a better form of silent drama.

"Many other changes will take place in the films in the next few months.

"First, there will be less detail and more art in settings and backgrounds.

"Marked advancement will be made in color photography and its popularity will increase.

"There will be tendency toward natural length films without the excess of padding which often ruins many otherwise splendid productions.

"Much improvement will be made in photographic and lighting effects to make them in keeping with the mood of the scene.

"The simple and direct form of continuity and story treatment will be developed, with a consequent heightening of the effectiveness of dramatic situations.

"The year 1924, according to all indications, promises to be the beginning of a new era that will take the motion picture out of the infancy class for all time."

bears a monogram "D and A. M." cleverly entwined—Daisy and Antonio Moreno.

"And I shall never cause her a day's unhappiness," he says earnestly, "not if it is my power to prevent it."

By which you will gather that an interview with Tony Moreno, picture star, is largely a eulogy of Moreno domesticity. Fame, applause, money, yes — but marriage is the biggest thing in Tony's life to date.

HE WANTS TO CREATE NEW ROLE

Originator of Mark Sabre Aspires to Different Part in Future Play

"Why will producers and directors continue to cast players in roles similar to one that a player has made a real success of? For the life of me I cannot help but give this matter some serious attention and thought."

Percy Marmont, who created screen history with his performance of Mark Sabre in "If Winter Comes," hopes eventually to play a role somewhat removed from that one.

"Mind you, though," he casually remarked, "I'm not the least bit disappointed at the opportunity to play the role in "K," if the truth be known. I see great possibilities in it. And then, too, I hope to be able, from time to time, to contribute similar performances akin to Sabre in other screen stories.

"But the innermost thought with a number of players—that is, from my own personal observations—is that once a screen star makes a decided departure in character he or she is immediately 'trademarked' for similar roles whenever the opportunity is presented.

"My ambition, and one that has thus far been denied me, is to create a distinctly different type of screen player than has yet been reflected by the silver sheet. I am convinced that I may yet have the opportunity of satisfying an inborn desire to bring this character to the screen.

"I am delighted with my role in "K" and I think I am justified in saying that I hope to make it the oustanding performance of my screen career. I have read the book—yes, quite some time ago—and the character, which I was fortunate in being allotted, possesses unusual opportunity for screen technique.

"Mrs. Rinehart is one of the few writers of the literary field who possesses that indescribable ability to picture with words the qualities which so many so-called writers constantly struggle for, but never seem to find.

"I'm entering the spirit of this production with much enthusiasm, despite the fact that I recently purchased a home in Hollywood and spend the better part of each morning with my Chinese gardener. He speaks no English at all and I must confess that my education along Chinese lines has been sadly neglected."

Harry Pollard is signed to direct the screen version of this Rinehart story, wherein Virginia Valli will be starred. The story will go into production within the next few days at Universal City.

COMEDY CONGRESS

Clowns of Filmdom Meet in Character for One Picture

It looks as though the film comedians' convention was on at the Hollywood studios. Several of filmland's best known comic caper-cutters are located there at present, taking part in J. K. McDonald's production for First National of "The Goof."

Lloyd Hamilton has left his own studio for a few days and is putting his own copyrighted face and form before the McDonald camera. Old Dan Mason, the famous Toonerville trolley skipper, is there with his scraggy whiskers and flat tobacco.

Vic Potel appears as his own inimitable, lanky, country-boy self. Then there is Harry Todd, the original of the famous "Mustang Pete" of old Essany days, looking as usual. Chuck Reisner at present is manager of a bevy of bathing beauties, although Ham is trying hard to take the job away from him. Hap Ward and his dog Cameo complete this cotarie of pantominic stars.

And Ben Alexander, who is being starred in this picture, mustn't be forgotten as he is getting to be a famous comedian himself, since his numerous Penrod parts in Tarkington pictures.

ADAPT "CORNERED" TO THE SCREEN

William Beaudine will move to Warner Brothers' studio upon the completion of "The Goof," the First National comedy-drama now being filmed under his direction at the Hollywood studio. The young megaphone wielder has been selected by the Warners to film an adaptation of "Cornered," the crook play which ran in New York for several months.

Hope Loring and "Buddy" Leighton, who prepared the scripts for Beaudine's version of "Penrod and Sam" and "Boy o' Mine," have been retained to write the continuity of "Cornered." Actual production of the stage classic adaptation will begin early in May. Beaudine will take his staff with him when he moves from the Hollywood plant.

tale had to be sudbued quite so much.

"RAIN" ABANDONED

It will be good news to all those who have enjoyed reading "Miss Thompson" and seeing "Rain" on the stage that the production of this story in pictures has been abandoned. Since it cannot, under present restrictions, be filmed just as it is it seems wise not to attempt to film it at all.

Another new attraction on Broadway this week is "Virtuous Liars" if indeed it can be called an attraction. Its only merit, aside from the fact that it re-introduced Edith Allen who first appeared in "Scaramouch," is that it is unpretentious. Miss Allen has a delicious sense of humor that never seems to leave her even in the most maudlin, hackneyed scenes. But such pictures as this can hardly expect to fill theaters in cold, blizzardly weather, especially against such competition as "Beau Brummel."

GRIFFITH WAITS

D. W. Griffith has postponed his trip abroad to April 12 so as to accompany Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. I have been told by a close friend of Mr. Griffith's that he had no intention of accepting the offer that is taking him abroad. Italian studio owners and bankers, hoping to bring back the prestige of the Italian film companies, have asked Mr. Griffith to make a picture in Italy and he has accepted their invitation to visit their studios. But it seems that he has decided in advance not to accept their proposition.

WALSH UNDECIDED

Ever since "The Thief of Bagdad" opened Raoul Walsh has been receiving all sorts of offers, and at the moment he does not know whether to go to Denmark and film the fiords and the viking, to go to Italy and make a spectacle, or to return to Hollywood and make a fantastic drama with an all-oriental cast. This latter project seems to interest him most, for he discovered many interesting types among the people he employed in the mob scenes of "The Thief of Bagdad" and he would like to use them again in something that gave them bigger opportunities.

A few days ago when I met him he was deep in steamship booklets and was playing with the idea of returning to Hollywood via the Panama Canal. He thought that the time required for the trip would give him a chance to write his own scenario.

HELENE CHADWICK OUT

There has been an upheaval in the "Monsieur Beaucaire" cast which resulted in Helene Chadwick walking out and Doris Kenyon walking in to assume the role of Lady Mary. Helene was supposed to start work on the picture the first of March, but days passed and weeks passed and still they were not ready to shoot the English sequence of the story, which is the only part she appears in.

Meanwhile, she signed a starring contract which arranged for her to begin work the second week in April. So when she learned that the long-delayed work on "Monsieur Beaucaire" would take until May 1 she withdrew from the cast. Helene looked marvelous in the quaint old costumes, but she gave them up without a pang.

Several people who have recently been talking business with the Goldwyn company are getting nervous over the rumor that Goldwyn is to sell out to Metro. Statements are almost daily given out to the press that the combination of Goldwyn and Metro, if it does go through, is merely to be an amalgamation of exchanges, each company to retain its own force and its own identity, but folks working for the Goldwyn company aren't so sure. They say that they will be looking for jobs about next month.

Seers Judged Long Beak Was Due for Grief

Harland Tucker, who has found a part peculiarly suited to his personality in the role of Henry Watterson Blake, the slow hero of "Not So Fast," now playing at the Morosco Theater, is something of a believer in fortune tellers dreams, palmists, etc.

"For two years," says Mr. Tucker, "each time I dreamed a particularly vivid dream it ended up with me sitting up in bed feeling particularly chagrined because I had just lost my nose.

"When my friends took me to a fortune teller, who had prognosticated something marvelous for them, I was always told to beware of an acident to my nose.

"One day a few months ago, I had my palm read by a young writer who has made a deep study of this form of fortune telling and you can imagine how silly I felt when she told me that my nose was in danger.

"I suppose at least half a dozen persons reading my future one way and another told me something about the old proboscis, but I didn't take them seriously.

"At last I decided to have a hunk taken out of my 'beak'—there was too much of it.

"It was while I was convalescing after the operation, which, by the way, has proved entirely successful, that I remembered all the fortune-telling patter about my nose.

"Now I don't know whether to believe more strongly in cards, palms, dreams, etc., or to think it was all caused because my nose was so extremely prominent in my collections of features."

Wrinkles in Norma's Face His Doings

Foresighted inventors have devised four-wheel brakes and folding pie-plate protectors, and ambitious gentlemen have even succeeded in inducing rain to fall where rain rarely visited before, yet it took a high-powered protagonist of the cinematic art to help Norma Talmadge make up for the four characters she interprets in "Secrets," the new film success at the Criterion Theater.

Cecil Holland is said to know more about screen make-up than Columbus did about navigation. In "Secrets" Miss Talmadge needed someone to adjust the screen wrinkles for her. Holland wat borrowed from the Goldwyn company and with the aid of several boxes of grease paint and a lot of patience he helped the lovely Norma look 30 years of age, 40, 50, then the sweet age of 75.

Of course Holland wasn't needed when Miss Talmadge appears as herself in the film. No make-up was needed to make her look beautiful in that episode.

PURITAN IN PARIS IS OUT OF SPHERE

Paris, city of laughter and of song, of youth intent on how to spend its holiday with so many tempting joys on all sides . . . Paris, city of sophistry, of worldly wisdom that long has had its debut . . . Paris, the mistress of the arts, of Bohemianism, of Epicurus and his carefree company . . .

Theodore Von Eltz has not found this Paris at all in "The Strange Woman," in which he is supporting Shirley Mason as her male lead. He is in Paris in the spring of the year. But his ancestors were Puritans and the Puritan training sticks.

So here is a new species of dramatics for the young actor, who is already getting a few surprises as he moves through the old world that is ever young, while he pursues his architectural studies in this production, for which he recently signed.

"Always new combinations are found in the social drama of today," says Mr. Von Eltz, who has before him a fine opportunity for character acting in his present role. More romantic than any he has heretofore played, this small-town type is most intriguing to him, for he believes many duplicates exist in real life in the United States and in the American student life of Paris.

Micky McBan Appearing in Lloyd Picture

Mickey McBan.

Micky McBan, one of the most promising youngsters in motion pictures, signed a contract last week to appear with Harold Lloyd in his current production.

Little Micky is said to have an exceptional role in this comedy for a child of his age. He was selected for the part after a careful study by Lloyd and his executives of the available talent in Lloyd's new production, which is the second of his independent series, is a story of matrimonial ventures and has not yet been named. His first independent picture was "Girl Shy," soon to be released.

Last week at Grauman's Metropolitan Theater Micky had an important part in George Melford's production, "The Dawn of Tomorrow." He also had a part in "The Temple of Venus" which was shown recently.

Old Favorite Returns From Eastern Tour

Edith Lyle, leading lady at the Grand Avenue Theater in "The Invisible Husband," is not now to the theatergoers of Los Angeles, as many will recall her during her reign as leading lady at the Majestic Theater a few years ago. Since then she has graced the New York stage as leading woman for many successful productions. Oliver Morosco took her East to play the featured lead in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall" at the Lyceum Theater, New York, later she appeared as leading lady with John Barrymore and also with Tom Wise. Miss Lyle was also leading woman for Wilton Lackaye and was costarred with Claude Gillingwater.

Her appearance as a featured member of the cast of "The Invisible Husband" is sort of a homecoming, as it has been a number of years since Miss Lyle has appeared before a local audience. In the part of the girl in Vincent Lawrence's sensational New York stage success, "The Invisible Husband," she has a part suited to her and she will without doubt give one of the outstanding protrayals of her career in this interesting play that has Ramsey Wallace and Morgan Wallace featured in the masculine leads.

"The Invisible Husband" is the first production presented under the management of Arthur Freed and Morgan Wallace and will be followed by a series of successful plays as well as plays that will receive its world premier at this "intimate" playhouse.

GUILD PAYS TRIBUTE TO PHOTOPLAY

Screen Stars' Club in Symposium of Praise for Artistry of "White Sister"

One of the purposes for which "The Climbers," the recently organized club of screen actresses, was formed is the study of the work of stars in the screen firmament. The club recently attended the Mission Theater in a body, as the guests of the management, and then discussed the work of Lillian Gish at a subsequent meeting, to which each member read her review of the picture.

Kathryn McGuire, president, said: "The oustanding feature of 'The White Sister' is the remarkable repression displayed by all the actors. Miss Gish is superb; Ronald Colman no less; every other member of the cast is a finished artist; the photography is the last word in graphic beauty. One thing the picture proved: that, the Latin lover is not always the impetuous type we usually conceive him to be, for the big amatory scene between Miss Gish and Colman is the tenderest ever shown on the screen."

Derelys Perdue exclaimed over the beautiful photography of the scenes, actually shot in Italy and the exquisite close-ups of Miss Gish. Shannon Day considered it a privilege to have seen and studied the star's work in "The White Sister;" and predicts a great future for Ronald Colman. Marion Harlan proclaims Lillian Gish, "as superb, her beauty lily-like and her acting perfect." Ena Gregory calls the picture "an artistic triumph, with Miss Gish carrying the sympathy of the audience through every foot of the film and the rest of the cast displaying more than average intelligence." Charlotte Stevens says "Lillian Gish reaches the zenith in artistry and Henry King directed her in truly heroic manner, bringing out the very soul of the story."

Lucille Ricksen and Alberta Vaughn, the other members of "The Climbers" were absent from the discussion meeting so are not represented in this symposium.

The joint review of a great star's greatest picture by a group of leading women like "The Climbers" is perhaps one of the most interesting of the many tributes extended to Miss Gish and "The White Sister." It also forecasts a comparatively new era in the film world, when young players will seriously study the work of the leaders in their art and profit thereby.

CHAMBERS NOVEL

Robert W. Chambers again is represented on the screen in "Between Friends," the feature which J. Stuart Blackton has finished for Vitagraph. Lou Tellegen, Anna Q. Nilsson, Alice Calhoun, Norman Kerry, borrowed from Universal, and Stuart Holmes have the principal roles.

Meets Many "Babbitts" in Long Career

Michael Dark is one of those actors who are all things to all theater-going people. He is at one time the fashionable, sophisticated cynical man of the world. Then in another picture he is the narrow, small town, thoroughly satisfied type.

In real life he is the cosmopolite. He has moved in the world of fashion in New York, London and the leading cities of the Orient. He also knows the small town hero, whose cosmos is bounded north, south, east and west by the small town. He was such as Guy Pollock in "Main Street," he is doing it now as Chum Frinck, the smug colyumnist in "Babbitt," looked up to as the leading literary light of the town, but who in reality is as bromidic as the rest of the inhabitants.

As organizer of the Drama League of America, Mr. Dark visited small towns all over the country and so has met many "Chum Frincks." He is revealing in the role, but he equally enjoys presenting the cynical, sophisticated "heavy." His recent pictures include, among others, his notable work in "Broadway After Dark," "Dollar Down," and "Beau Brummel." Mr. Dark has appeared in eight Warner Brothers' productions.

Stunt Artist Comes to Work in Hollywood

Charles Hutchinson, known the world over as "Daredevil Hutch," the motion-picture industry's greatest stunt performer, has finally located on the West Coast and Hollywood will be the future scene of his activities.

This performer of hazardous feats has heretofore used Chicago, New York, Florida and foreign countries as the locales of his breath-taking activities. The slogan of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, that "They all come to Hollywood," seems this time to be true.

About nine years ago Hutch began his stunts for the movies in an odd manner. Not being able to procure a man to perform a difficult feat in a picture Hutch was in, the production was held up at great expense. Hutch finally said he'd wait no longer but would put a "make-up" on and do it himself. He did it so much more thrillingly than had been planned that he has been in constant demand ever since.

He will make a series of six features in Hollywood for a contracted release within a year, financing them himself. Edith Thornton, an English beauty with whom Hutch worked in Europe last year, has been signed to play the feminine leads and has already arrived.

BATHING BEAUTIES FEATURES OF "GOOF"

The all-star cast of J. K. McDonald's latest picture, "The Goof," now being directed at the Hollywood Studios by William Beaudine, has been augmented by the addition of a troupe of bathing girls and screen beauties who appear in one sequence of the seven-reel farce comedy.

The beauties are known as Spike Malone's diving girls, the role of Spike being interpreted by "Chuck" Reisner. The leading woman of the troupe is Alta Allen, former William Fox star. Among the girls are Eugenia Gilbert, Barbara Starr, Georgia Hale, Loretta Rush, Lillian Knight, Evelyn Francisco, Frances Dare Elaine Bennett and Ludmillia Dalger.

The swimming scenes were taken in a specially constructed pool on one of the stages at the Hollywood Studio.

STUDIED PAINTING

Michael Dark, who fills one of the featured roles in Warner Brothers "Babbitt" at one time studied painting with Frank Leyendecker, noted artist, whose magazine covers are known from Coast to Coast.

ACHIEVES AMBITION

Winnifred Bryson has achieved her greatest desire. She has been cast as the emotional lead in an all-star picture which Chester Franklin is directing. The picture is called "Souls That Pass in the Night."

ON DISADVANTAGES OF BEING LENGTHY

"Is the tall woman at a disadvantage not experienced by her shorter sisters?" Blanche Douglas, who plays Mrs. Thayer in "White Collars," at the Egan Theater, contends that she is, and she ought to know for Miss Douglas is five feet seven, and knows whereof she speaks.

"In the first place," Miss Douglas says, "a tall woman is decidedly at a disadvantage with a man, unless her escort be taller than she, and you must remember that a woman looks taller than a man the same height."

"A small woman," continued Miss Douglas, "can wear almost any type of gown, for she will look 'cute' in frills and ruffles, while a tall woman has to study her lines, and endeavor to make herself appear shorter. Then too, a little woman is naturally considered delicate, and unable she is therefore coddled and watched over. A big woman is thought to be domineering and capable of taking care of herself, whether she is or not."

RUSHES

BY X. WYSIE

A few folks still think the title should correctly read "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Muddle."

Statistics compiled in France show that country has fifty-four directors to 157 producing companies. The same proportion prevails here. The pictures prove it.

Dexter Calvin Cadwallader Keaton was one of the names they had under consideration for Buster's youngest baby. They didn't choose it because it sounds too much like a telephone prefix.

Life clipped a good one last week: "Singer's Midgets, Bigger and Better Than Ever."

It was probably a tongue-twisted operator who made a telegraphic report from New York announce that Anna Q. Nilsson is working in "The Mounted Bank."

Some one has already pulled that crack about the actors who joined the cast of "Bread" because they need the dough. That's the only reason I'm not doing it now.

Bob Frazer (among those present) comes through with an addenda. "They've got a lot of crust," he says, "calling us dough-boys. They're only half-baked, themselves."

That's enough "Bread" for today.

The bricks for the first brick house in Philadelphia, built by William Penn, were brought from England at a cost of $25,000.

Four Sisters at Hillstreet Are Beauties

Old England still supplies some of the fairest maids in the world, as is shown by the Four Fayre Sisters, coming to the Hillstreet this week. These flaxen-haired, blue-eyed girls with sweet manners and nimble musical fingers suggest all the romance of a Jeffry Farnol novel, the green countryside of Devonshire, cavaliers and stage coaches, midnight trysts at the crossroads, and gay bits of "Daffodil Time in Brittany."

Really and truly sisters, the Misses Fayre decided early that they would some day set out and see the world. Incidentally the quartet of red-cheeked beauties confess that they usually act and think absolutely alike, even to the extent of liking the same man—lucky chap, who ever he may be. So, when their father, who was also a musician of the London music halls, was away on a tour, they learned the concertina, quite a popular instrument in England.

In a short time they were known as the comeliest girls and the best concertina players in English vaudeville. Then they set sail for America and immediately their likeable personalities and really artistic playing, singing and whistling enabled them to begin a stretch in their travels to see the world.

VAMP JUST CAN'T HELP HER WAYS

Petticoat Philosopher Has Own Conception of Life; Must Follow Fate

There are so many native California daughters who have distinguished themselves before the camera that it is no surprise to discover that Carmel Myers was born in San Francisco.

Most of her life, however, has been spent in Los Angeles, and it was here that she made her start in motion pictures. It was during the filming of his mammoth production, "Intolerance," that D. W. Griffith sought the advice of Carmel's father, the late Rabbi Myers, regarding several theological points, and discovered screen possibilities in the rabbi's pretty daughter. Shortly after this the little girl's name was enrolled in the Fine Arts Stock Company and her career began.

Carmel has played many roles but her skill in portraying siren charms has lead to her being frequently cast to stir emotional waves. Her beauty, her grace and ability to wear stunning clothes, combined with exceptional talent, make her one of the outstanding features in "Poisoned Paradise," which goes into its second week at Grauman's Rialto, tomorrow. She it is who leads the hero into the trap of her confederates, famous swindlers of Monte Carlo, and no one in the audience blames the hero for following such a charming "vamp."

"I reveal in every experience, both in real life and in my screen dramas," confessed Miss Myers. "Through these I have evolved a little philosophy that our lives are largely mapped out for us and if we try and try and don't succeed, it must be for the good reason that it is not for us. Everything is for the best, whether we see it or not at the time. I've proven this too many times to doubt it."

BUCK DRAWS LINE ON RAT AS "PARD"

RODENTS BAD MEDICINE TO ACTOR; BROKE HIS LEG, ONE TIME

Although fond of most animals and reptiles, there is one specie of four-footed creature that Charles "Buck" Jones cannot reconcile himself to. It is the lowly rat and, as luck would have it, the Fox star is called upon to mingle with a family of the rodents in the picture he is now making, titled, "Double Dealing."

"Buck" claims that a raw deal was pulled on him when the director loosed six healthy young rats on the wharf set in which he was working, recently. According to Jones, no mention was made of rats in the script of "Double Dealing" and he was taken entirely by surprise when the joyful family of rodents pranced upon him in a dramatic scene in which he was the central figure.

The star's aversion to rats dates from the time when he broke a leg as the direct result of the capers of one of the pests. "Buck" was riding a high strung horse one day many years ago, when a rat darted out from a lumber pile and frightened his mount, causing him to rear backward and fall. The horse fell on the cowboy's leg, breaking it in two places. Since that time the rodent tribe has been in ill repute with Jones.

They Screened 'Beau Brummel' in Jazz Time

To the layman the life of motion-picture actors is the acme of ease. The popular belief seems to be that all the cinema celebrities do is wait around until they are called to strut before the camera—then they get paid enormous salaries at the end of the week. Maybe this incident will help to clear up this misunderstanding.

When John Barrymore signed a contract with Warner Brothers to come to Hollywood and make "Beau Brummel," for them, the time set for the completion of the film was three months. In the meantime Barrymore signed a contract to revive "Hamlet" in New York. Work on "Beau Brummel" was going along slowly when a wire was received by the actor which notified him that he would have to return to New York in seven weeks prepared to open in "Hamlet."

The November light is only suitable for photography between 7 o'clock in the morning and 2 in the afternoon. And every minute of the time lost was utilized by Beaumont. When the light failed a hasty lunch was eaten and the company repaired to the studio, where they worked on interiors" until midnight. The average for the eight weeks in which the picture was made was three days of seventeen hours each per week.

NINE LEADING MEN

Alberta Vaughn is nearing the completion of the ninth picture of "The Telephone Girl" series for F.B.O. As star of this group, which will number twelve productions, she has had a new leading man for each picture.

HAS HAPPY ROLE IN NEW PICTURE

Enid Bennett

The fourth Fred Niblo production for Louis B. Mayer presentation was begun this week with Enid Bennett and Ramon Novarro playing the leading roles. The title of the picture is "The Red Lily" and is an original by Fred Niblo, scenarized by Bess Meredyth.

The locale of the production is France—Brittany and Paris—and the action of the play covers a period of many years.

Enid Bennett, known for a series of starring vehicles as well as for her noteworthy performances as Maid Marion in "Robin Hood;" Priscilla in "The Courtship of Myles Standish" and Poppy in "Strangers of the Night," plays the colorful role of Marise, a demure little maid of Brittany, in the opening scenes of this newest Niblo-Mayer offering.

STAR'S GARDENING WORKS BOTH WAYS

Blanche Sweet is picking pecks of peas from the patch of vines she set out in the back yard of her Hollywood home this year and for the first time in their lives she and Marshall Neilan, her husband, are enjoying vegetables they have grown themselves.

"The doctor said Mr. Neilan must have fresh vegetables in his diet and I must have more outdoor exercise," she explains. "So I am doing the traditionally impossible and killing two birds with one stone. I don't like the work all of the time, but most of the time I enjoy it and have to be called in from the garden."

WITH THE HELP OF THE GOVERNMENT

Finis Fox, with the permission and co-operation of the War Department, made several reels of film showing the workings of the locks and dams in the Panama Canal, together with views of the canal fortifications, which he will use in his next production "A Woman's Reckoning."

Fox spent a week in the Canal Zone, filming the scenes, while makin gthe trip from New York to Los Angeles by boat.

NOVARRO TO STAR

Ramon Novarro will start work on his first starring picture for Metro immediately following the completion of his engagement in Fred Niblo's production of "The Red Lily," for Metro release.

TO MAKE FILM TITLE OBSOLETE

Lubitsch Visions Day of Pantomime for Screen to Tell Story Without Words

Ernst Lubitsch is to set out on a fresh exploration. With the assistance of his scenarist, Hans Kreig, he is writing the story for his next picture, on which he will soon stagt. America is the setting and Americans are the characters, but all of his people will have that universal appeal that has come to be expected from his creations. The main conflict in this drama is between a mother and daughter.

In his studio at Warner Brothers, Lubitsch said:

"It is the pantomime and not the speaking stage that is the true sister of the screen. The silent and the spoken drama have not much in common. The cinema, being so young an art, has had to lean on others, but now the prop of titles must go. A passionate love scene in a picture play should no more have the interruption of the written word than a painter should write a story underneath his picture, to tell what it is about."

A Norwegian once sat down and wrote a drama without a soliloquy. His name was Ibsen, and today the old soliloquy would creak like a ghost if used by any playwright. Will Lubitsch make titles as obsolete?

His record has been revolutionary enough to warrant any new daring. "Passion" set the vogue for the costume play. And in "Rosita," the screen showed the beauty of the "ensemble" as the Russian players use it. Long before America knew them, he had felt their influence, when living abroad. The characters in this Mary Pickford's last play had all the charm of an orchestra.

"I always think of my work as music," he said, "and when the critics spoke of the rhythm of 'The Marriage Circle,' it pleased me very much."

The slow acting in this last tremendous success has started another vogue.

"Yes, I believe," he went on, "in the school of repression. The Russian players have killed forever babos and pathos and all operatic extravagance."

Lubitsch is not an erudite man. His intellectual honesty would not permit that he be represented as such. But Marie Prevost said in explaining how he helped her put "Mitzi" in "The Marriage Circle" over so effectively:

"His intuition seems like a large eye that sees and knows and understands each different phase of life and character. And of course he has the power of passing his conception of a part over to you and letting you bring it out with your individuality intact."

His own life has been unemotional for an artist in its lack of hardship. His father was a merchant, but when the boy vetoed trade and declared for art, the family helped him. For years young Lubitsch was a comedian. And the way he became a director illustrates the truth that waiting for the emotional urge and ignoring the commercial need brings in more money in the end. He was frequently pressed to make a picture. But the type of pictures then in vogue in Europe bored him with their eternal triangles, salons and elegant ladies. He wanted something stronger. Then one night, with a group of friends in a cafe, some one said to him: "Why not do 'Carmen?'" He felt a stirring within him and when Pola Negri was suggested to play the part, the first sequence was already forming in his mind.

"I was enthused," he said, "and unless I am, I never make a picture."

Pictures Now Set Styles in Woman's Dress

Paris no longer sets the fashions of the world, according to Virginia Valli, who spent considerable time in New York buying the latest styles for her spring wardrobe.

One of the leading designers of feminine apparel in New York told Miss Valli that the actresses of the screen set the styles for the mass of women throughout the world. The designer said that the greatest "scoop" is to gain entree to the film world, where designs may be placed before the public. This insures a world market for new creations. Numerous requests for patterns of dresses worn by Miss Valli in Universal productions were received by this fashion expert.

According to Virginia, New York designers are in constant war with Parisian dictators of fashion. Paris designers work at a great disadvantage, for they cannot place their work before the world as readily as the Americans, who invade the movies with their latest creations.

While in New York Virginia was besieged by designers who know the value of the screen as an advertiser for their creations.

DOUBTS VALUE IN EDUCATING WIVES

Creighton Hale is again in his old environment of the light, humorous touch which he applied with such polish in "The Marriage Circle" and is repeating with the same charm in "How to Educate a Wife," another Warner Brothers production. There is a deal of subtle humor though it is serious business to "Billy Breeze," (Hale and his friends.

For Creighton provides calamity when he sets out to educate the husbands in educating the wives!

"There are three schools about which I have my doubts," says Creighton. "The one that teaches acting, the other that turns out newspaper people and the third that offers courses in making a successful marriage. The diplomas of these graduates don't impress me!"

COMIC MAGIC ACT

Adam Hull Shirk, publicity director of Grand-Asher, with Max Asher, comedian, will do a comedy magic turn at the Los Angeles Society of Magicians' public show at Gamut Club Theater, May 1, and they are rehearsing the act with great care. Mr. Shirk is president of the magical society and Asher is a member.

PUPPETS OFFER BARD'S PLAY

"Midsummer Night's Dream" This Week

Startling and Snug

HOW many people in Los Angeles appreciate the real art of puppetry?

Next week at the Gamut Club theatergoers will have their first opportunity to watch a Shakespearean production by puppets. These little carven actors will meander through all the enchantment of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

It has been more than fifty years since a company of puppets first gave a puppet production. In 1870 in Italy, "The Tempest" was given with Anatole France as an enthusiastic auditor. Fifty years is not a long time in the life span of the Italian puppets, who go on forever, but it is a long time in the life span of the average theatergoer and the Ellen Van Volkenburg puppets will face audiences newly born to a classical interest in puppet performances from the 8th to the 13th insts. Even Tony Sarg has not attempted such an ambitious undertaking. Incidentally Ellen Van Volkenburg produced Sarg's first puppet show, "The Rose in the Ring" which came here two years ago.

How Kathleen Wheeler famed sculptress, originally carved the Midsummer Night's puppets in Chicago; how Perry Dilley, former Manual Arts High School boy and most famous marionette maker in these parts, reconstructed them on a larger scale; the months of training of the group of students who will operate the puppets, makes an interesting story that lifts this puppet performance into an art as well as an entertainment.

TITLE BY VICTOR HUGO

A little-known and beautiful story of the great French author Victor Hugo, is one of the treasures uncovered by Perley Poore Sheehan during several years' residence in Paris in which he devoted all his leisure time to study of Hugo's life and work.

Sheehan personally supervised the spectacular production of his adaptation of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," now playing at Tally's Theater. The story, as related by Mr. Sheehan, follows:

Hugo had an old friend in Spain, a famous architect named Count de Cerda, whose only daughter was a finished harpist. The Count was called "The Builder of Barcelona," because he rebuilt the old Spanish city. The family was rich and powerful, met a series of reverses and lost all of the ancestral property.

With the de Cerdas poverty stricken, the daughter whose name was Clotilde, had to use her talent as a harpist to earn a living for the family, instead of devoting it to charity, as before.

Hugo was visiting the family in Barcelona when the matter was being discussed. It was decided the girl could not go on the stage carrying the old name of de Cerda. Then it was that Hugo said:

"Let the child go on this great adventure wearing the name of my heroine in 'The Hunchback' and I will give her a little goat with a silver bell and golden horns." Clothide declined the goat but took the name of Esmeralda and became, it is said, the greatest harpist in all the world.

One, who was Esmeralda's friend, tells that one day while walking with her in Jackson Park Chicago near the facsimile of the old Spanish convent of La Rabida, suddenly Esmeralda stopped with a cry and picked up something from the path.

"See," she cried, "the goat with the golden horns!"

The, thing she had found was part of a stickpin of silver and gilt. In a sudden fright, the Spanish girl ran and threw the trinket into the lagoon, fearing that it would bring her evil fortune.

Patsy Ruth Miller plays the role of Esmeralda in the picture.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS

John Bowers, the interesting hero of "Desire," now playing at Clune's Broadway Theater, has some unusual ideas concerning what constitutes happiness.

"The past few years I have associated with scores of young men and women who have incomes varying from $1500 to $5000 a week," says Mr. Bowers. "I have known comparatively few of them who are really happy."

"Money is like the measles: the first few dollars seem a great deal, but after that the accumulation of thousands doesn't seem to add much to one's joy or misery.

"So I have decided that money is not the secret of happiness, but rather the oil that causes the machinery of life to run smoothly.

"'Desire' (quoting from the picture) is in reality the great keystone of true happiness—for it spurs one on—and in doing the things one likes to do, one finds oneself, and in this lies contentment.

"Things, more and more—these possessions no matter how artistic or beautiful, bring added responsibility—and after all, money buys material things but adds nothing to the sum total of man's evolution.

"However, I do not cry down money. I think it quite all right, in fact, one of the best things—but that it brings happiness I know is not true, for I have had it and been uncomfortable, and I have been without it and been the same; also I have been with my friends through their ups and downs and I have found that the 'downs' bring out a gleaming and charming side of their natures that is entirely lacking while they are prosperous.

"This theme in 'Desire' is especially appropriate just now, and I consider it an exceptionally strong picture."

VOICE OF THE SILENCE

"The screen to me is a living thing, because it is a reflection of life—of people. It is a mirror of their emotions."

"That is why the successful motion picture is the one that is human—the one that pictures people just as they are—the good, the bad, with their joys and sorrows just as they appear in real life," says Mary Pickford. "The motion picture pierces every avenue of life. It travels where there is poverty or wealth, and, in fact, the silent voice of the silversheet offers a paradox, for it is heard the world over."

And in her portrayal of Dorothy in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" which is now showing at Grauman's Million Dolar Theater, Mary Pickford has presented first of all a human girl—one just the same as lives in this day and age with her impulses for good and bad. The fact that she lived in Haddon Hall before the day of bobbed hair and jazz is only an incident that lends a picturesque beauty to the background of a romantic story of love and intrigue.

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is a highly dramatic story, with a constant stream of comedy incidents built on the psychology of humanity and not the psychology of costumes. Miss Pickford in the role of Dorothy is a roguish ingenue, fiery and impetuous, who develops into a woman of poise, the typical English gentlewoman—when love comes into her life.

Marshall Neilan, who directed the picture, intermingled drama with comedy in telling proportions.

RAIN IS NOTHING IN MURIEL'S LIFE

A disconsolate face pressed against the windowpane the other day when sheets of rain made things look dreary outside, and Muriel Frances Dana's plaintive little voice expressed disgust because she couldn't go out and play.

"You mustn't complain," her mother reminded her. "It's good for the crops."

"But I'm not a crop!" mourned small Muriel.

TWO MORE NOVELS

Vitagraph announces the purchase of world picture rights to two important novels, "The Road That Led Home," by Will E. Ingersoll, and, "In The Garden of Charity," by Basil King. Directors are to be assigned by Albert E. Smith and the production will be made at the West Coast studios.

PLEASURE'S CYCLE

The English Rockets in "The Land of Fantasie," Orpheum.

Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien in "Secrets," Criterion.

Lillian Wilck and Perce Benton in "Whispering Wires," Mason.

J. Warren Kerrigan and Ida Lewis in "A Man's Man," Hippodrome.

Richard Dix, Leatrice Joy, and Rod La Roque in "The Ten Commandments," Egyptian.

Carmel Myers and Kenneth Harlan in "Poisoned Paradise," Rialto.

FOUR NEW PLAYS OPEN THIS WEEK

The coming week will see the opening of four productions new to Los Angeles. "The Invisible Husband" opened at the Grand Avenue Theater last night. "All Alone Susan" opens tonight at the Majestic. Tomorrow a mystery play, "Whispering Wires," takes the stage at the Mason; and "Smiles of 1924," the latest Coast musical revue opens at Philharmonic Auditorium.

"Lightnin'" continues as the Biltmore attraction, with "White Collars" at the Egan, and "Not So Fast" on the Morosco stage.

Fun and Excitement

There is plenty of wholesome fun mixed up in the exciting scenes of J. Warren Kerrigan's latest production, "A Man's Man," now showing at the Hippodrome. In fact, laughs vie with thrills throughout the vivid picturization of Peter B. Kyne's story. Lois Wilson has a splendid role that she handles with all the artistry of which she is capable. Ed Coxen, Kenneth Harlan, Ida Lewis, Joseph J. Dowling, Ernest Pasque, John Steppling and Eugene Pallette are also in the cast.

The vaudeville program is made up of a number of acts, including [illegible] & Falls, in "A Sure Thing;" [illegible] & Norton, in a neat little act presenting a line of talk with an occasional song thrown in. Hall & Lee in "Bits of Nonsense," Charley Brown and Newman May, in "Charley Go Way," and the [illegible].

Ready to Close

The highly successful run of the Edith Ellis comedy, "White Collars" at the Egan Theater is now approaching the end. The play starts upon its eleventh week tomorrow.

Delighted audiences have acclaimed it an ideal romantic comedy. It is entrancingly delightful, wholesome and sweet.

The cast includes Earle Foxe, Ruth Lee, Robert Ober, Mabel Forrest, George Sherwood, Blanche Douglas, Beliah Covington, Isabel Boyer and Paul Kruger.

[illegible] Show

Lee "Bud" Harrison, George Clark, Gene Darby, Ruby Darby, Billie McKee and the rest of the Burbank favorites will be seen in an entire new stage production which is the last word in [illegible] musical entertainment. The famous Burbank Baby Dolls will be seen in a flashing array of costumes and nothing has been overlooked to make the new entertainment snappy and bright.

Circus Playlet

"The Heart of a Clown," a romance of circus life, will be the feature of the Pantages show this week. The story is by Tom Barry, and the cast is headed by Charles Berling. Frederick Goodrow, Ralph Bailey and Anna Swilling appear in support.

A couple of clever chaps who [illegible] surprising twists and turns are [illegible] & Cinn. Tuck formerly headed the act of Tuck & Clair, who were favorites of Pantages patrons in past seasons.

Bert Walton returns. He has been absent just long enough to whet the appetite for more of his [illegible] comedy. The Nautical Follies shows the popular idea of life on shipboard when Jack's at sea. It has two valid excuses for existence—music and comedy. [illegible] Walsh is the mascot of the Follies. The Earles offer an acrobatic novelty "In A Spider's Web," in which they have the help of Baby June Earle. Vivid dance interpretations make the act of [illegible] & Lawler worthy of a place in this unusual program.

Viola Dana will be featured on the screen in her latest Metro production "The Social Code." The social code governs the actions and lives of all of us to a greater extent than any of us realize—but the social code was strong enough to prevent Babe Van Buren from righting a social wrong and marrying the man she loved.

Enters Third Week

"Not So Fast," the Conrad Westervelt comedy-drama which begins its third week at the Morosco Theater today, is proving a great success.

A comedy with a sparkling [illegible], it is said to contain more laughs than a toothbrush has bristles.

The cast includes Charlotte Treadway, Harland Tucker, Gayne Whitman, Mary Fisher, Albert Van Antwerp, Fannie Yantis, Douglas Rowland and Edith [illegible]. Augustin J. Glassmire directed.

The musical program arranged by J. H. Larala, leader of the Morosco orchestra, promises to please every music lover.

"Lightnin's" Fourth Week

Starting on the fourth week of its run at the Biltmore Theater tomorrow night, "Lightnin'" has created keener interest among theatergoers than any play that has come to Los Angeles in recent years.

Written by Winchell Smith and the late Frank Bacon, "Lightnin'" takes its title from its leading character, Lightnin Bill Jones, one of the quaintest and most lovable personalities the stage has witnessed in years.

Percy Pollock, in the title role, has repeated in Los Angeles the success he achieved in Boston and Philadelphia, and he is splendidly supported by a large cast, which includes thirteen of the original players who appeared with Frank Bacon during the New York run. These include Jane Oaker, Jason Robards, Jessie Pringle, Paul Stanton, Thomas McLarnie, Sam Coit, Ann Merrick, Margaret Campbell, John Hamilton, Minnie [illegible], William F. Granger, May [illegible] and James C. Lane.

[illegible] Comedy

"The Invisible Husband," a comedy in three acts by Vincent Lawrence, is the attraction at the Grand-avenue Theater. This new play is offered under the joint direction of Arthur Freed and Morris Wallace, who have recently joined hands to offer the theater-goers of this community a high type of entertainment.

Mystery Play

"Whispering Wires," Kate L. McLaurin's dramatization of a Saturday Evening Post story by Henry Leverage, begins a week's engagement at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night.

"Whispering Wires" is a detective story, and if you like your theatrical fare well seasoned with thrills you cannot afford to miss it. Mr. Leverage's original story was an exciting one and Miss McLaurin has adapted it cleverly, losing none of its exciting incidents in transferring it from the printed page to the stage.

[illegible] Johnson heads the cast. Some of the other players are Jane Houston, Marguerite Risser, Malcolm Duncan, Reynolds Denniston, Gavin Gordon, Stanley Harrison and others.

Coast Music Revue

What should prove one of the biggest musical attractions of the season is "The Smiles of 1924," which is to open tomorrow night at the Philharmonic Auditorium. Heading this show, which was produced by Emile DeRecat and E. C. Bostwick, is Annette Kellerman, considered one of the leading attractions of the present day.

Everything in the production is new. The music and lyrics were written by Joe Burrowes. With Miss Kellerman is a beauty chorus of twenty-five. Harry Gribbon, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies, is the leading comedian, assisted by Rex Storey and Bull Montana. The Ernest Belcher dancers have a series of special numbers that were created for this show. One of Abe Lyman's orchestras, Gertrude O'Connor, the Rials, the Lamb and Webber sisters, Betty Morgan, Zilla Simpson and many others make up the balance of the show.

Spanish Dancers

The Cansinos, Spain's foremost dancers, will be the headline attraction at the Hillstreet this week. Also featured on the bill is Leo Beers. Beers tells crisp stories, sings exclusive songs and plays the piano with individuality. The Hickey brothers, Ed and Tom, are also featured as "two elegant gentlemen."

George Austin Moore and Cordelia Haager return to vaudeville after an absence of several seasons in a novelty singing and talking skit which they call "It's Not Being Done Any More." Other acts include the Fayre sisters and Wire and Walker, novelty wire and flying artists.

The photoplay for the week is "The Brass Bottle," a Maurice Tourneur production with an all-star cast, including Barbara La Marr, Harry Meyers, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall and others.

Celebrate Spring

Every year, celebrating the advent of the "gentle maid," the Orpheum has its "spring fiesta week," when an effort is made to assemble a bill of lightsome nature to mark the advent of the warmer weather.

It is headed this time by one of the novelty acts of the day, the Australian wood choppers, who will meet in friendly competition with axes and whose skillful chopping and speedy work will show what a bushman can do with a keen blade. The Ward brothers, Bob and Al, will patter as Bertie and Archie, a couple of fool Englishmen, and afford a lot of fun with "Penny Ants." Raymond Bond, a clever farceur, with Eleanor Magnuson and company, will be seen in a comedy playlet, "The Minute Man." George Choos, who has produced some of the biggest and best ensemble acts in vaudeville, sends "The Land of Fantasie" to add the final touch to the bill. This ensemble of thirty includes Stasia Ledova, the dancer; W. Wania, the Russian stepper; Jimmy Lyons, the comic, and the Eight Rockets. Some half-dozen scenes are used in the act and it bristles with music, dance and fun. Frank Farnum, a dancer of parts, comes with the Stuart sisters and a company of fifteen to give a youthful revue. Stella Mayhew will be heard in her cheery songs, and Frankie Heath will hold over in a new program of song-story numbers.

CONTINENTAL FOLLOWING

Andre Lenoy, who is now enacting a part in Frank Urson's newest Paramount picture, "Roles," enjoys an exceedingly large continental following probably due to the fact that, a Parisian by birth, who served as an interpreter in the English army during the World War, he has happily combined his distinctly European outlook and personality with a complete mastery of American screen technique. Lenoy, who will be seen at the Metropolitan this week in "Bluff," also plays an important part in Douglas MacLean's latest farce, "Never Say Die."

NEW PICTURES OF WEEK INTERESTING

Three new pictures flashed across local screens yesterday for the first time here. They are "Bluff," at the Metropolitan, with Antonio Moreno and Agnes Ayres featured; "The Enchanted Cottage," Richard Barthelmess's latest production, in which May McAvoy appears in the actor's support at Loew's; and "Desire," with Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers, the Clune attraction.

The other pictures on view include "Lilies of the Field," at the Alhambra, "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," at the California, "Secrets," at the Criterion, "The Ten Commandments" at the Egyptian, "Beau Brummel" at Miller's, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" at the Million Dollar, "The White Sister" at the Mission, "Poisoned Paradise" at the Rialto, and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at Tally's.

"Lilies Comes Back

Los Angeles will again see "Lilies of the Field," the picturization of a certain type of American life, at the Alhambra Theater this week. With Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle heading the cast the production gives intimate glimpses into New York society life, and the lives of "the lilies of the field."

The cast includes Sylvia Breamer, Myrtle Stedman, Phyllis Haver, Charlie Murray, Cissy Fitzgerald, Alma Bennett, Edith Ransom and Dorothy Brock.

"Hunchback" With Us

Universal's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" continues to crowd houses at Tally's Theater. With a cast including Lon Chaney, Patsy Ruth Miller, Norman Kerry, Kate Lester and Winnifred Bryson, the Victor Hugo novel has been immortalized on a spectacular scale.

The showing is atmospherically appealing because the theater has been decorated to resemble the interior of Notre Dame and the music score is being interpreted by a large orchestra under the direction of Osburn Putman Stearns.

Enters Fourth Week

"Secrets," Norma Talmadge's latest, is in its fourth week at the Criterion Theater. "Secrets" paints a vivid picture of a woman's love through four stages of married life. As the girl of 18 Miss Talmadge scores a tremendous personal triumph; as the wife of 28 she makes a fine impression; as the matron of 40 she gives a splendid performance and as the grandmother of 75 she reaches supreme dramatic heights.

Eugene O'Brien is favorably seen and Gertrude Astor has a strong role.

Irving Berlin's "An Old-Fashioned Waltz" is proving very popular.

"Dorothy Vernon" Stays

Mary Pickford, with her ever-changing moods and piquant personality as the young mistress of the Vernon estates in the picturization of Charles Major's "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," continues to hold the center of the cinema offerings at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater.

Before a background rich in the colorful atmosphere of the Elizabethan period in England, Miss Pickford stands as the central figure about which revolves a story of romance, intrigue and tense drama.

Playing with Miss Pickford are Allan Forrest, Marc MacDermott, Courtenay Foote, Clare Eames and Lottie Pickford Forrest.

Bluff is Necessary

It takes a certain amount of bluff as well as genius to achieve success nowadays, according to the theme of Agnes Ayres's and Tony Moreno's portrayals in the Sam Wood production, "Bluff," showing this week at Grauman's Metropolitan.

The picture, adapted from the original story by Rita Weiman and Josephine Quirk, tells how a girl goes to the big city to make her way but is unsuccessful in selling her clever designs for milady's fashions. A famous actress is reported missing and the girl adopts the clever ruse of impersonating the actress, whom she very closely resembles. Fame and fortune are at once hers and everything is lovely until said actress turns up on the scene and then the complications begin.

The picture heads a balanced program which also includes the popular singers, Naum Costa and Norm Hewlett, who sing "I Love You." The regular musical features, comedy and novelty reels are also on the bill.

Barthelmess Picture

Richard Barthelmess appears at Loew's State Theater this week, supported by May McAvoy in a screen version of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's drama, "The Enchanted Cottage." The play is based on the theme that love makes all things beautiful, centering upon the dramatic figure of a crippled youth, played by Barthelmess.

Lloyd Hamilton in his latest two-reel comedy, "Lonesome," will look after the comedy entertainment on the program. "Honeymoon Garden" is an atmospheric prologue conceived by Fanchon and Marco, and precedes the feature.

Original Screen Story

"Desire," and orginal screen story written by John B. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds, is the feature attraction at the Clune Broadway Theater.

"Desire" is an expose of the inner secrets of high society. Immense wealth, the marvelously beautiful and luxurious homes, the ways and pastimes which are the daily existence of this set—these are all vividly portrayed.

Marguerite De La Motte, John Bowers, Estelle Taylor, David Butler, Walter Long, Lucille Hutton, Edward Connelly, Ralph Lewis, Vera Lewis, Russell Simpson, and Chester Conklin are in the cast.

"Nellie" Continues

The old-time stage drama, "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," will be seen for a second week at the California Theater.

The cast of "Nellie" includes such well-known players as Claire Windsor in the role of the heroine; Mae Busch as Polly, the sweetheart of Raymond Griffith, who portrays the demon taxi driver; Edmund Lowe and Hobart Bosworth.

Will Rogers is also on the California bill in his latest comedy called "Going to Congress."

"Beau Brummel" Pleases

John Barrymore is always John Barrymore, which means that he can always be depended upon to give his audiences unfailing dramatic entertainment. But Barrymore in the adaptation of a play that is one of the best in this country means something spectacular and unique. As Beau Brummel, the prince of dandies and intimate friend of the Prince of Wales, Barrymore has a role that is best suited to his personality.

"Beau Brummel," which is the screen version of Clyde Fitch's stage success of the same name which Richard Mansfield made famous on the stage, is now playing in its fourth week at the Miller Theater. The picture was made by Harry Beaumont for Warner Brothers. Beaumont, after months of study of the characters who appear in the picture, chose for the supporting cast Carmel Myers, Willard Louis, Elec B. Francis, Irene Rich and Richard Tucker.

"White Sister's" Last Week

Just one week more remains in which to see Henry King's production of "The White Sister," with Lillian Gish, at the Mission Theater. Fred Niblo's latest production, "Thy Name is Woman," will be the next attraction at this theater.

Miss Gish's performance in "The White Sister" has been pronounced the greatest of her career, and the popularity which the picture has enjoyed here and in other cities in which it has been shown is proof that the public agrees with the verdict of the critics.

Mission Play to Have Run in San Francisco

John Steven McGroarty, author and producer of the Mission Play, has returned from San Francisco, where he went to complete arrangements for its production at the Columbia Theater in that city. This move was the result of the insistent demand of a group of San Franciscans, who had importuned Mr. McGroarty to bring California's great pageant-drama to that city for a limited engagement.

Despite the superstitious "thirteen," the Mission Play will close its thirteenth year's run on the thirteenth day of April at the old San Gabriel playhouse. Following its close, Mr. McGroarty's second play, "La Golondrina," will go into rehearsal.

Then on April 20, which is Easter Sunday, the new play will go into production for a run of two weeks. "La Golondrina" tells another chapter of early California history, but many years later than that of the Mission Play.

The Mission Play will be taken to San Francisco on May 4 and will open at the Columbia on May 5. It will run for four or six weeks. More than 2300 performances will have been given by April 13, the 2291st performance already having been passed.

Mr. McGroarty announces that after this week no more special rates will be in effect. Because of the play's educational value he has been offering special inducements for school children to attend. But with the demand for seats for these last few days of the Mission Play's season, he finds that special rates will be impossible.

Matinee performances are given every afternoon except Monday, and evening performances are given every Wednesday and Saturday.

Her Ideal of Screen Critic is "Flapper"

Dorothy Mackaill, who plays the feminine lead in the Fox production, "The Man Who Came Back," being directed by Emmett Flynn, says that she would rather have so-called flapper's good opinion of her screen portrayals than that of any other person in the world. Miss Mackaill says that when she wants to find out how she "registers" in a picture, she makes it a point to attend a matinee performance where one of her pictures is being shown, and tries to secure a seat behind a crowd of so-called flappers. She adds this is the one time she is pleased that there is talking during a picture, as she never fails to get an absolutely unbiased opinion on her work.

OATMAN STUDENT IN OUTDOOR PRODUCTION

Victor Jory, student of the Marta Oatman School of the theater, has been engaged to play in a production of "Ramona" under the direction of Garnet Holmes. Mr. Jory will portray the character of Alesandro, husband of Ramona. This will be an out-of-door production at Hemet, Cal., and it is anticipated that large audiences will witness the four performances, the 10th to 14th inst., inclusive.

Ray Clifford, also student of the Marta Oatman School of the theater, is playing the part of the magistrate in "Liliom," at the Pasadena Community Theater, under the direction of Gilmore Brown.

FINISHES MAYER PICTURE

Robert Frazer has finished work in the Louis B. Mayer production, "Broken Barriers."

ACTOR BANQUETED IN SAN FRANCISCO

Ralph Lewis was guest of honor at a banquet tendered by the San Francisco Press Club while in the northern city with Emmett Flynn in the Fox production of "The Man Who Came Back." Police Chief O'Brien of San Francisco, members of the police commission and a committee including a number of mail carriers and many members of the newspaper fraternity attended the banquet.

Years ago, on the legitimate stage, Lewis was conceded to be the first actor to properly portray the role of a newspaper reporter and was made a life member of the San Francisco Press Club in honor of the characterization.

Steel King Says Business Men of France and Reich Could Win Peace

BY DREW PEARSON

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, April 5.—French and German steel manufacturers could establish a mutually profitable combine which would bring peace to the Ruhr, were it not for the meddlesome interference of governments.

This was the verdict given me by Eugene Schneider, France's steel king, who controls French industry as Stinnes does German. Schneider was until recently chairman of the Comite des Forges, or Committee of Steel Manufacturers. His main plant at Le Creusot is the oldest in France and has supplied her armies with munitions and ordnance since the days of Napoleon. Moreover, the war left him with shipyards at Cherbourg, torpedo works at Havre, a cartridge factory at Bordeaux, an electrical machinery plant at Champagne-sur-Seine — at one time a total of 182 plants were found to be under his control.

Within a week after the Armistice, these factories were being converted to a piece-time basis, and the plant which had been turning out the famous French seventy-fives was making one locomotive per day.

But post-war prosperity promised even greater possibilities, and Schneider pushed on to Central Europe where he engaged in a titanic contest with Hugo Stinnes for no less a prize than the industrial control of the continent.

The KAISER'S COURT AND ITS SECRETS

by Count Robert Zedlitz

"To-day he has ordered the thirty-seventh change in the uniforms of the regiments of the Guard since he mounted the throne."

["The Kaiser's Court and its Secrets," publication of which begins with the accompanying installment, is the diary of Count Robert Zedlitz-Truetzschler, for many years an officer of the German imperial court and nearly all his life active in its affairs.

His diary, recently published in Germany and now first offered to the American public by The Times, has created a sensation on the continent and in Germany itself has started a political storm. His current memoirs show the Kaiser as a foolish and stupid man, the happy victim of flattery from himself and from all others to whom he would listen. Liberal elements in Germany have hailed this picture as truth; reactionaries have resented it.

Count Zedlitz was a court marshal for twelve years—the most significant years of the Kaiser's rule. He is a member of a distinguished family and the son of a former Governor-General of Hesse-Nassau.—Editor's Note.]

ALL HIGHEST MAJESTY'S VIRTUE

Perhaps the Emperor's most salient characteristics are his stubborness, his refusal to listen to anybody or be influenced by anybody, his utter belief in his own power, genius and infallibility. He does not consult his ministers nor ask their opinions, but simply sends them curt, martial commands, to be executed immediately, regardless of their legality or constitutionality. Only very rarely is consideration of the German Parliament or some other law-giving body able to restrain his high-handedness.

He shows this characteristic most typically—and with most disastrous consequences—in his relations to the army. I have watched him during the yearly maneuvers, give half a dozen conflicting orders within the space of a single night. Nobody ever tells him that these sudden, contradictory orders upset important strategic plans, bring vital strategic experiments to naught, force soldiers to make long, tiring and senseless marches and counter-marches, and throw completely out of focus the commissary train which supplies the troops with food.

During these maneuvers whose intention is to create a picturesque milieu, a splendid background, a gorgeous and colossal spectacle, and he cares nothing about actual military results. Nor does anybody dare criticise or suggest, not even the chief of the general staff, Count Schlieffen.

But, while all are silent where they ought to give just and necessary criticism, those next to His Majesty will assure him that the spectacle has been wonderfully inspiring. And so, small wonder that the result is a fathomless belief in himself, something almost approaching megalomania, and the issuing of commands in the very spirit of Louis XIV: "Such is my pleasure."

MARTINET ON ART

Quite in keeping with the man are his frequent conversations, or rather monologues—since nobody else can open his mouth when he speaks—about art. The Emperor dislikes all modern tendencies in the arts and not only does he express his opinions on the subject in unvarnished language, but he tries to enforce and substantiate these opinions with the help of prizes, private and state orders and purchases, decorations, and expressions of imperial favor.

At the time of the unveiling of the Wagner monument in Berlin he said to me:

"Why do the people make all this fuss about Wagner? The fellow was after all only a bandmaster—nothing but a bandmaster. Just a damned, ordinary bandmaster!"

As with music, so with literature. He sympathizes only with classic antiquity and, in lesser degree, with everything that is dead and buried.

This idiosyncrasy has led him to study the customs, decorations, dresses and uniforms of the past and, since his brain is largely occupied with the outer man, to apply the result of these studies by forever introducing changes meant to reproduce periods of former Prussian history in the uniforms of his army.

Today (in the year 1904) he has ordered, for instance, the thirty-seventh change in the uniforms of the regiments of the Guard since he mounted to the throne.

TAKES TITLES SERIOUSLY

He is honorary colonel of a number of foreign regiments, but he takes it quite seriously.

One day, for instance, he decided, without preparation or warning, to go to Russia and to inspect and review his Russian regiment, the Wiborgs. It took a great deal of persuasion to cause him to give up this intention.

Similarly he insisted on keeping up intimate relations with his English regiment, which embarrassed the British to such a degree that, although the regiment had the privilege of remaining in garrison in England except in time of war, they finally sent it to India. The Emperor considered this a personal slight, never imagining that his continuous interference in the affairs of this regiment was decidedly tactless and very embarrassing to the British War Ministry.

Even in war time he tries to keep up telegraphic communication with his foreign regiments. Thus, during the Russian-Japanese war, he was as much pleased with the successes of the Wiborg Regiment and told them so by cable, as if it had been part of the German army, and he still glories in telling of the exploits of "my Russian grenadiers."

PUTS ON REGALIA

Similarly, having honorary rank in several foreign navies, he is in the habit of putting on the full regalia of a British admiral when he receives the British Ambassador in simple audience.

No wonder that, the other day, when he went to the opera to hear Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," he surprised the Berliners by appearing in all the pomp and glory of a captain of the imperial navy.

The master of the wardrobe, Herr von Kotze, takes it even more seriously than the Emperor. He appeared yesterday on the street wearing a necktie of a brilliant and extravagant green, and, asked the reason why, he replied: "Today His Majesty has graciously deigned to go hunting!"

But, thoroughly conversant with the uniforms of his own and foreign armies, he is less conversant with what really matters abroad, and those close to him are fully as ignorant . . .

IGNORANT OF FACTS

Thus, when news came in 1904 that war between Russia and Japan had broken out, even those whose duty it was to be well informed on the subject had diametrically opposite opinions on the probable outcome of the war.

Prince Heinrich, for instance, was honestly worried over the fate of the Russians, while a naval officer of high rank, who had spent many years in Far Eastern waters, remarked:

"It is incredible how these Japanese can have the nerve to measure themselves with the Russians!"

And that same day the Japanese were winning their brilfirst sea battle of Port Arthur. . . .

Here at court one sees all the time what harm can be done by half-baked opinions expressed during the course of conversations.

The other day at luncheon the talk turned to some recent crimes and then to the growing lawlessness among the

Blames Crisis in Ruhr on Politics

Steel King Says Business Men of France and Reich Could Win Peace

BY DREW PEARSON

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, April 5.—French and German steel manufacturers could establish a mutually profitable combine which would bring peace to the Ruhr, were it not for the meddlesome interference of governments.

This was the verdict given me by Eugene Schneider, France's steel king, who controls French industry as Stinnes does German. Schneider was until recently chairman of the Comite des Forges, or Committee of Steel Manufacturers. His main plant at Le Creusot is the oldest in France and has supplied her armies with munitions and ordnance since the days of Napoleon. But post-war prosperity promised even greater possibilities, and Schneider pushed on to Central Europe where he engaged in a titanic contest with Hugo Stinnes for no less a prize than the industrial control of the continent.

DUEL WITH STINNES

Schneider bought the control of one of the greatest steel corporations in Upper Silesia and Stinnes practically annexed its rival. The same thing happened in Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, Poland and even in Turkey. As fast as the French magnate obtained control of some big industrial plant his German competitor snapped up another. Probably only the two men themselves know the real extent of their holdings, but it can hardly be an exaggeration to say that they represent a total of industrial equipment such as never before has been controlled by two individuals.

The occupation of the Ruhr dealt a smashing blow to German industry and started a widely circulated story that Schneider had backed the occupation as a desperate means of crushing his German opponent. In the inner circles of big European business this is not credited. It is pointed out that Schneider resigned as chairman of the Comite des Forges as soon as the French troops began to march and it is declared that at that time Stinnes and Schneider had practically reached an agreement to suspend hostilities and effect a combination.

Now keeping this in mind come back to M. Eugene Schneider's

Eugene Schneider in Great Battle with Hugo Stinnes for Industrial Control of Europe

Eugene Schneider, the steel king of France, is one of the half-dozen uncrowned monarchs who are today masters of Industrial Europe. Since the close of the war, Schneider has been engaged in a titanic struggle with his German rival, Hugo Stinnes, for control of the vast steel and coal resources of Eastern Europe. The extent of the combined holdings of these two men is known only to themselves but it is commonly believed that they dwarf the possessions of even the greatest of American business magnates.

It has been rumored for some time that secret negotiations were under way between the big French and German industrialists looking toward an agreement which would have a profound effect in stabilizing Europe. In the present interview M. Schneider intimates that these rumors are not without foundation.

The MOST INTERESTING PLACE in LOS ANGELES

BY PATRICK W. SHEPARD

Behind the brass buttons, the frosted windows, the scrape, scrape of the bailiff's pen, the cold iron fretwork of the jail bars, the warning wail of the police ambulance, and the thumbworn pages of the desk sergeant's blotter are a limitless number of unusual circumstances showing in great variety the pathos and glamour, the tragedy and comedy of human life that make Central Police Station the most interesting place in Los Angeles.

The little white light that locates for the stranger the headquarters of law enforcement and crime prevention is the mortar and pestle of the pharmacy of human emotions. Step inside and you will find them labeled with tears, sighs, groans, laughter, low mumblings, grins.

And behind the labels you will find many things. It may be the impassioned pleading of the mother for the daughter arrested for shoplifting; the defiant yet hesitant sobbing of the boy who "just took the car for a joyride;" the smirking grin of the woman of the street haled before the desk sergeant; the gaunt hungry faces of the prisoners behind the jail bars; or the noiseless tracery of the emotionless red finger of the mechanical third-degree spelling out the innermost thoughts of the suspected murderer. Or again it may be the downcast head of the guilty or the defiant sparkling eyes of the innocent standing before the Police Court. Or still again it may be the tireless ministrations of the police surgeon administering antidotes for pain and suffering. This is for the philosopher.

For the adventurous; the roar of an unleashed motor, the click, click of shells dropped into the chambers of shotguns, the shriek of the police siren, the rush and crackle of red flames; or the echoes behind the frosted windows of the grinding wheels of law administration and political endeavor in the City Hall.

And all this is but a small part of the panorama. Many unsual places will come and go, but Central Police Station with its law enforcement organization, like the river, will go on 'till the end of time.

THE BLIND CONGRESSMAN

A Congressman's wife in overalls! Did you ever meet her? No! I thought not. You don't find her at the women's clubs, at the bridge luncheons, at receptions, or jazzing till dawn. Her life is too full of work, of sacrifice, and most wonderful of all, of a great joy for what she has achieved.

One door in the House Office Building bears the inscription: "Thomas D. Schall, Minnesota."

Inside you will find Thomas Schall, the blind Congressman, and Margaret, his wife. Not along his wife, but his eyes, his secretary, in very truth a help-meet for him. I must tell you of the couple; they are an inspiration to Washington.

Mrs. Schall is short of stature, with tiny hands and feet, blue eyes that twinkle, and a mass of wavy blond hair; and as a sartorial setting for these—blue overalls.

"I began to wear them in wartime," she says, "when we didn't have much money for dresses, and they are so comfortable and convenient, I always wear them for the office."

Just think of it! They were both at college, and Margaret first saw him when a thrilling baseball game was being played. There were jeers at the losers, followed by a lesson in manners. Tom Schall leaped in with handy fists and diverted attention from a vanquished comrade who had got mixed up in it. Margaret Huntly saw it. She wasn't surprised when she learned that his middle name was David. You know how it is with girls!

They were both prize-winners; Tom won all the oratorical honors and Margaret gathered in the trophies for French and German. They hadn't much to start with in their matrimonial partnership but a great faith.

Tom had struggled from obscurity as a chore boy, bootblack, newsboy and janitor to his own law office in Minneapolis.

It was a small office, neither crowded with furniture nor clients. Some who sought assistance paid for his services in farm produce. One offered a dilapidated old cider press in exchange for legal advice.

FOUR YEARS, AND TRAGEDY

But these two youngsters playing the game of life laughed at obstacles and Margaret managed the little apartment called home with the same economy and energy as he did the office.

Four happy years, with success just in sight, then—tragedy.

The hand of Fate shut off forever the world and the face he loved. An electric cigar lighter had short-circuited and was the instrument of destruction. Thomas Schall was blind.

"What shall I do?" he asked.

"I will be your eyes and you shall still practice law," said Margaret Schall.

"She has never failed me—never!" That is the tribute he pays her after long, long years of unchanging night.

Margaret Schall studied law in order to brief her husband's cases. Unlike the seeing lawyer, he could not refer to authorities or notes. He had to depend entirely upon his memory.

At first she had to read and reread the facts for him to memorize. But the darkness has led to greater concentration and now, after one reading, he is almost letter perfect.

They have won. But there were times when even his wife didn't know the blackness of his soul.

Success at law rewarded their gallant effort and Thomas Scholl decided to enter politics. He is now serving his fourth term.

SHE DRAFTS BILLS

Margaret didn't know anything about politics then—now she loves it.

I was sitting talking to the blind Congressman one day when his wife had been called out of the room.

"She is my eyes, she is my pencil; she had faith in me and gave me courage to go on. I have never seen her in overalls, but I know that she wears them with the same grace as she did her silkiest dress when I could see."

Mrs. Schall knows all about the bills her husband drafts; in fact she has drafted many of them, and knows their status and popularity. She knows and loves the people he represents. They are her people, too.

People have found fault with Tom Schall for appointing his wife as secretary.

"It would be so easy for a disinterested secretary to deceive a blind Congressman, and, incidentally, lighten his own labor. But with my wife, whose interests are my own, nothing is neglected. In fact, I think we hold the record for answering Congressional mail within twenty-four hours," he added proudly.

Tom Schall was a little apprehensive when he set out on his first campaigning trip, with a chauffeur to guide him. When he came home, he told his wife of the success with his audiences. Then Mrs. Schall drove the car and selected the location for him to speak when they reached a town.

SHE GUIDES THE BREEZE

"It's important to get a good background, and to have the wind blowing toward the audience, not away from it. Local committeemen don't think of those things!

I remember one campaign they had When Tom was speaking Margaret would take a hammer and hand bills and decorate the town.

Do you know they went abroad in 1918 and Margaret Schall was granted special permission to accompany her husband into the front-line trenches? At Fiume she was under fire and she translated for her husband's sightless eyes the pages of history that were being written in blood.

Even after they were homeward bound her courage was again put to the test. The first day out their vessel was struck by a submarine. She had arisen early and was fully dressed when the shock came. She hurried below to assist her husband, and bring him on deck. Then she tied him to her waist by a rope and as they were both good swimmers, she was prepared to guide him at sea just as she did on land.

When they came on deck, she electrified the captain by her cheery "Good morning, captain!" No hysterics, no weeping. Is it any wonder that he recommended that she be cited for bravery when in great danger and that his request was granted!

Even her husband marveled at her extraordinary coolness.

"Why, I knew we couldn't be drowned," she said, "because the lines in my palm show a rescue from shipwreck."

Mrs. Schall, I may tell you, is a wonderful palmist and this is not the only prediction that has come true.

She doesn't wear her decoration. "I'm saving it to give to Peggy

Movie Beauties

Use these powders—you will revel in them
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have for years paid $5 per box for my powders—to get the finest in existence. So do most movie beauties. They must have the best.

I started to offer other women my aids to beauty and to youth. But I never thought of powders. I did not dream that such powders as I use could be supplied at modest prices.

But the makers have helped me out. They now supply me these powders under my name at a price which all can pay. I told them that women would use millions of boxes. So those who use my Beauty helps may now get my powders, too.

None so exquisite

These powders are supreme productions, made for those who demand the best without regard to price. They are as fine as vapor, as harmless as dew, and fragrant with my favorite perfume. Most of you have never seen such exquisite powders.

There are two kinds, light and heavy. I use a heavy cold cream powder, with a base like my Youth Cream. It clings and stays. But some like a powder light and fluffy, without the cold cream base. So I had both kinds prepared.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream Powder — the heavy, clinging powder—sells for $1. Edna Wallace Hopper's Face Powder—the light and fluffy powder—sells for 50 cents. Both come in three shades—white, flesh and brunette.

Supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. They also supply my Youth Cream, based on fruits. My Facial Youth—my famous liquid cleanser. My Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. And my White Youth Clay—the utmost in a facial clay. Those are the creations which made me a beauty, and which keep me a beauty at my grand old age. My Beauty Book comes with each.

If you want a matchless powder, go ask for a box of mine. If you want more beauty or perennial youth, the very ways which brought them to me are at your command. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.—[Advertisement.

spacious Paris office, where before an open fire, he answered my question, "Could not French and German steel men get together without government interference and settle the trouble in the Ruhr?"

GERMAN PACT POSSIBLE

"Yes," was his frank reply. "I think they could have done, and still may be able to do so. I have said that one Frenchman should get together with one German and work out a business agreement by which there would be mutual profit. Without mutual profit, there could be no lasting agreement. If enough individual business men could get started working together in this way, we should gradually but assuredly obtain international co-operation.

"The chief difficulty in the Ruhr has been that our government has made the mistake of forcing a mass agreement. It has lined all the German business men on one side and marshaled the Frenchmen on the other, waved the flag over each side and commanded: 'Come to terms.'" M. Schneider paused significantly and then concluded: "Business and politics don't go together like that."

"Can France and Germany ever live together as the United States and Canada do?" I interrupted.

"Canada and the United States were young countries," M. Schneider replied thoughtfully. "They started without prejudice and grew up together.

"France and Germany have followed separate paths through many centuries. France has been invaded three times during a not very long period of years. We can be invaded again so easily. In the old days when a bomb hit in one spot and killed only a few people, war meant little. Today when airplanes can carry gasbombs over Paris in a few hours, war is another matter. It is absolutely necessary that we be prepared. In my opinion, our forces are not as strong as they should be.

VIEWPOINTS DIFFER

"You cannot understand that statement, perhaps, because you do not understand our point of view. I did not understand yours, until I went to the United States. I heard you say: 'We live peaceably with Canada along a border 3000 miles in length. Why cannot you do the same?' I began to see this point of view, and it has helped me in my work since I returned. It is a point of view as foreign to us as ours is to you.

"There is a great deal in this matter of the point of view," M. Schneider continued thoughtfully. "I got an example of it the other day from my boy who is in school in England. A French boy, if punished by a whipping, would consider it such a disgrace that he would leave school. But according to the English code of honor, the boy who has done wrong must and should submit to the cane, and recently when it was put to a vote, the English boys decided to retain the cane as their form of punishment. There you see the English and French boys each have a different code, but each is correct from his own point of view.

"So it is natural that such a distant country as the United States cannot understand our point of view, and we cannot understand yours. In such cases it seems to me necessary that we should trust each other. These are times when mutual trust is most necessary."

STAGE IMPROVING, THESPIAN THINKS

According to Robert Ober, who plays a leading role in "White Collars," the Los Angeles stage has never made the advance that can now be noted, almost from week to week.

"Both our local companies and the plays that are being road showed to this city, mark a 50 per cent improvement over the stage entertainment which was considered acceptable a few years ago," said Ober recently.

masses. The Emperor, speaking of how hard it was for him personally to rule a rowdy breed, added:

"Yes—very soon I'm going to see if a little blood-letting and promiscuous shooting won't help the situation!"

And while he was saying these words a number of servants, who heard every word, were in the room.

I believe that the Emperor is too shrewd a politician to imagine that by shooting a few hundred agitators one can cure deeply rooted unrest, chiefly considering that in Germany such unrest must infect millions before it can become dangerous. And the only consequence of such rash remarks, should they become known outside of the palace, would be to spread and strengthen the seeds of this unrest.

At the time of the street-car employees' strike in 1900 the Emperor telegraphed to the general in command of the guard regiments: "I expect that when the troops begin shooting they will bag at least 500 people!" . . .

LIFE DEMORALIZING

I remember one day, during the hunting season in Rominten, Prince Donna reporting that a fine stag had been sighted, and when he came into the imperial presence he made believe that he was completely out of breath and had come on a dead run—just to make the matter seem important and to flatter the Emperor. It was typical. Again, on our return journey from Rominten His Majesty was received at the railroad station by Gen. Von Mackensen, who bowed deeply and kissed his gloved right hand; afterward, when the train steamed out of the station, he even succeeded in producing a few tears in sign of sorrow at the parting.

This sort of thing is contagious. So, for instance, I watched an aristocratic lieutenant of the Hussars of the Guard kiss the Emperor's hand on receiving a military command; and I saw the Emperor playfully pinching the ear of the colonel of the First Infantry Regiment, at the same time giving him a serious call-down for remissness of duty.

During the return from Rominten, via Danzig to Hubertussock, Prof. Slaby of the Technical High School in Charlottenburg was in the railway coach. He is a fine scholar whom, as a scholar, I admire greatly. But when it comes to lickspittle flattery and toadying he knows no limit. Time and again he mentioned how often "All-Highest and Most Gracious Majesty" had been challenged by opposition, and how, always, "All-Highest and Most Gracious Majesty's opponents" had been forced to realize and admit their errors, until finally the Emperor said:

"Exactly! My subjects should simply do as I command. But they insist on thinking their own thoughts, and the natural result is a mass of difficulties!" . . .

HOME BORES HIM

The Emperor shows his remoteness from the world as it is by what he calls his ideals of virtue.

Doubtless, from a human point of view, it is splendid for the Emperor to give to his nation an example of decent, clean private and family life. But the result is being spoiled when the court chaplain refers to "All-Highest Majesty's virtue" in every sermon, when he reads these sermons aloud to the Emperor and the assembled court and lards them with blatant flatteries until the Emperor develops a conviction of self-righteousness which does not differ very much from pharisee hypocrisy.

A few days ago, the Emperor was sitting, alone, occupied with a book. Suddenly he look up and turned to the Empress.

"Are you going to spend the night here?" he asked.

"No, Wilhelm," she replied. "But you were so deep in your reading that I did not want to disturb you."

"Well," he rejoined, "what else is there for me to do in this place—with everything such a frightful bore?"

The other day (January 25, 1905) we were on the eve of His Majesty's birthday celebration and everything had already been prepared for thirty-four guests of the blood royal. At half past six I received a message over the telephone telling me that the Emperor had decided not to celebrate his birthday and notifying me to inform all the guests, who were already on their way to Berlin, not to come, as Prince Eitel Friedrich was sick with pneumonia. The Prince of the Asturias was already in Paris, on his way from Madrid, and the Emperor asked Count Eulenburg to telegraph to the Prince at once, asking him not to come. The Empress, who was present remonstrated with His Majesty.

"But, Wilhelm," she exclaimed, "you can't do such a thing!"

He pushed her to one side with a sharp gesture of his right hand, and said:

"I am the one to give orders here—not you!"

GETS A FALL

How dangerous it is for a ruler to express his personal views tactlessly and, worse, to confide them to the written page was proved at the time when Germany played Russia against England and England against Russia, doing a risky political tight-rope dance between the two. The Emperor, without consulting his advisers entered into an intimate correspondence with Czar Nicholas. The latter gave the letters to his Minister for Foreign Affairs. He, since at the same time Russia was dancing the tight-rope between Germany and Great Britain, transmitted the correspondence to the English Foreign Office, which therefore received a thorough insight into Germany's foreign politics.

Tactless, too, is his mania of interfering in the affairs of other rulers which has earned for him dislike, enmity, and even active and violent hate.

Once Count Eulenburg said to Lascelles, the British Ambassador: "You used to be so friendly to us to understand us so well. What has come over you of late?"

Lascelles replied with a half-laugh: "If I should report to London every word your All-Gracious Master says about us British we would have been at war a long time ago."

Only a few days later—this (1905) was at the time of the wedding of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg to Princess Victoria—I heard the Emperor talk to the latter and the Duke Friedrich Ferdinand about his relations to Great Britain, expressing violent personal dislike and disapproval of King Edward. And this in the presence of several English princes and princesses.

SHE'S STEEPLE-JILL

Comedienne's Air Feats Make You "Hold Your Breath"

Theater audiences have grown used to seeing a male star do daredevil stunts, but when "Hold Your Breath," the feature comedy which the Christie Film Company is producing, with a cast headed by Dorothy Devore, is completed, it is claimed that Harold Lloyd is going to have a rival in this petite young actress, who climbs about on tall buildings, with all the courage, ease and abandon of the spectacled comedian.

Miss Dorothy is daily strolling out on the steel girders of a big downtown building now in course of construction, sliding down fire escapes, climbing hand-over-hand up a thick rope, seven stories in midair, and struggling for a foothold on the windowsill of a twelve-story building, in her current characterization.

BACK FROM LOCATION

Al Santell, F.B.O. director, and his company, headed by Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller, have returned from San Pedro, where they were engaged on exterior scenes for one week. Santell is filming Bertram Millhauser's original story "Fools in the Dark."

A DISSOLVING VIEW

Walter Hiers bought a mountain-top lot in Hollywood, whereon rests a story.

This land was supposed to have an ocean view, but it so happened that another mountain, slightly higher than Walter's, reared its bulk between the screen comedian's lot and the Pacific.

A few weeks ago, however, contractors got busy and leveled the top of the adjoining mountain, affording Hiers a clear view of the ocean and happiness infinite.

Now his joy is interrupted.

More contractors are on the neighboring hilltop and the foundation for a house is being laid.

BUSINESS OUSTED BY OLD LURE

Richard Barthelmess Left Commercial Career to Enter Picture World

Richard Barthelmess has forged to the front with greater strides, perhaps, than any of the younger players. Although his screen career dates back to "War Brides," it was not until "Tol'able David," the picture for First National which won the Photoplay Magazine medal of 1922, that he finally established himself as a star. Prior to that, however, he had attained popularity through his work in D. W. Griffith productions, his characterization in "Broken Blossoms" being especially notable.

Pictures that Barthelmess has made for First National since "Tol'able David" are "Fury," "The Bond Boy," "The Bright Shawl," "The Fighting Blade" and "Twenty-one." His latest production, "The Enchanted Cottage," will be shown at Loew's State Theater all this week.

Barthelmess was born twenty-eight years ago in New York. His father died when he was only 2 years old and his mother, faced with the problem of supporting herself and her small son, turned to the stage for a livelihood. Although she had had no previous stage experience, she succeeded in establishing a name for herself as a character woman.

When she had to go on tour Dick was sent to a military school, afterwood entering Trinity College, Hartford, Ct. During his school years Dick spent his vacations with his mother, and occasionally played small parts with her in stock. At college he took an active part in amateur theatricals. This way he gradually acquired a good foundation for a stage career; yet upon his graduation from college he decided against the stage and went into business instead. He wanted to make money, and as an actor he didn't see much chance.

His business career was short-lived, however. He was working in a Connecticut town when a motion-picture company began making pictures near-by. The lure was too strong. Barthelmess's screen career dates from that moment.

He is married to Mary Hay, a well-known dancer, and they have one daughter.

HIS THIRD STRAIGHT

"Bob" Edeson will be one of the featured players seen through "The Bedroom Window," now being made by William De Mille at the Lasky studios. This is the third consecutive production the character actor has appeared in under the Paramount banner.

START NEW COMEDY

After two days' rest Jimmie Adams has begun a new Christie comedy which is being directed by Harold Beaudine. The story, which is yet untitled, was written by Beaudine and Frank Roland Conklin and it promises many novelties in the field of comedy.

Why Bleaching Is The Safest Way to Whiten Dark Teeth

Dentists' New Discovery Guaranteed to Remove Teeth Stains—Or Costs Nothing.

A new safe method has been discovered which whitens teeth instantly, giving dull yellowish teeth a beautiful new flashing whiteness and lustre.

The old way to whiten stained teeth was to scrub them with harsh gritty abrasives, which usually scraped away the precious enamel. But this new safe method is entirely different. It is called Bleachodent Combination and consists of a mild liquid and a special kind of paste. This liquid softens and loosens the stains—while the special paste gently removes them. The reason this new method is safer than the old way is because the mild ingredients of Bleachodent Combination are especially combined to act only on the surface stains—not on the enamel itself.

You simply brush the teeth with a few drops of the mild harmless liquid—then use the paste, and note the instant results! See how quickly dull stained yellowish teeth acquire a new sparkling whiteness and glistening lustre! Tobacco and other stains disappear often with the first few applications!

Bleachodent was perfected by two prominent dentists who used it for four years on their own teeth and on their patients' teeth with such highly beneficial results that the Bleachodent Dental Laboratories were organized to place this remarkable product before the public. Bleachodent Combination is sold on the absolute guarantee that your money will be instantly refunded if you are not more than delighted with results of first application. Don't accept cheap imitations. Be sure to ask for Bleachodent Combination by its full name. Get it for small cost. For sale by all good druggists.—[Advertisement.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE

Golden State Lodge wishes to explain to the many members throughout the country why they have been disappointed in the last two weeks in not seeing our weekly news items in The Times. We were late with the copy, not giving the editor time to get it in the form in time for press. I will assure The Times readers that in the future we will make an effort to have the copy on time. We realise the value of this opportunity of keeping our members in close touch with the lodge.

The meeting of last Wednesday was largely attended. There were several members present that we do not see at the meetings. The result of the election will be reported in next Sunday's Times. The next meeting, the 9th inst., will be initiation night. We have a large class for this initiation. At the close a lunch will be served.

The officers of Golden State Lodge acted as the degree staff for Hollywood Lodge on Tuesday night at their class initiation when 110 candidates were initiated into that lodge.

Golden State Lodge is forming a degree staff. The members of this staff will be selected from the membership. We expect to have the best degree staff in the Southland.

The dinner served last Wednesday was a success. This will be a regular weekly event on each Wednesday and will be appreciated by many of the members that cannot go home from work and return in time for lodge.

Friends of Charles W. Kingsley will be pleased to know that he arrived safely at Moosehaven and reports that it is far better than he expected. He says that it is a wonderful place, pleasantly situated on the banks of the St. Johns River in Florida. There are now ninety-one inmates at Moosehaven.

MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA

Members of Modern Woodmen of America in Los Angeles will be interested in the fact that it made a marked growth during 1923. A report, just filed with the State Insurance Department, shows that it issued 132,000 benefit certificates, with a net increase in membership during the year of 34,771 and $36,565,000 more insurance in force. The business done was about one-third greater than that of 1922. Growth in membership was distributed over forty-two States in which the society writes new business, and only two States failed to show a gain in the amount of insurance in force.

For the society's field workers the slogan is "Make it More in Twenty-four," and results of the campaign are already apparent. April has been designated all over the jurisdiction as "Talbot Month" in honor of the Head Consul, or president, A. R. Talbot of Lincoln, Neb., who is now serving his twenty-first consecutive year as leader of the organization. Large class adoptions are planned in many localities. Modern Woodmen of Los Angeles, of whom there are 10,000 now in good standing, are participating in this drive.

Old John Barleycorn never stood very well with the Modern Woodmen of America. Long ago, perhaps even before the celebrated Mr. Volstead began wearing long pants, the said J. B., together with all his kith and kin, and even his most intimate associates, were outlawed by that fraternal insurance society. So now, after the Constitution has been amended and the country is dry, it is a trifle disconcerting, in looking over the Modern Woodmen list of more than a million members, to find such names as Beer, Sourbeer, Booze, Crow, Redeye, Champagne, Wine, Earlywine, Lightwine, Richwine, and Sourwine. Of course, if you prefer something soft there's Sodawater, Pop, Milk, Coffee, Tarwater, Clearwater, Freshwater, and even Rainwater. One might expect to find Drinkwater a member in good standing, but it is not so clear how the regulations were stretched to let in Drinkwine and Drinkall.

Baseball teams in local camps are given official encouragement by the Modern Woodmen of America as a means of promoting healthful outdoor recreation and improving the physical standards of its members. County, district, and even State leagues are maintained in many parts of the country. Team captains are commissioned by the Head Consul, or president, of the society, and the nines under them are thereby qualified for contests in official circuits. Favorable terms are arranged for the purchase of supplies and uniforms, and regulations and schedules are provided for contests. County league contests generally are played from May to July, district league contests from July 1 to September 1, and those for State honors are held during September.

LAURISTINUS CIRCLE

New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island will each have separate county registers but will join in a fine program following the basket dinner hour. Silk souvenir badges and hot coffee will be supplied and the picknickers will carry picnic dinners.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

Another beneficial rain prevented what promised to be a record-breaking attendance and a class of candidates that would have possibly set a new record for Court E. G. No. 33 last Tuesday evening. They were ready but only about fifty showed up for initiation. About 100 applications were on the secretary's desk for action. The full dramatic work was conferred. Judge Baird was present and presented Brother Fuller with a beautiful bronze lamp which he had won in a membership contest. Several members were presented with their emblems as members of the Golden Jubilee Club.

Companion Court Emily No. 66 gave an April Fool entertainment following the meeting last Tuesday evening.

The Degree Staff of Court E. G. No. 33 is contemplating a trip to Santa Paula in the near future to confer the degrees on a class of candidates secured by T. C. Harvey.

Companion Court Emily No. 66 will give a free entertainment on the evening of the 15th inst., at which Councilman Criswell will speak. L. E. Moselle of the Department of Public Service will present the motion picture, "White Magic."

NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

Sproul, Grand Second Vice-President; Judge Curtis, Grand Third Vice-President; E. W. Biscailuz, Grand Marshal. A bronze plaque, appropriately inscribed, was imbedded in the stone entrance to the building.

San Francisco Native Sons turned out in full force last night at the joint initiation of candidates at Native Sons' Auditorium. Grand President W. J. Hayes and his board of Grand Officers, as well as many past presidents from various parts of the State, were present.

The Board of Grand Officers have delegated Senator James D. Phelan, V. S. McClatchy and Atty.-Gen. U. S. Webb to represent the order in the hearing on the exclusion provision of the immigration bill now before Congress.

LANDIS IN ROLE OF SWEEPER FINE

Cullen Landis says that William Nigh, who is directing him in a picture for Vitagraph, now being made in New York with Landis in the featured role, must be a kind of mind reader. For Nigh, who is author of the first as well as the present Landis vehicle, has drawn a character that has many points in common with Cullen in real life. His role is that of the handy chap around the home, which his brothers have deserted. All the daily tasks are done by him.

For several weeks before leaving Los Angeles, the young actor was living at the home of his business manager. What he didn't do in helping, would be hard to say. Among the tasks relegated to him was a favorite one—the running of the vacuum sweeper. Now he is hoping he'll do it for a picture, for he considers he's real expert in this field of domesticity.

98 Out of Every 100 Women Benefited

An Absolutely Reliable Statement Important to Every Woman

Remarkable Results Shown by a Nation Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
—100,000 Women Answer—

For some time a circular has been enclosed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Replies, to date, have been received from over 100,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say YES. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it—only two women out of 100 received no benefit—98 successes out of a possible 100. Did you ever hear of anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure all—one that is made by the most scientific process; not from drugs, but from a combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does do more good than hastily prepared prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 50 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

It's reliability and recognized efficiency has gained for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98

Never Rinse Your Hair Again

An Old Evil Done Away With

10 minutes washes hair. 15 minutes more and hair is dry and ready to do up perfectly in the style most becoming to you.

Now you can shampoo your hair 30 minutes before going out and have a perfect coiffure.

An Entirely New Way to Shampoo
30 Minutes From Basin to Coiffure

Used 20 years privately, now tendered American women on a Free-Test Offer

This is to tell progressive women about a radically new shampoo. And to offer a test free.

Rinsing is eliminated. It isn't necessary with this new method. Hair and scalp are cleansed a new way. And better than the old way.

10 minutes washes your hair. 15 minutes more, and your hair is thoroughly dry and ready to do up.

Hair is perfectly manageable after washing this new way. Doesn't "fly" or shift about. Every strand stays in place, 30 minutes before going to a party you can shampoo your hair and have a perfect coiffure.

Sounds Incredible, We Know

Many women will doubt all this, we know. It seems so impossible. Many will question the non-rinsing idea. So we say: "Don't accept our word for a thing. See for yourself. Accept a trial bottle free and let your own hair tell you the story."

How It Works

You take 4 teaspoonsful of Cleero and mix it with a glass of warm water. Then apply to your hair, working it in with the fingers. Immediately it makes a snow-white foam. (Not the usual alkaline lather.)

The action of this foam loosens the dirt, dust, hardened scalp oil, etc., from the scalp and hair. The accumulations, dissolved in the foam, turn it gray. Then you simply wipe off the foam with your hands or with a towel.

You repeat the application two or three times, until the lather remains pure white. That means your scalp and hair are absolutely clean.

The Volatile Action Carries Off the Dirt

To the benefit of your hair, no rinsing is necessary. For Cleero contains no alkaline soap or other harmful ingredient to be washed out of your hair. Nothing to harm your hair or to make it gummy.

The volatile action of Cleero takes the place of rinsing.

Every bit of dust, grease and dandruff is loosened from scalp and hair and rolled to the top of the foam. When you wipe off the foam, all the dirt comes with it.

This seems strange, we realize. But one trial of Cleero will convince you. Your scalp is whiter than you've ever seen. And your hair as clean, sweet and fresh as spring flowers.

Note the Difference in Your Hair

Cleero is Oh, so convenient! Hair shampooed in 10 minutes. Perfectly dry and ready for dressing in 15 minutes more.

But more important, Cleero is beneficial to your hair. After a Cleero shampoo your hair gleams with new life and sparkle, with new richness of lustre.

A big reason for this is that you don't rinse with Cleero.

Rinsing has been the evil in shampooing. Because of the alkali and other minerals in water. Alkali and other minerals in water devitalize the hair, make it dull and brittle. It has exactly the same effect as an alkaline soap shampoo.

With Cleero, the harmful rinsing becomes a thing of the past.

20 Years in Use

Cleero is comparatively new to America. But the formula has been in use nearly a quarter century by the fashionable hairdressers. So its merit is established. Anyone may accept it with full confidence.

Only recently offered the American public, Cleero already has wide vogue. It may be had of almost any toilet counter. But lest there be any doubt as to its qualities, we offer a test bottle free. (While 5,000 last.)

If only out of curiosity, make a test of this shampoo. See the convenience of it, and the difference in your hair.

The coupon brings you a trial bottle, free and postpaid. Clip it now lest you forget.

EDUCATION FOR PEACE, DISTRICT SESSION AIM

Mountain Club of Twelve Members and Big Sister of Thousands Send Envoys to Glendale

BY MYRA NYE

"Education for Peace" is the theme for the twenty-third annual convention of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be conducted in Glendale from Tuesday morning to Thursday evening, inclusive.

From the little club of twelve members up in the mountains of Lone Pine near the Nevada line to the largest club in the general federation, the Friday Morning Club with 2700 members in Los Angeles county on the Pacific, representatives will gather for this meeting which is the largest in the State with the exception of the State convention itself which will be conducted in Pasadena on May 30 and 31.

The District Federation is composed of eight clubs of Inyo county; four of San Louis Obispo in the middle of the State; fourteen of Santa Barbara; twenty-three of Ventura and 179 of Los Angeles county. The federation covers a territory of more than 8000 square miles.

STATE HEAD TO ASSIST

After the call to order at 1:30 p.m., by Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president, Mrs. John C. Urquhart, president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside with Mrs. Toll. Mrs. Daniel Campbell, president of the Hostess club, the Tuesday Afternoon Club of Glendale, will preside during the evening session after which a reception will be given by the Glendale club women in the club lounge, one of the delightful rooms of the new clubhouse.

The outstanding speakers will be Dr. David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, and Dr. Franklin Thomas Baker of New York, professor of English in the Teachers' College of Columbia University. Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. John C. Urquhart, Mrs. David Lindley Murray, chairman of credentials for the biennial convention; Anne M. Godfrey of San Francisco, educational representative of the naturalization service of the Department of Labor, and Mab Copeland Lineman, lecturer in the University of California extension department and chairman of legislation for the district.

Mrs. Toll quotes from men of all ages who spoke in the interest of peace and of education for peace. Their thoughts, she hopes, will be disseminated.

"Nothing can bring peace but the triumph of principles."

"If we have not peace within ourselves, it is in vain to seek it from outside sources.

"More wrong action comes from confused thinking than from any other source."

"Nothing is more terrible than ignorance in action."

"Progress must come from the steady life of the individual; and the measure of national idealism and progress is the quality of idealism in this individual." The latter from Herbert Hoover.

MUSIC IN ABUNDANCE

The program is particularly rich in its promise for music under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Mabee. The Women's Glee Club of Occidental College, music department of the hostess club, Mrs. Warren Roberts, curator; Robinson Quintet, Arion Trio, Fuhrer String Quartet, Madrigal Octet and Ganesha Quartet of the Pomona Ebell are some of the musical organizations that will delight their hearers. Among the artists will be the following musicians of note: Gertrude Ross, Mrs. Roberta Young, Mrs. Spencer Robinson and Mrs. George Thatcher.

Virtually every one of the twenty-seven departments will have exhibitions in the art exhibition under the direction of Katheryn Leighton, nearly all of the canvases are prize-winning pictures and have been selected with a view

She will illustrate her talk with raiment and dances of Egypt, Japan, Arabia, the Slavic nations, Brittany and Spain, as well as Astec, period and character numbers. A demonstration of lighting effects upon stage costume will be accomplished by means of a miniature model of a large stage and miniature figures, correctly costumed.

Those assisting Miss Gould are Sada Hindman, Ynez Kirby, Evelyn Crist, Martha Gill, Helen Mathison, Naomi Barrett, Ruth Cowper, Vera Belle Chamberlain, Margaret Case, Marjorie Dougan, Therese Joannes, Yvonne Pometti, Joy Hopkins and Master Jack Chase.

HOLLYWOOD READERS TO PRESENT "TOSCA"

In refutation of the proverb that a prophet is without honor in his own city, the Hollywood Opera Reading Club expressed its appreciation of Charles Wakefield Cadman with a check for $500 for the city ovation recently tendered the composer. The club will present "Tosca" tomorrow with Mrs. Grace Haver in the title role, Carl Gantvoort in the role of Scarpia and Dudley Chambers singing Mario. These singers were engaged through Dr. Frank Nagel, director of the club activities. Mrs. Haver has the distinction of being soloist for the midnight memorial of the San Francisco fire each year. She is a graduate of the Damrosch Art Institute of New York and has created for herself an enviable place in the music of Los Angeles since her arrival from San Francisco. Mrs. Loren B. Curtis, president of the club, will call the meeting to order at 10 a.m. in the Masonic Temple, Hollywood.

PARIS MUNICIPAL ART SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

"Municipal Art in Paris" is the subject of an address to be given Tuesday evening at Highland Park Ebell Club by Hon. George J. Burns, the morning session being an open program of the art section. Sol Cohen, violinist, and his string quartet will play. Miss Winifred Rouzee will continue her travel talks before the Bible section, and the bird and flower section will visit the exhibit at the district convention in Glendale.

HOSTESSES LAY PLANS OF BIENNIAL

Setting House in Order for Thousands to Come in June

Like good hostesses the women of Los Angeles are busy setting their house in order for the entertainment of thousands of delegates and visitors to the Seventeenth Biennial Convention of the General Fderation of Women's Clubs to open here in June.

Hospitality in keeping with the warm western welcome for which California women are famous will be extended in courtesies to the officers and delegates. Official hospitality will bgin with a dinner to the General Federation Board at the Biltmore Monday evening, June 2. The Executive Board of the California Local Biennial Board will be hostesses. The entire Federation will assemble at the reception at the Biltmore on the night of June 3, the opening night of the general convention.

SYSTEM IN PROGRAM

At the request of the General Federation Board an effort will be made to curtail the social entertainments incident to the gathering of so many representative women of the country until after the presentation of the important programs scheduled in order to conserve the strength of the visitors. In carrying out this idea the local board has arranged morning, afternoon and evening meetings of each department in the same auditorium, and most of the local working committees will be working under the same roof. The exhibits on the seven departments emphasized on the program will also be conveniently located. Most of the social courtesies officially extended are planned for the Biltmore nearby.

June 7 has been designated as "Play Day" and excursions to California landmarks, the beaches, the mountains and the motion-picture studios will be in order. Catalina, Riverside, Mount Wilson and the Mission Play will all receive the visitors on that day. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has sent descriptions of the spots of historical and scenic interest in Southern California so that the visitors may make their choice before they arrive.

TEN DAYS OF SESSIONS

The complete programs arranged to demonstrate the seven departments of work will occupy ten days of intensive club work interspersed with music, luncheons and dinners which will contribute to and illustrate the subjects under consideration.

Mrs. Grantland Seaton Long, president of the Los Angeles Ebell Club, is chairman of hospitality. There will be nearly two hundred functions ranging from a dinner for a thousand women at the Biltmore to Sunday evening teas all over the city. Literally tons of fruit and flowers have been promised for gifts for guests.

Mrs. Boyle Workman has outlined eleven delightful excursions through the Southland with a California-Spanish barbecue at Laguna Beach with a side trip to old San Juan Capistrano.

One of the most interesting events will be the Pioneer's luncheon on Wednesday, June 4. At this table will be gathered the veteran clubwomen who labored that womanhood might have new opportunities.

PIONEERS TO RECEIVE

More than twenty years ago the National Federation of Women's Clubs met in Los Angeles for a biennial convention. Many western women, prominent in the clubs of that day will welcome again the representative women of the country who have grown in the service of education, legislative action, directed citizenship and international relations of the women of the United States.

Two Sunday evening suppers, one for State presidents and the other for past national presidents, are being arranged for June 8. These will be given after the memorial services at sundown in the Hollywood Bowl.

For the second Tuesday of the convention an early breakfast has been arranged for the nominating committee which goes into session at 7:30 a.m.

Preceding the lecture by Rebecca West the public affairs section will give a luncheon at noon. Gertrude Graham of the home economics section of the Hollywood High School, will speak on "Our Girls."

At 11 a.m. the Bible section will meet, and at 4 p.m. the junior auxiliary will meet.

The club at the meeting last Wednesday, co-operating with the district, passed resolutions on Indian welfare, for the hastening of the government-built dam in Arizona, which will provide the Indians with much-needed water, and for placing the custody of the Indians' estates under the control of the Department of the Interior.

North California Women Plan Jaunts

Close attention to the programs scheduled for the biennial will postpone entertainment of the visiting clubwomen until after the convention. For this time the northern clubwomen of the State have planned several days of pleasure for the eastern guests.

Those leaving Los Angeles Saturday evening will be met at Del Monte Sunday morning where they will be taken on the scenic

MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON

when she is old enough to understand," she says.

MOTORS OUT TO FARM

Peggy is just two years old, and although she has a wonderful nurse—an old family friend—it does hurt to refuse her pleading "Take Peggy, mother," when Mrs. Schall leaves for the office every day.

Peggy has two brothers, Tom, Jr., and Dick, and they seem to have solved the question of perpetual motion. Hence the farm in Maryland.

Margaret engineers a ragged car out to the country when the day's work is done. That is home—home with plenty of space to romp with the children, an orchard, a vineyard and quite an ambitious vegetable garden.

This home which Tom Schall loves so well he has never seen except through the eyes of his wife.

And he has never seen the faces of his children.

"THE" MRS. HARDING

If you look in the telephone directory in Washington you will find about forty Hardings. Yet when you say "Mrs. Harding," everyone knows exactly whom you mean. There is no need to say "Mrs. Warren Harding," or "Mrs. Warren Gamaliel Harding." She is simply the Mrs. Harding.

The real test of social superiority is not the accumulation of distinguishing names but the ability to discard them all and retain your identity. If some day there is a Smith or Brown in the White House, it will be the same. Should we have half a dozen representatives with the same name, say Johnston, it is the one who becomes the Johnston and can discard the baptismal tag who has achieved distinction. He has risen above the ruck.

And so with his wife. When you can say "Mrs. Johnston," denoting a specially distinctive woman who needs no qualification for identification—then, the prestige of being the Mrs. Johnston is hers. In short, she has arrived. The higher you go, the less labelling you need.

But oh! what importance is attached to names that look well in print! People are often invited to functions not because of their brains or wit or beauty but because of their name. Conversationally they may be like unto cold pudding and be as graceful as an old bus horse but if they bear a name that looks well in the newspapers they are acquitted of all else. If you don't believe me, just watch the social columns. If there is any other justification for asking some of the frequent guests I'd like to know what it is.

Why, many hostesses are quite candid about it!

"I'm so sorry to put you next to Mrs. Blank . . . I know she's such a bore . . . but . . . "

A gentle pressure on your elbow as she propels you toward your fate—a flicker of an eyelash, a quirk at the corner of her mouth—you understand the signs. She has taken you into her confidence.

Perhaps the bore is influential in the D. A. R., president of a literary club, has a cousin married to a countess or a husband in the cabinet. Or it may be dollars that afflict her. But she is a welcome guest. You know the kind, I'm sure.

The publicity side of entertaining is made manifest in the compilation of invitational lists. Each day social and official circles are combed for news of dinners, dances and parties. But there is another social grade, the dear old climbers. They issue invitations to all sorts of people who never by any chance accept, and then send their invitation list to the newspapers for publication.

There is nothing to stop them sending an invitation to Mrs. Hughes, Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Coolidge, Princess Bibesco, Mme. Jusserand, Lady Geddes or the Haniharas. And there is no law to prevent these invitation lists being published in the press, especially if the papers print them in good faith. The climbers recognize no social law—yet. All's fair in love and war and social exploitation!

This is a sort of social false pretense, but it is done daily by certain people and associations. They know the guests will never, never accept. They don't expect them to. It is all a bluff.

There are other pushful persons, usually with money or resource and brass-band sensibilities. Society has not yet opened its door to them so they decide to pick the lock.

A new official is appointed or a foreign celebrity arrives in the city. They are promptly on the scene with their request:

"I want to give a little dinner in your honor; what night will suit you . . . Thursday of next week? No! Then perhaps the following Tuesday? . . . No! Well, what about the Friday after? No! Then let us make it Wednesday three weeks, if that will suit you."

CORNERED! AND THEN—

In despair, seeing no hope of lying an escape through the whole season, the newly-arrived capitulates. Then the pushful person sends out invitations to other great and near-great, baiting the hook with the celebrated guest of honor. Some, out of pity for the guest, accept. Others genuinely grateful, are willing to come. In this way social indebtedness is incurred and the pushful person receives reciprocal invitations.

One aspiring matron on the fringe of the official set had decided to capture society in one fell swoop. Her husband, no less ambitious, was her guilty accomplice. She planned a wonderful dinner party of thirty—thirty carefully selected people. If she carried this, it would put the imprimatur of society on her forever; she felt sure of it.

The caterer was engaged, the decorations ordered, and the household was in a tumult of expectancy.

"It is such a pity," she naively confided to me, "but I have planned my dinner for the most unfortunate night. Everyone seems busy. Do you know I have had twenty-eight regrets from the thirty I invited."

Then following the scriptural example she sent out into the highways and byways and gathered in at very short notice a group of willing participants in the revelry, people whose combined social tonnage wouldn't sink a bag of kittens. But the grateful guests didn't know of the tragedy that underlay that party, of the strategic social advance that failed.

These people are usually great students of books of etiquette and social usage. They like to be letter perfect. By the way, one of the latest guide books through this wilderness states that at the conclusion of the party, the debutante shall say to the hostess: "I've had a perfectly wonderful time!" But the hardy annual merely says "Good-by!" The omission of "wonderful" indicates that she is not newly-hatched socially and the wonder has quite worn off. Enthusiasm goes with the bud, but a more blase air becomes the seasoned campaigner. Now don't forget!

PLEASES PRISONERS

Vera Lewis has just received a letter from the matron of the woman's division of the State penitentiary at Jeffersonville, Ind., saying that several of the women prisoners were highly pleased with her characterization of the austere arch duchess in Jackie Coogan's production "Long Live the King."

Bangkok, Siam, and many cities in the Malay Peninsula are planning to install scenic railways and other amusement park devices.

HOSTESSES SET HOUSE IN ORDER

will be divided into three parts for a triple luncheon grouping those interested in particular branches of the arts. This has been arranged for the Biltmore for Wednesday, June 11.

Beginning with the dinner on June 2 given by the executive board of the California local board to the General Federation Board and closing with the international relations luncheon on June 13 there will be an uninterrupted series of breakfasts, luncheons and dinners contributing to the pleasure of the visitors and reflecting the hospitality of the California women who will act as hostesses.

MAKE-UP TESTS

Several motion-picture tests are being made of Virginia Valli who will play the stellar role in the screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehardt's "K." These tests are for the purpose of ascertaining the best make-up for the star to use during the filming of the Universal production.

The oil industry loses about $200,000,000 a year from fire.

Foxes at $49.75

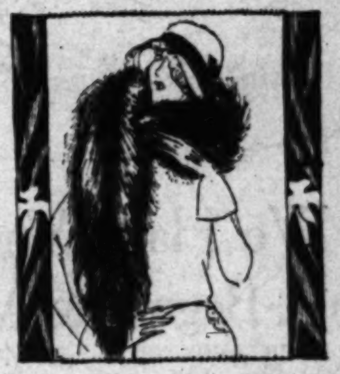
THIS pricing is decidedly interesting—not often is it possible for us to mark such fine foxes so moderately. They're of such silk-like skins, the paws, heads and brushes so beautifully made that $49.75 is, indeed, surprisingly little for them.



THE choice of colors includes those now wanted—beige, Hudson blue, taupe and brown as well as black and pointed effects. Better see the foxes included in Monday's group, if your Easter costume still lacks a good-looking fur.

If Beauty Came to You

If Beauty came to you,
 Ah, would you know her grace,
And could you, in your shadowed prison, view
 Unscathed her face?

Stepping as noiselessly
 As moving moth-wings, so
Might she come suddenly to you or me,
 And we not know.

Amid these clangs and cries,
 Alas, how should we hear
The shy, dim-woven music of her sighs
 As she draws near,

Threading through monstrous,
 black,
 Uncharitable hours,
Where the soul shapes its own abhorred rack
 Of wasted powers?

TWO ETCHERS HOLD A JOINT EXHIBIT

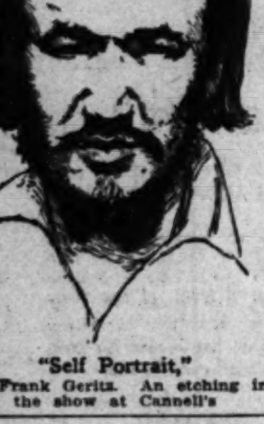
It would appear that the needle is more powerful than the brush in the cementing of friendships. At any rate, we note that two etchers who happen to be friends oftener hold exhibitions together than two painters who have neighboring studios and may, therefore, be presumed to be on friendly terms. Are the painters too temperamental, too egotistical, for such large amities?

We have been informed more than once and by many writers on art that the making of etchings is a more intellectual pursuit than painting, and we may perhaps, therefore, come to the conclusion that the print maker is a more intellectual person than the painter. Our conclusion may be correct—up to a certain point. For true it is that color induces more emotion in the beholder than the line, and no doubt it is equally true that when a man paints he is in a more highly emotional state than when he scratches with the etching needle.



"Self Portrait,"
By Frank Geritz. An etching in the show at Cannell's

"But a feeling for pure color and a feeling for pure line may go hand in hand. They certainly did in Whistler. And Whistler's "intellectuality," even when he wielded the brush, was probably exactly as high as when he plied the pen—when he painted "Battersea Bridge" as when he wrote "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies," or scratched the Thames River plates. So the painter may perk up. It has not been proved that to become a true intellectual he must drop his brush and grab the needle.

But etching is, undoubtedly, the shorthand of the graphic arts. You can say an awful lot with a few quick strokes, when you scratch with the point and bite with the acid, and you can say it beautifully and intelligibly. The more briefly you tell the tale, the better you are apt to be as an artist. You may say, as was hinted, an "awful lot," but, of course, there's also an awful lot you must leave unsaid as quite outside your province. But as all good art must show an infinite capacity on the part of the artist, for leaving out rather than putting in, this need not trouble you.

We started out with a little sermon on friendship. Let us hark back to it. The two etchers whose friendship continues even to the exposition gallery are Arthur Millier and Frank Geritz, who are exhibiting in the print room at Cannell-Chaffin's. They have had such joint shows before, and no doubt they will have others, though Geritz goes to New York in a week or two and Millier remains behind.

Geritz began as an unusually clever maker of wood block prints, giving us counterfeit presentiments of innumerable celebrities in the literary, operatic and cinema worlds, but for the past year or more he has devoted his talent for portraiture to etching—and with ever-increasing success. For proof of his amazing advance you have only to compare his portrait of Arthur Millier with that of Geritz's father. The Millier is over a year old—and bad in drawing and characterization, as well as in line. The other is new—and good. In fact, "My Father" is a fine thing, almost as good as the etcher's portrait of himself, which he slyly calls "A Magyar" to lead us astray. Few of us know what a Magyar is, but this is, unmistakably and profoundly, Frank Geritz.

In his best work as a portraitist, as well as in his studies from the nude, Geritz is economical to the limit—in other words, he proves himself to be a true etcher. And he compresses beauty into a square inch or two. Some of his portraits will therefore become a joy to the collector, such distinguished prints as "My Father," "A Magyar," "Chloe," "Gladys B." and "Charlotte Earle." The last named looks, as some one remarked, like the figurehead of a viking ship in its fine austerity and keen modeling, and as Mrs. Earle is of Norwegian descent on her mother's side the compliment will undoubtedly please her as much as the artist.

"Do not," said Millier, "compare me to Lepere again." Nevertheless, he does remind us of Lepere in the clear-cut loveliness simplicity of his line and in his feeling for light. For Arthur Millier is an etcher born. One in a great while he paints a little, and very little, too, in water color—he is still English enough for that, though a resident of these United States for a number of years. But his true affinity is the needle on the copper, not the brush on the canvas.

Here indeed is shorthand that is brief and beautiful, especially in the prints that the artist confesses are his latest—in "My Kingdom, Silver Lake," in the drypoint, "Evening, Silver Lake," in "Barn and Eucalyptus," in "Sunday Morning on the Plaza," in "Loafers," in "The Sleeping Poet," and more than all, in "Shaw's Flat."

"Shaw's Flat' is, as you know, the Bret Harte country, and later the country of Mark Twain. Here the outcasts of Poker Flat (or Shaw's Flat) were lost in the death-dealing blizzard that itself become immortalized through the neromancy of genius. And it may be that Millier will bestow a second immortality on Poker Flat by this etching, which, it seems to us, is one of his very best, a direct and forceful rendering of the old building and its surrounding trees. Millier himself gives his first and only drypoint, "Evening, Silver Lake," the preference, but we cling to "Shaw's Flat."

However, if you should turn with equal interest and delight—or even more—to the series from the Plaza of Los Angeles, we won't quarrel, for they are, without exception, charming prints, superb examples of a poetically truthful rendering of everyday scenes in the multiform life of our city. Perhaps "The Sleeping Poet" is the best of all—and yet—who can resist the "conversational" tone, like that of music, in "Loafers" with its rich and velvety blacks? And who could pass by "Sunday Morning on the Plaza," a fine composition in straight lines? Last, but by no means least, there is "Barn and Eucalyptus." In sooth, Millier has given us more than a feast.

PAUL LAURITZ NOW IN BARKER GALLERY

In the pleasant little gallery at Barker Brothers, Paul Lauritz is showing, to April 19, a collection of twelve recent landscapes from his brush. By actual count there are thirteen pictures, but the thirteenth, one of the most charming of all, does not appear in the catalog, so, on our own responsibility, we will call it "Spring," because of the bright greens of earth's bosom and her happy uplifted trees. Can it be that Paul—or Barker—is superstitious about the number 13?

We find infinite variety in this attractive exhibition, for to Paul Lauritz nature speaks a various language. He loves all her phases, each one of her changing moods, and he tells us of this passion in many ways, the ways of the poet no less than those of the painter, though as yet he has not, so far as known, burst into written rhyme. But he may do it some day, for the gamut of a painter's colors is not wide enough for the expression of all the visions that trouble his soul with such sweet and painful insistence.

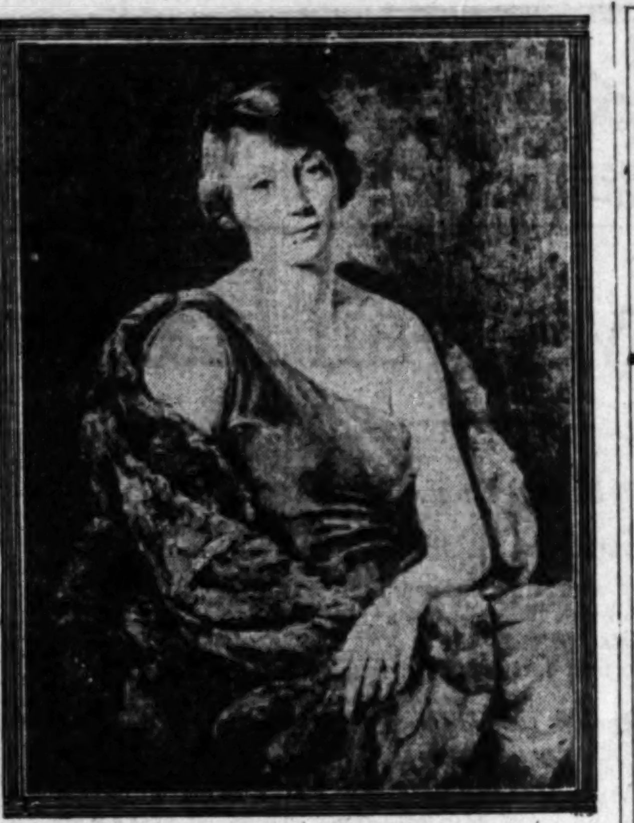
Lauritz, as we know, is of Norwegian birth and early training. But though he was a young man—18 or 20, when he came to America, he quickly became an American, in the way of the Norwegians, in the way, indeed, of all the Nordics. Having begun his career as a painter on an iceberg, or at any rate near one, he went, naturally enough to British Columbia and Alaska in search of landscape material. Then he turned his longing eyes to the south, as all men and all races do, ultimately—and here he is.

He is so much "here," in fact, that all the twelve—the thirteen—landscapes in his present exhibition are transcripts of Southern California. Only once has he painted snow, and this is in the large and impressive picture entitled "End of Day, High Sierras." The other canvases deal with the sunlight and the clouds and the mists with which we are all so comfortably and happily familiar—sun and shade on foothills and valleys and the eucalyptus trees that have taken them with such valiant and irresistible grace.

For the ingredients of landscapes are so perfectly mingled in Southern California that no wonder Paul Lauritz and innumerable other painters have come here to stay. Norway is good, and so is Alaska, but California is much better. Better for the landscapist, at any rate, and certainly better for the continued well-being of men and women, not painters, who have lived too long in, say Iowa. Or Maine. Or New York.

Snow, however, was not Lauritz's chief concern in "End of Day, High Sierras." Though snow loops itself exquisitely, as if with decorative intent, over the whole scheme of subtly beautiful colors, variations of blues and greens and gray-pinks, the artist gave his best thought to the modeling and the tone of the distant jagged peaks, the nearer level slopes, and the icy sheen of the stream winding in the foreground.

All of California is epitomized in the sunny warmth of the light filtering through the trees in the sixth picture in the catalog, and we find another aspect of our amazing commonwealth in No. 4, "Along the Stream," cool greens of grass and trees, and cool grays of sandy banks; the stream itself is like a long, dull, beautiful semi-precious stone set in all this greenness. Thoroughly Californian, too, the "The Homstead," whose gray rack of far-off clouds is like a broken wall showing glimpses of blue; "Gray Day," autumnal yellows in near-by foliage, the far-off hills a lapis blue; "Golden Days," "Golden Evening," "Eucalyptus."



"Portrait of Mrs. R. McMurrin," by Antonia Melvill,
An attractive picture by a Los Angeles painter that is now on exhibition on one of the walls of the Biltmore Salon.

MAURICE BRAUN AT CANNELL-CHAFFIN'S

With the return to us of Maurice Braun, California welcomes back a poet in paint, whose tender lyrics have long charmed her eyes with their subtle harmony of delicate coloring. Three years in Connecticut have given him other themes in other keys, but he has approached nature in the same quiet and certain manner; striking no false notes; sensitive to rare color suggestions; tinging all his canvases with that sense of fairyland which is one of the ingredients of his palette.

Autumn in New England is the dominant theme of his exhibition. Autumn in its glory of reds, coppers and golds; its russet hills seen across the blue mirror of the Connecticut River. Whatever is lovely in these scenes this artist seizes upon and with a sure decorative sense turns into a picture. His work is not dramatic, and I could sometimes wish for a more primitive undercurrent of feeling, but it is rarely given to any artist to have within him the seeds of all things. In fact, he is well off who has discovered his own limitations and consciously works within them. Braun has a true feeling for beauty, invariably composes well, and knows how to paint a picture. If an artist is to satisfy his public he must turn his emotions into pictures—something more than splashes of paint on canvas. This is one of the secrets of Braun's popularity. His paintings are always good pictures and consequently have a definite place in the homes whose walls they decorate.

One of the first things to delight us in this charming group is Maurice Braun's snow scenes. To these he brings a sense of lightness which so many painters miss. Snow is not heavy; nor does not feel cold in a snow-carpeted country-side comparable with the cold of a bleak stormy day. Braun has caught the sunny exhilaration of winter in "Snow Clad Hills." There is a very delicate happy atmosphere in this small canvas — so gently does the soft white carpet press the earth. "Winter Morning," another scene in old New England, is one of the most subtly painted pictures in the exhibition. "Along the Road" is brighter and sharper, bare elm branches and white-clad roofs.

Two of the paintings only are Californian, "California Hills" and "Eucalyptus." The former is as good as anything here, a very finely studied composition of hills and sycamores in autumn.

"Connecticut River," one of the most consciously and daringly composed works here, also one of the largest, is not, however, one of the most successful. The reds, golds, greens and blues which make up its color scheme are not combined with the subtlety which marks most of the others. In "Autumn Afternoon" a much more difficult problem in reds, green and yellows is splendidly solved. A lovely forest interior is the subject, handled in a masterly manner.

Braun's imagination seems to fail him utterly when he titles his pictures. Out of twenty canvases no less than six are called "Autumn;" there is also an "Autumnal" and "Autumn Afternoon." This does not detract from the beauty of the paintings; but a good title never hurt a good picture. Mention is made of this that your attention may be called to No. 8, "Autumn," a very subtle and lovely picture of New England hills in russet, green and yellow.

Other fine things are "Elms," green and yellow tree foliage against a blue sky, white buildings and a touch of red. Another "Autumn," a blue stream wandering amid green pastures, leaves just turning. The whole treated in colors delicate and fresh as pastels.

Talbut Munday, a writer of fiction in San Diego, has written a foreword to the catalogue which admirably sums up the work of Maurice Braun and we reproduce it here: "There is a power of silence in Braun's paintings that creeps into the spectator and translates a noisy world of affairs into the spiritual mystery it really is. His painting, like all true art, seems effortless. A true mystic, he never permits to intrude into his work a sense of struggle or of personal smartness; he forgets himself and approaches nature with discerning reverence, the only way in which her real secrets may be won."

B. POTTER VONNOH'S BRONZE FIGURINES

Bessie Potter Vonnoh, A.N.A.—Mrs. Robert Vonnoh—is exhibiting a group of statuettes at the Cannell-Chaffin galleries during the month of April. Winner of an enviable list of international honors and awards, Mrs. Vonnoh's reputation is amply borne out by the charming bronze figurines now on exhibition. They fall in a very definite American tradition, and I associate them at once with the paintings of Abbot Theyer, for a certain clear-eyed innocence, a wholesome purity which is one side of our New England Puritan legacy. With the other side we need not be concerned here.

Two figures of young women dancing, one of which, by the way, bears a striking resemblance to Mrs. Phimister Proctor—could she have been its inspiration?—have unusual grace of movement and flowing drapery.

A young girl-child dances lightly and naturally, with outstretched arms, a little girl goes sleepily to bed. You feel she is about to yawn and rub her eyes with the little vagrant hand now pushing back her hair.

"Will of the Wisp," a slender nude girl figure dancing not so much with her body as with her spirit, so slender, almost frail, you think involuntarily how evanescent is the charm which must soon be lost in womanhood. There is something motherly, I feel, in the attitude of the sculptor to these, her children. One senses a brooding affection, a shielding love which shuts from their eyes many unpleasant sights. They all dance and posture gracefully in a garden of innocence, and that garden must be the heart and mind of Bessie Potter Vonnoh.

A mother and child at ease in a chair, a handsome bronze this, modeled with much love; two tiny children, and a mother with a baby under her arm. Mrs. Proctor again, perhaps—are others which particularly attracted me.

Space will not permit more, but if you go to see these bronzes I feel sure you will enjoy them as much as I did.

CLARK LANDSCAPES, AMBASSADOR GALLERY

One of the foibles—he dare not call them virtues—of the editor of this column is the giving of much gratuitous advice to the artists. Sometimes the suggestion is acted upon, more often not. It must be confessed that the editor is, generally, seeking self-preservation when he proffers these little nuggets from his store of wisdom.

We have protested, in season, at the multiplicity of exhibitions held at one and the same time, and at the size of them. The painters and sculptors of our town—and of all other towns—seem to have small conception of human endurance and newspaper space. When one plays a trump card, that is, holds an exhibition, all the others crowd in pell-mell to follow suit. The result is great weariness of body and spirit to everyone concerned, and the artists have almost spoiled their own game—which is to sell as many pictures as possible, or at any rate to get the public to look at them. Also, to get into the newspapers with a modicum of space at a minimum of price—generally for nothing.

The other charge against the artists, the huge size of their shows, is no longer as tenable as it was. The exhibitions are growing smaller. The editor's remarks have been heeded, or perhaps it is only that the artists are waking to common sense. Maybe they are beginning to put the check-rein on their temperaments. However, this may be, many of our shows are now of quite possible and pleasurable size. You may spend a half-hour in one without a sense of horrible fatigue. Witness Paul Lauritz's at Barker's, twelve pictures—not counting the thirteenth. Witness Alson Clark's at Stendahl's gallery in the Ambassador, less than a dozen. Yet both painters are prolific workers with the brush. Their self-restraint—their good sense—is admirable.

Every painter paints a lot of things he shouldn't show under any consideration, since two-thirds of an artist's output is meet practice work in the techniques of his trade. Which is why we see so many bum old masters. Those old fellows—who were once young and ambitious and hard-working, like ourselves—never intended those queer canvases, off color and out of drawing, to see the light of day. But their heirs and assigns, fired by cupidity, thought otherwise. Then came the astute art dealer. Then the susceptible collector. Ain't art funny?

But to come back to that sensible man and good painter, Alson Skinner Clark. His small exhibition, which nevertheless fills perfectly the front gallery at the Ambassador, is very attractive, and one of its attractions is its excellent hanging. No picture jostles its neighbor or holds loud communication with it. Each is

If Beauty Came to You

If Beauty came to you,
  Ah, would you know her grace,
And could you, in your shadowed prison, view
  Unscathed her face?

Stepping as noiselessly
  As moving moth-wings, so
Might she come suddenly to you or me,
  And we not know.

Amid these clangs and cries,
  Alas, how should we hear
The shy, dim-woven music of her sighs
  As she draws near,

Threading through monstrous, black,
  Uncharitable hours,
Where the soul shapes its own abhorred rack
  Of wasted powers?

TWO ETCHERS HOLD A JOINT EXHIBIT

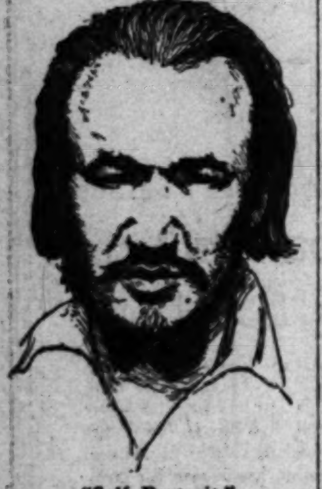
It would appear that the needle is more powerful than the brush in the cementing of friendships. At any rate, we note that two etchers who happen to be friends oftener hold exhibitions together than two painters who have neighboring studios and may, therefore, be presumed to be on friendly terms. Are the painters too temperamental, too egotistical, for such large amities?

We have been informed more than once and by many writers on art that the making of etchings is a more intellectual pursuit than painting, and we may perhaps, therefore, come to the conclusion that the print maker is a more intellectual person than the painter. Our conclusion may be correct—up to a certain point. For true it is that color induces more emotion in the beholder than the line, and no doubt it is equally true that when a man paints he is in a more highly emotional state than when he scratches with the etching needle.



"Self Portrait,"
By Frank Geritz. An etching in the show at Cannell's

"But a feeling for pure color and a feeling for pure line may go hand in hand. They certainly did in Whistler. And Whistler's "intellectuality," even when he wielded the brush, was probably exactly as high as when he plied the pen—when he painted "Battersea Bridge" as when he wrote "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies," or scratched the Thames River plates. So the painter may perk up. It has not been proved that to become a true intellectual he must drop his brush and grab the needle.

But etching is, undoubtedly, the shorthand of the graphic arts. You can say an awful lot with a few quick strokes, when you scratch with the point and bite with the acid, and you can say it beautifully and intelligibly. The more briefly you tell the tale, the better you are apt to be as an artist. You may say, as was hinted, an "awful lot," but, of course, there's also an awful lot you must leave unsaid as quite outside your province. But as all good art must show an infinite capacity on the part of the artist, for leaving out rather than putting in, this need not trouble you.

We started out with a little sermon on friendship. Let us hark back to it. The two etchers whose friendship continues even to the exposition gallery are Arthur Millier and Frank Geritz, who are exhibiting in the print room at Cannell-Chaffin's. They have had such joint shows before, and no doubt they will have others, though Geritz goes to New York in a week or two and Millier remains behind.

Geritz began as an unusually clever maker of wood block prints, giving us counterfeit presentiments of innumerable celebrities in the literary, operatic and cinema worlds, but for the past year or more he has devoted his talent for portraiture to etching—and with ever-increasing success. For proof of his amazing advance you have only to compare his portrait of Arthur Millier with that of Geritz's father. The Millier is over a year old—and bad in drawing and characterization, as well as in line. The other is new—and good. In fact, "My Father" is a fine thing, almost as good as the etcher's portrait of himself, which he slyly calls "A Magyar" to lead us astray. Few of us know what a Magyar is, but this is, unmistakably and profoundly, Frank Geritz.

In his best work as a portraitist, as well as in his studies from the nude, Geritz is economical to the limit—in other words, he proves himself to be a true etcher. And he compresses beauty into a square inch or two. Some of his portraits will therefore become a joy to the collector, such distinguished prints as "My Father," "A Magyar," "Chloe," "Gladys B." and "Charlotte Earle." The last named looks, as some one remarked, like the figurehead of a viking ship in its fine austerity and keen modeling, and as Mrs. Earle is of Norwegian descent on her mother's side the compliment will undoubtedly please her as much as the artist.

"Do not," said Millier, "compare me to Lepere again." Nevertheless, he does remind us of Lepere in the clear-cut loveliness simplicity of his line and in his feeling for light. For Arthur Millier is an etcher born. One in a great while he paints a little, and very little, too, in water color—he is still English enough for that, though a resident of these United States for a number of years. But his true affinity is the needle on the copper, not the brush on the canvas.

Here indeed, is shorthand that is brief and beautiful, especially in the prints that the artist confesses are his latest—in "My Kingdom, Silver Lake," in the drypoint, "Evening, Silver Lake," in "Barn and Eucalyptus," in "Sunday Morning on the Plaza," in "Loafers," in "The Sleeping Poet," and more than all, in "Shaw's Flat."

"Shaw's Flat' is, as you know, the Bret Harte country, and later the country of Mark Twain. Here the outcasts of Poker Flat (or Shaw's Flat) were lost in the death-dealing blizzard that itself become immortalized through the neromancy of genius. And it may be that Millier will bestow a second immortality on Poker Flat by this etching, which, it seems to us, is one of his very best, a direct and forceful rendering of the old building and its surrounding trees. Millier himself gives his first and only drypoint, "Evening, Silver Lake," the preference, but we cling to "Shaw's Flat."

However, if you should turn with equal interest and delight—or even more—to the series from the Plaza of Los Angeles, we won't quarrel, for they are, without exception, charming prints, superb examples of a poetically truthful rendering of everyday scenes in the multiform life of our city. Perhaps "The Sleeping Poet" is the best of all—and yet—who can resist the "conversational" tone, like that of music, in "Loafers" with its rich and velvety blacks? And who could pass by "Sunday Morning on the Plaza," a fine composition in straight lines? Last, but by no means least, there is "Barn and Eucalyptus." In sooth, Millier has given us more than a feast.

PAUL LAURITZ NOW IN BARKER GALLERY

In the pleasant little gallery at Barker Brothers, Paul Lauritz is showing, to April 19, a collection of twelve recent landscapes from his brush. By actual count there are thirteen pictures, but the thirteenth, one of the most charming of all, does not appear in the catalog, so, on our own responsibility, we will call it "Spring," because of the bright greens of earth's bosom and her happy uplifted trees. Can it be that Paul—or Barker—is superstitious about the number 13?

We find infinite variety in this attractive exhibition, for to Paul Lauritz nature speaks a various language. He loves all her phases, each one of her changing moods, and he tells us of this passion in many ways, the ways of the poet no less than those of the painter, though as yet he has not, so far as known, burst into written rhyme. But he may do it some day, for the gamut of a painter's colors is not wide enough for the expression of all the visions that trouble his soul with such sweet and painful insistence.

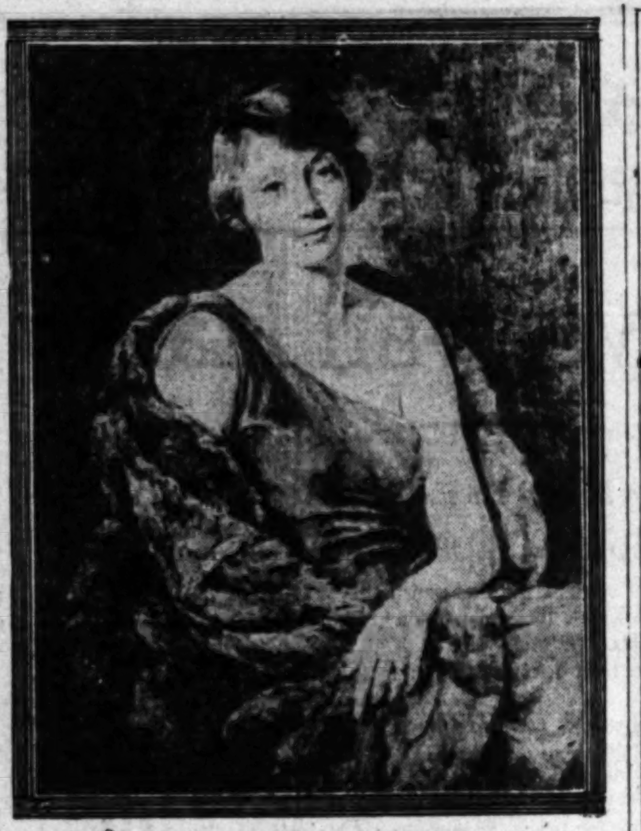
Lauritz, as we know, is of Norwegian birth and early training. But though he was a young man—18 or 20, when he came to America, he quickly became an American, in the way of the Norwegians, in the way, indeed, of all the Nordics. Having begun his career as a painter on an iceberg, or at any rate near one, he went, naturally enough to British Columbia and Alaska in search of landscape material. Then he turned his longing eyes to the south, as all men and all races do, ultimately—and here he is.

He is so much "here," in fact, that all the twelve—the thirteen—landscapes in his present exhibition are transcripts of Southern California. Only once has he painted snow, and this is in the large and impressive picture entitled "End of Day, High Sierras." The other canvases deal with the sunlight and the clouds and the mists with which we are all so comfortably and happily familiar—sun and shade on foothills and valleys and the eucalyptus trees that have taken them with such valiant and irresistible grace.

For the ingredients of landscapes are so perfectly mingled in Southern California that no wonder Paul Lauritz and innumerable other painters have come here to stay. Norway is good, and so is Alaska, but California is much better. Better for the landscapist, at any rate, and certainly better for the continued well-being of men and women, not painters, who have lived too long in, say Iowa. Or Maine. Or New York.

Snow, however, was not Lauritz's chief concern in "End of Day, High Sierras." Though snow loops itself exquisitely, as if with decorative intent, over the whole scheme of subtly beautiful colors, variations of blues and greens and gray-pinks, the artist gave his best thought to the modeling and the tone of the distant jagged peaks, the nearer level slopes, and the icy sheen of the stream winding in the foreground.

All of California is epitomized in the sunny warmth of the light filtering through the trees in the sixth picture in the catalog, and we find another aspect of our amazing commonwealth in No. 4, "Along the Stream," cool greens of grass and trees, and cool grays of sandy banks; the stream itself is like a long, dull, beautiful semi-precious stone set in all this greenness. Thoroughly Californian, too, the "The Homstead," whose gray rack of far-off clouds is like a broken wall showing glimpses of blue; "Gray Day," autumnal yellows in near-by foliage, the far-off hills a lapis blue; "Golden Days," "Golden Evening," "Eucalyptus."



"Portrait of Mrs. R. McMurrin," by Antonia Melvill,
An attractive picture by a Los Angeles painter that is now on exhibition on one of the walls of the Biltmore Salon.

MAURICE BRAUN AT CANNELL-CHAFFIN'S

With the return to us of Maurice Braun, California welcomes back a poet in paint, whose tender lyrics have long charmed her eyes with their subtle harmony of delicate coloring. Three years in Connecticut have given him other themes in other keys, but he has approached nature in the same quiet and certain manner; striking no false notes; sensitive to rare color suggestions; tinging all his canvases with that sense of fairyland which is one of the ingredients of his palette.

Autumn in New England is the dominant theme of his exhibition. Autumn in its glory of reds, coppers and golds; its russet hills seen across the blue mirror of the Connecticut River. Whatever is lovely in these scenes this artist seizes upon and with a sure decorative sense turns into a picture. His work is not dramatic, and I could sometimes wish for a more primitive undercurrent of feeling, but it is rarely given to any artist to have within him the seeds of all things. In fact, he is well off who has discovered his own limitations and consciously works within them. Braun has a true feeling for beauty, invariably composes well, and knows how to paint a picture. If an artist is to satisfy his public he must turn his emotions into pictures—something more than splashes of paint on canvas. This is one of the secrets of Braun's popularity. His paintings are always good pictures and consequently have a definite place in the homes whose walls they decorate.

One of the first things to delight us in this charming group is Maurice Braun's snow scenes. To these he brings a sense of lightness which so many painters miss. Snow is not heavy; nor does not feel cold in a snow-carpeted country-side comparable with the cold of a bleak stormy day. Braun has caught the sunny exhilaration of winter in "Snow Clad Hills." There is a very delicate happy atmosphere in this small canvas — so gently does the soft white carpet press the earth. "Winter Morning," another scene in old New England, is one of the most subtly painted pictures in the exhibition. "Along the Road" is brighter and sharper, bare elm branches and white-clad roofs.

Two of the paintings only are Californian, "California Hills" and "Eucalyptus." The former is as good as anything here, a very finely studied composition of hills and sycamores in autumn.

In "Autumn Afternoon" a much more difficult problem in reds, green and yellows is splendidly solved. A lovely forest interior is the subject, handled in a masterly manner.

Braun's imagination seems to fail him utterly when he titles his pictures. Out of twenty canvases no less than six are called "Autumn;" there is also an "Autumnal" and "Autumn Afternoon." This does not detract from the beauty of the paintings; but a good title never hurt a good picture. The artist, who is an English woman, has won five medals for her portraits in the Royal Academy, chiefly those of children. She has worked in chrysos for the past three years only. She was born in New Zealand.

The public is cordially invited to an exhibition of portraits by Winifred Rieber, held by the Friends of the University of California at Los Angeles, in the Southern Branch at 855 Vermont avenue, to the 11th inst. Mrs. Rieber, an excellent painter of portraits, is the wife of Dr. Charles H. Rieber, dean of the Southern Branch's college of letters and science. The Friends of the University of California at Los Angeles is a group of alumni and other friends of the university who are informally pledging themselves to promote the art interests of the University of California at Los Angeles.

But as the exhibition opened 15 Mars and closed 1 Avril, and the invitation did not reach M. Antony Anderson till April 2, he could not accept. However, he is able to inform you that our old friend from Los Angeles, Edgar Alwyn Payne, was represented by seventeen landscapes, only one of which, "La Sierra Nevada," came from "Californie." The list of titles is enticing, even thrilling—"La Glacier Haut," "L'Hiver," "Neiges Eternelles, Mont Blanc," "Sottomarino," "Paysage, Grindelwald," "Haut Sommet," "Versant du Wetterhorn," "Barque de Peche," and so on. The prophet is outside his own country—he is now an American gien connu. Friends, pause and pender. Don't forget it when he comes back.

The painters and sculptors of Pasadena have been holding an exhibition at the Park House of Carmelita Gardens through the Jubilee Week at Pasadena, 1874-1974. The memorable week ended yesterday. The formal opening of the Brueckner galleries in Hollywood, 1837 North Cahuenga Boulevard, is announced for an early late. As a preopening event Helen Wilson Brueckner announces the exhibition of a genuine old master. This fine canvas is from the brush of Don Juan Carrenno de Miranda, who was court painter to Philip IV and Charles II of Spain, and a very close follower of Velasquez. The old master, with many canvases from some of our best-known western painters, will be on exhibition daily from 2 to 5 p.m.

At the Southwest Museum is now held an unusually attractive show of Japanese art. The principal feature of the exhibition is a large collection of Japanese prints never before shown in Los Angeles, the property of the State University at Kansas and loaned to the museum through the courtesy of Mrs. W. B. Thayer, a collector now resident at Coronado Beach.

Though the collection of drawing and designs by Leon Bakst showing at the Biltmore salon to April 9 is not thoroughly representative of the famous Russian artist, since there are none of the painted portraits for which he is justly celebrated, and not many of his wonderful costume designs for theaters, the show is still a very beautiful one and is attracting a good deal of interest from art lovers and the merely curious.

At the usual monthly meeting of the Professional Artists Club, held April 4 at the Gamut Club, the following artists exhibited work: Edward Langley, Humberto Pedretti, A. S. Hrenov, Alfredo Orselli, F. Giorgio, Hernando Villa, Fausto Tasca, Mrs. Gustav von Mulldorfer, Ricardo Espino, A. A. Meripol and Anthony Cicero. Edward Langley, art director of the Pickford-Fairbanks studios, gave a lecture, with miniature models, on the filming of some of the studio's late releases, among them "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and "The Thief of Bagdad."

Arthur Merton Hazard is exhibiting at the Ebel Club; Thomas McKay at Leonard's Hollywood; Mabel Esther Crawford at the Women's University Club; J. Duncan Gleason at the Los Angeles Museum, print room; Orrin White at Stendahl's Maryland gallery, Pasadena; the Painters and Sculptors of Southern California at Los Angeles Museum; M. E. Berry at Kanst's. A discouragingly long list—for the reviewer. And still they come!

DEMPSEY TO FETE STUDIO EXECUTIVES

In celebration of his entry into motion pictures, Jack Dempsey, king of the heavyweights, will be guest of honor tonight at the Plantation. Many celebrities of the film world will be present, while the champion himself, is giving a dinner to a number of prominent cinema executives. During the evening patrons will be given an opportunity of dancing for the Jack Dempsey trophy. The contest will be conducted by rounds. A dancing commission composed of Dempsey, Jack Kearns, and one other will pick the winner.

STARS OF MANHATTAN ENGAGED

Margaret Lawrence and Wallace Eddinger to Play in "All Alone Susan"

One of the most interesting engagements of the present theatrical season will have its opening tonight when Thomas Wilkes will present at the Majestic Theater those popular New York stars, Margaret Lawrence and Wallace Eddinger, costarring in Lea D. Freeman's latest play, "All Alone Susan."

While these celebrated players have already made their appearance at the Majestic at the heads of their own companies, this will be the first time they have been seen here together since they played at the Mason Operahouse several years ago in "Wedding Bells." The engagement should prove a big attraction to Majestic audiences.

Advance notices of "All Alone Susan" describe the play as a whimsical comedy with a unique "plot" and a surprising "twist." The story concerns a Miss Sue Johnson, a demure little "old maid," living in Brinsley Village, Eng., who comes home one afternoon in a flutter with the astonishing news that she has flirted with a strange man while taking tea at the village shop. Furthermore, she has asked him to supper.

Of course, everyone saw her at the tea shop with the stranger and soon the entire village was buzzing with the news. Then her friends, the Chesters, called the same day at dinner-time and at the sight of the young man nearly fainted. They knew him in Venice and what a blackguard he was! To save herself poor Susan entered upon a career of wickedness that involved the young man's death in Egypt, his funeral services in New York and his widow's undoing. But it's a comedy and you'll laugh till it hurts when you know how it all turns out.

Supporting the New York stars will be seen a splendid cast that includes such excellent players as Lillian Elliott, Franklin Pangborn, Barbara Brown, Nancy Lane, George K. Arthur, Florence Wix, Billee Leicester, Vane Calvert and Harold Howard.

PROVIDING THRILLS

Dorothy Devore, who heads the all-star cast in "Hold Your Breath," the feature comedy produced by Christie, is making the average professional steeple-jack seem like an amateur by comparison, in the dare devil stunts she is executing.

CONTEST FOR BANDS

PROMOTE CIVIC INTEREST IN SUMMER CONCERTS

A band contest under the auspices of the Civic Music and Art Association of Los Angeles will be held at the Coliseum, Exposition Park, during Music Week. On Saturday, May 10, in the afternoon, high school bands, boys bands other than high school, and university and college bands, will compete. Sunday afternoon, May 11, adult volunteer bands and Army and Navy and National Guard bands will compete.

On Saturday three prizes of $100 each and banner, three plaques and three silver cups, will be awarded to the winners. On Sunday afternoon four prizes of $200 each, four plaques and four silver cups will be awarded the bands. In addition a drill contest open to all bands will take place Sunday, with additional prizes of $100 plaques and cups. These will be awarded for military and fancy drills.

Each band will play one selection of their own choosing, and one number chosen by the judges. These numbers have already been selected, with a different overture for each type of band. They include "Selection from Bohemian Girl," the overtures "Bridal Rose," "Orpheus," "Morning, Noon and Night," "Raymond," "Stradella" and "Light Cavalry."

Points for adjudication include stage appearance and deportment, attack, intonation, execution, ensemble and interpretation. Where more than three bands compete for any one prize, and the standards are sufficiently high, other prizes will be offered.

It is expected that this civic interest in the promoting of good band music will have a far-reaching effect in providing summer concerts Sundays and evenings in the various city parks and auditoriums.

Mrs. MacDowell at Choral Hall

A program of MacDowell music arranged for school students and teachers will be played by Mrs. Edward MacDowell, widow of the composer, at Choral Hall, Philharmonic Auditorium, on Tuesday afternoon at 4 p.m. Mrs. MacDowell will also tell the story of Peterboro Colony, which will be illustrated with lantern slides. In her entertaining lecture-recital one not only hears the authoritative playing of the music of America's greatest composer, but glimpses through his talented widow many intimate stories and anecdotes of the composer. And as well Mrs. MacDowell explains why it is that the American composer is unable to produce more important works than he does, and otherwise illumines the life and activities of the creative art pursuant. The concert is in charge of Miss Margaret Goetz.

Offer Dance Attraction

A beautiful program will be presented by Norma Gould and her dancers for the Art and Travel section of the Ebell Club on Wednesday.

Miss Gould will speak briefly on the need for beauty and authenticity in design and color of costumes for dancers. She will illustrate her talk with authentic raiment and dances of Egypt, Japan, Arabia, the Slavic nations, Brittany and Spain, as well as Aztec, period and character numbers. She will dress as an East Indian dancing-girl.

In connection with the lecture will be a demonstration of lighting effects upon stage and costume. This will be accomplished by means of a miniature model of the stage in the Gould School.

Those assisting Miss Gould are Sada Hindman, Ynez Kirby, Evelyn Crist, Martha Gill, Helen Mathison, Naomi Barrett, Ruth Cowper, Vera Belle Chamberlain, Margaret Case, Marjorie Dougan, Therese Joannes, Yvonne Pometti, Master Jack Chase and Joy Hopkins.

Features Orchestra

Music at the California is one of the outstanding features of the entertainment, owing to the skill in selection and direction shown by Carli D. Elinor, who has for three years successfully guided the musical destiny of this theater. Elinor scored one of the most popular musical backgrounds of his career when he arranged the accompaniment to "Beau Brummel." Letters have been pouring in to inquire the names of certain conspicuous themes. The same score is being used by Salvatore Santaella at Miller's, where the "Beau" has been moved.

"Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak-Model," requires the light and modern touch which Elinor has succeeded in giving it. For his program he has chosen to present "Swanee River" in seven languages. In France it would be sung with a touch of "Thais" and a flavor of the Marseillaise, in Hungary the homely old song would have the strongly marked rhythms of a peasant dance. Ireland would make a reel of it and the Scotch would intone on it on bagpipes. All these interesting differences are played by the California orchestra with fascinating effect.

Every instrument lends itself to the jazz of "Where the Lazy Daisies Grow," the final concert number presented by Elinor. The trombone laughs to see such tricks as the French horn cuts up while the marimbaphone trips lightly over the high tones of the melody.

Events of Week in Music Circles

Chamber Music Society of San Francisco

Mme Isabel Curl Piana Soprano

College Boy Is Tympanist

Darrow V. Seber, tympanist with the Criterion Symphony Orchestra, is typical of the young American musician. Seber did his most serious musical work when he was studying at the University of Utah. Here he was a pupil of John McClellan, organist of the Mormon Tabernacle, and was studying piano and organ. Later he began to study tympani, and when he left college it was to play professionally in the theaters of Salt Lake City. Later he came to Los Angeles, and was at Clune's Auditorium, and from there he went to France in the Army. In due course he became a member of the American band which was organized by Walter Damrosch, and which made the sensational tour through all the warring regions.

Seber has played in several other theater orchestras in this city, chief of these being the California, Grauman's Third and Broadway, and Grauman's Metropolitan.

Synchronize Music with Picture

Arthur Kay, conductor of Loew's State Theater Concert Orchestra, has arranged an interesting concert program this week.

The program will consist of "Tales From the Vienna Woods," concert waltz by Johann Strauss, a descriptive piece depicting, by way of music, the spirit which surrounds the country of Vienna. The second number will be an intermezzo, "Jazzfonico," arranged by Arthur Kay, with profound apologies to Pietro Mascagni.

For the musical synchronization to accompany "The Enchanted Cottage," Kay has evolved a particularly interesting scheme. He has used Massenet's famous "Elegie," for Richard Barthelmess' character theme. Selections from the Massenet opera, "Manon" are also incorporated into the synchronization, as well as "Visions" by Tschaikowsky and a "Petite Scherzo" by Saenger.

The theme to accompany the character portrayed by May McAvoy is the "Adagio Expressive" from the C Major Symphony, by Schumann. Other interesting excerpts are the second and fourth movements from Mendelsshon's "Italian Symphony."

In Joint Recital

Miss Nina Horner, pianist, artist pupil and assistant of Francis Kendig, will appear in joint recital with Mme. Ethelyn Fridley, dramatic soprano, in the recital hall of the Hollywood Conservatory of Music and Arts, 5444 Hollywood Boulevard, next Saturday evening. Miss Horner is an accomplished pianist who combines with her classic offerings several recently composed numbers.

Mme. Fridley has appeared throughout California and much of the East in concert, and last season appeared with great success in the role of Santuzza at the Steindorff production of "Cavaleria Rusticana" at the Berkeley Greek Theater. Her Los Angeles appearances have been greeted with unusual success. Her voice is rich, full and resonant. She will offer a group of songs by Mr. Kendig, a local pianist and teacher. The following program will be presented:

Sonata in G major, Op. 14, No. 2......Beethoven
(Allegro movement.)
Scherzino ..........................Paderewski
Nina Blanche Horner.
"Voi lo sapete" from "Cavaleria Rusticana" Mascagni

Ethelyn Fridley.
"To the Rising Sun" ..................Torjussen

"Deserted Adobe" ..................Homer Grunn
"Juba Dance" ..................Nathaniel Dett
Miss Horner.
"In the Time of Roses"..........Reichardt-Kendig

"The Path" ..................Francis Kendig
"Love's Gift" ..................Francis Kendig

Mrs. Fridley.

Organ Recital of French Music

Presenting a program of modern French music, Ernest Douglas concert organist, will play the fifth of his historical organ concert series at St. Matthais Church this evening. Besides the numbers listed, Mr. Douglas will improvise on the ancient Easter melody, "O Filii et Filiae." The program follows:

Sonata in E Flat ..................A. Macquarrie
Minuetto from 4th Symphony......Louis Vierne
Toccata from Symphony No. 5..Charles Marie Widor

Gabrilowitsch With Ensemble

A program interesting to musicians and layman alike will be that of Tuesday evening, April 15, at the Auditorium, when Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist, and the Chamber Music Society of San Francisco will be heard in joint recital.

Gabrilowitsch is a favorite locally, both as piano virtuoso and conductor, his appearances in these roles last summer at the Hollywood Bowl concerts re-establishing his prestige gained many years ago.

In the San Francisco Chamber Music Society the Pacific Coast has a representative organization which has gained a national reputation. Two years ago they enjoyed the honor of being invited to participate in the Berkshire Chamber Music Festival sponsored by Mrs. F. S. Coolidge.

Founded in 1916 by Elias Hecht, flutist, its membership has been without change of personnel. Each member has a worthwhile musical reputation, with study under the best masters at home and abroad during the student days, and routine gained in the world's symphony orchestras.

Mr. Gabrilowitsch will be heard in an entire piano program, with a special children's program announced for the following Saturday afternoon.

Shows Popular Appreciation

The program for the last symphony, popular concert is, according to custom, a request program. Selections balloted by the audiences of the last several concerts are being counted, and although the count is at this writing not quite complete, the trend of popular selection is significant of public appreciation.

Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" leads Tschaikowski's "Fourth in F Minor" by more than 25 per cent. Beethoven's "Seventh" is in third place, and his "Eighth" is tying with Rachmaninoff's "E Minor." Mozart's "E Flat Major" is next to last.

In the suites, Tschaikowski's "Nut Cracker" and Massenet's ballet music from "Le Cid" are practically tied, and far ahead of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Caprice Espagnole" and Schubert's ballet music from "Rosamunde."

Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" is oddly enough tied for first place with Saint-Saens's wierd and almost diametrically opposed "Dance Macabre," Gliere's "Les Syrennes" is running a close second.

In the overtures, Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" leads. In the miscellaneous section Rubinstein's "Melody in F" seems to prove the theory that people want to hear tunes with which they are familiar. "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" by Strauss is far in the lead for waltzes.

Chamber Music Concert

As a fitting finale to an artistic season, the Los Angeles Chamber Music Society offers a program from Schubert, Brahms and Beethoven next Friday evening. A large combination is the Beethoven Septet, opus 20. This is written for violin (Sylvain Noack,) viola (Emile Ferir,) violoncello (Ilya Bronson,) double bass (Ernest Huber,) clarinet (Pierre Perrier,) bassoon (Frederich Moritz) and French horn (Alfred Brain.) The Brahms Trio, opus 40, one of the most characteristic works of the composer, requires the unusual group of piano (Blanche Rogers-Lott,) violin and French horn. The Schubert Quintet for two violins, viola and violoncello, has in addition to the above named violinist, violist and violoncellist, Henry Svedrofsky as second violin and Frits Gaillard as violoncellist. The concert takes place at the Gamut Club Theater.

Easter Sunrise Service

Elaborate preparations are being made for the Easter Sunrise Service in the Hollywood Bowl this year, when a larger number of "Easter pilgrims" than ever before is expected to line the Bowl's hollow and take part in the impressive observance that annually attracts thousands of visitors to the beautiful open-air cathedral amid the hills. Pageantry will be interwoven, in a measure, with the musical service this year, for the first time, but the service will be kept simple and essentially religious.

Hidden trumpeters will sound the first note on the program, announcing the first flush of dawn in the east. Then the Hollywood Community Orchestra will play its first number in any Bowl Easter service, marking another milestone along Hollywood's musical road. Jay Plowe will conduct the orchestra, which includes fifty or more professional and semiprofessional musicians. The Wayfarer Chorus, conducted by William Tyroler, will be grouped upon the central stage, to sing the moving "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah," then to sing ages-old Easter hymns with the crowds who form the audience.

The Hollywood Community Chorus, of which Mrs. J. J. Carter is president, sponsors the Easter service and will tender a breakfast following the service to the members of the orchestra. This will be held in the Hollywood Woman's Club Building.

Bowl Association Civic Dinner

Frederick Kimball Stearns of Beverly Hills will be the host at the annual civic dinner to be given on April 7 in the Hollywood Woman's Club by the Hollywood Bowl Association. Mr. Stearns has heartily supported the Bowl summer music from its inception, and heads the advisory board of the summer concerts committee. His support and encouragement have been through personal counsel and interest as well as in a financial way.

Mrs. J. J. Carter, secretary of the Bowl summer concerts, will act as hostess. Alfred Hertz, who has been engaged as conductor of the third season of concerts, will be present, with Mrs. Hertz, and Dr. Edgar F. Magnin will speak.

Squire Coop, head of music in the University of California, Southern Branch, will be at the piano while his popular composition, "The Bowl Refrain," is sung. A Cadman song will be featured, also, in anticipation of the production in the Bowl this summer of his opera "Shanewis."

Party to Visit Europe

Miss Mary L. O'Donoughue, well-known Los Angeles musician, and teacher of music appreciation and kindred subjects at Polytechnic High School, will again conduct a trip through Europe this summer. Owing to the Olympic games in Paris, the great exposition in London, and important attractions in music and dramatic affairs, the season in Europe promises to be more than usually attractive. The party leaves New York July 5, and will visit Paris, the battlefields of Rheims, and Chateau Thierry; Versailles will be visited, through the Rhone valley to Avignon, thence to Nice, Monte Carlo, the Italian Riviera, Genoa, Pisa, Rome, Naples, Pompeii, Florence, Milan and Venice. From thence Miss O'Donoughue will conduct her party through Switzerland and the Alps. After leaving Lucerne, Strassburg, Lorraine and Luxembourg will be visited, then Brussels and the Ypres and Flanders battlefields. The British Isles will be included, with excursions from London to the Shakespeare country, Furness Abbey, Kenilworth and the English Lake District so charmingly immortalized by Wordsworth. The party will return via Quebec and Montreal.

Mrs. MacDowell at Choral Hall

Aid Music Students

A worthy project in the way of helping young music students with talent is a fund which was created last year by the American Music Optimists, whereby these students are put into a position to pursue their studies.

With this end in view the organization, through the courtesy of H. B. Wright, managing director of the Criterion, and Regge Doran, assistant manager, will give a benefit performance of "Secrets," Tuesday evening.

Opera Singer in West

Alma Peterson, four years a star with the Chicago Grand Opera Company, and also of the Cleveland Grand Opera, will open her concert tour through California in Santa Monica at the Woman's Club Auditorium on the 17th inst. She will appear in recital at the Hollywood's Woman's Club on the 25th inst.

Miss Peterson has been accorded unusual success in the East and South where she is especially well known. Her voice, of bell-like quality, is one of considerable volume and remarkable through its entire range.

Ambassador Selections

"Tales from the Vienna Woods," by Strauss will be one of the numbers played by the Ambassador Sextet in the Ambassador Lobby this evening. Other numbers which they will play will be "Love Death," from "Tristan and Isolde," by R. Wagner, Chaminade's "Silver Rings" and Pagliacci," by Leoncavall.

New Affiliation

The Girls' Glee Club of the University of California, Southern Branch, recently became affiliated with the National Federation of Music Clubs. Several concerts are booked for this organization in the near future, including engagements with the Optimist's Club, the 19th inst., The Times' Radio on the 26th inst., and the City Club, and the Uplifter's Club. An appearance is scheduled for Easter Sunday at the Maryland Hotel in Pasadena. Recent recitals were presented for the Wednesday Morning Club, and the Maryland Hotel. Dr. William J. Kraft is the director of the club.

Olga Samaroff Gives Record Experiences

At the Philharmonic Auditorium, where she appeared with the Symphony Orchestra in the Schuman Concerto, Olga Samaroff, pianist, told of some of the entertaining experiences which are the lot of the concert artist the other day.

"You know," she began, "that meeting all you people out here that I have heard about so long is so much easier because there has been such a splendid sale of my records in the West. It makes me feel as if you knew me, some way."

Some one suggested that she tell about making records.

"Oh, it's all very interesting. Hearing one's playing photographed—for that's what it is—helps one to improve tremendously. Everything shows up. One cannot play too loudly or the needle jumps out of the groove, and if one plays too softly it does not record distinctly.

"Of course, sometimes it is necessary to have many trials before an absolutely perfect master record is obtained. One might make a flawless record of an extremely difficult number and then have trouble with a really simple piece. Once I had just that very experience. It cured me of profanity, too!

"I was playing the Mendelssohn 'Spring Song.' Well, I am not at all given to expressing my feeling in slang, but I had played that piece over and over again, and I always seemed to get one wrong note into it somewhere. After I had been just as careful as I possibly could one wrong note slipped into the very last measure. Without thinking, I lifted my hands and said, 'Oh, damn!' I was surprised at myself, but I immediately made another record and made it right. Several days later, when I was recording another number, the managers said, 'Here's a record you must hear.' Well, they played a recording of Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song,' and in the very last measure the music stopped suddenly and said, 'Oh, damn!' I was horrified, and you may be sure that I have never used that word since."

ECHOES OF MUSIC ACTIVITY HERE

Barbara Taylor Kierulff, harpist, gave one of her Irish costume programs for the Wan Wan Club on Thursday afternoon. She was assisted by Ralph Reily, tenor, and Beatrice Feitchans, Irish dancer.

Artists of high caliber who are doing things professionally from the Bertha Vaughn studios are Ruth May Shaffner, soprano, and Joyce Langston, costume-recitalist, Mary Teitsworth and others. Miss Langston and Miss Shaffner have filled a number of engagements of recent date. The successful morning musicale of last week, at which three of the Bertha Vaughn pupils appeared, with Joseph Heindl, 'cellist, as the assisting artist, showed artistic work. Informal student evenings, at which students appear for each other for constructive criticism, have proven very interesting.

Hilda Nolte, pianist and teacher, has recently returned to Los Angeles after an absence of three years in Europe where she has been concertizing and teaching. Miss Nolte is a graduate from the Brunswick Conservatory, and later studied with Joseph Lehvinne. During her stay here Miss Nolte will give both private and class lessons.

Jerome Lebon, a young exponent of society dancing, has opened a dance studio at the Wilshire Place Apartments. Mr. Lebon comes from New York, where he was most successful in instructing modern dancing, and he will offer the latest from the East in his teaching here. He said recently that Los Angeles, which has become a recognized center of dancing, will in the future "set the style" for much of the future society dancing.

Mme. Isabella Curl-Piana, dramatic soprano, well-known in Los Angeles for her concert work and as a teacher, will soon present several of her artist pupils in a series of recitals during the spring months. Among Mme. Piana's pupils who are prominent in vocal work are Dorothy Wiede, lyric soprano, who is appearing on many club programs, and Jessie Stark Wilson, head of the vocal department of the Misses Reilley's school. Mme. Piana has residence studios at 2307 South Hoover street.

Olga Steeb, who is completing her recent concert tour of the States in New York, was recently guest at a box party given by Paolo Gallico at the New York Philharmonic Orchestra concert at which Mr. Gallico's composition "Euphonium" was presented. Miss Steeb will shortly return to Los Angeles to take up the work with her piano school, which is steadily increasing in popularity. She is planning to build a new studio building upon her return to Los Angeles.

The Woman's Lyric Club recently closed the Artist Series of the University of Southern California. They were assisted by Calmon Luboviski, violinist. The members of the club have planned to take over the Criterion Theater for the performance of the 17th inst. They will present to their guests numbers by double quartet and by the entire club. They are now preparing their spring concert.

Lawrence Tibbet, baritone, formerly of Los Angeles and now of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, will appear in recital Tuesday afternoon at Aeolian Hall, New York. He will be assisted by Frank LaForge, composer-pianist. His program contains old French and old English songs, a group of American songs, a group of Brahms songs in German, Russian numbers by Rachmaninoff and Gretchaninoff, and an aria by Verdi.

Mrs. Hart Allen, dramatic reader and impersonator, is one of the artists who will appear on the benefit program of the Los Angeles Music School Settlement Association to be given tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. E. R. A. Misenaer in Hollywood. She appeared a short time ago on the Matinee Musical Club program.

ENTIRE SYMPHONY ON THREE RECORDS

The first and only complete recording of Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony in B minor has been made in Europe, and is now ready for American sale. It has been made by the orchestra of the German Operhouse, Berlin, under the direction of the internationally-famous conductor Eduard Moerike. The symphony is made in a set of three records, and comes in an album with an interesting history of the "Unfinished Symphony." The interpretations are extraordinary. (Odeon Okeh.)

A new Easter record with the two numbers, "King Ever Glorious" from "The Crucifixion" (Sir John Stainer) and "The Resurrection" (Harry Rowe Shelly,) has been made by Charles Harrison, tenor. (Vocalion.)

Rosa Raisa's remarkable range of the voice is shown in the beautiful "Nenia," (Last Night in the Deep, Deep Sea,) from "Mefistofele" (Boito.) Mme. Raisa was heard here a short time ago in opera, one of the highlights of the musical season. On the reverse side of the record is the famous "Un Bel di Vedremo," (Some Day He'll Come) from "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini.) The orchestral accompaniment for these two numbers is conducted by Genaro Papi, Metropolitan Operahouse conductor. (Vocalion.)

Mischa Elman, violinist, plays Rubinstein's haunting "Romance," with which he pairs Kurt Schindler's arrangement of Fifich's "Souvenir Poetique." He bows these numbers throughout, occasionally breaking into double stops. (Victor.)

Shura Cherkassy .. 11 years of age, is said to be a mature genius. Two piano solos by him, two Mendelssohn numbers, both reveal his remarkable tonal sense, his phrasing, and his authority of method. If one doesn't hold much stock in child prodigies, they should at least give a hearing of these two, Sherzo and Prelude, by a child who has known hunger, privation and exile, but who is normal and now happy in America. (Victor.)

Mme. Alcock of the Metropolitan, in her pleasant contralto voice, records on the one disc "Hold Thou My Hand," with decorative flute parts and a violin obbligato, and "Grass and Roses," of a similar type and treatment.

THE WELL TRAINED NURSE

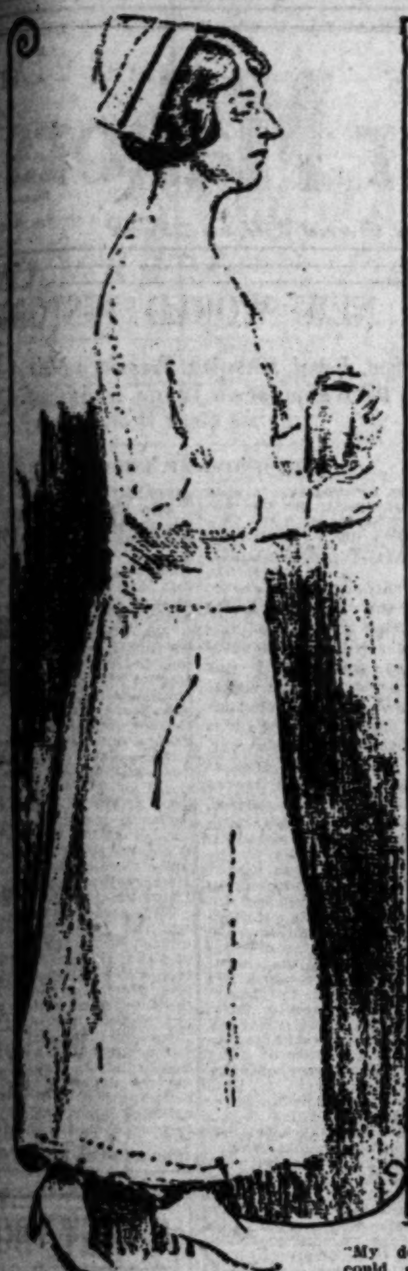
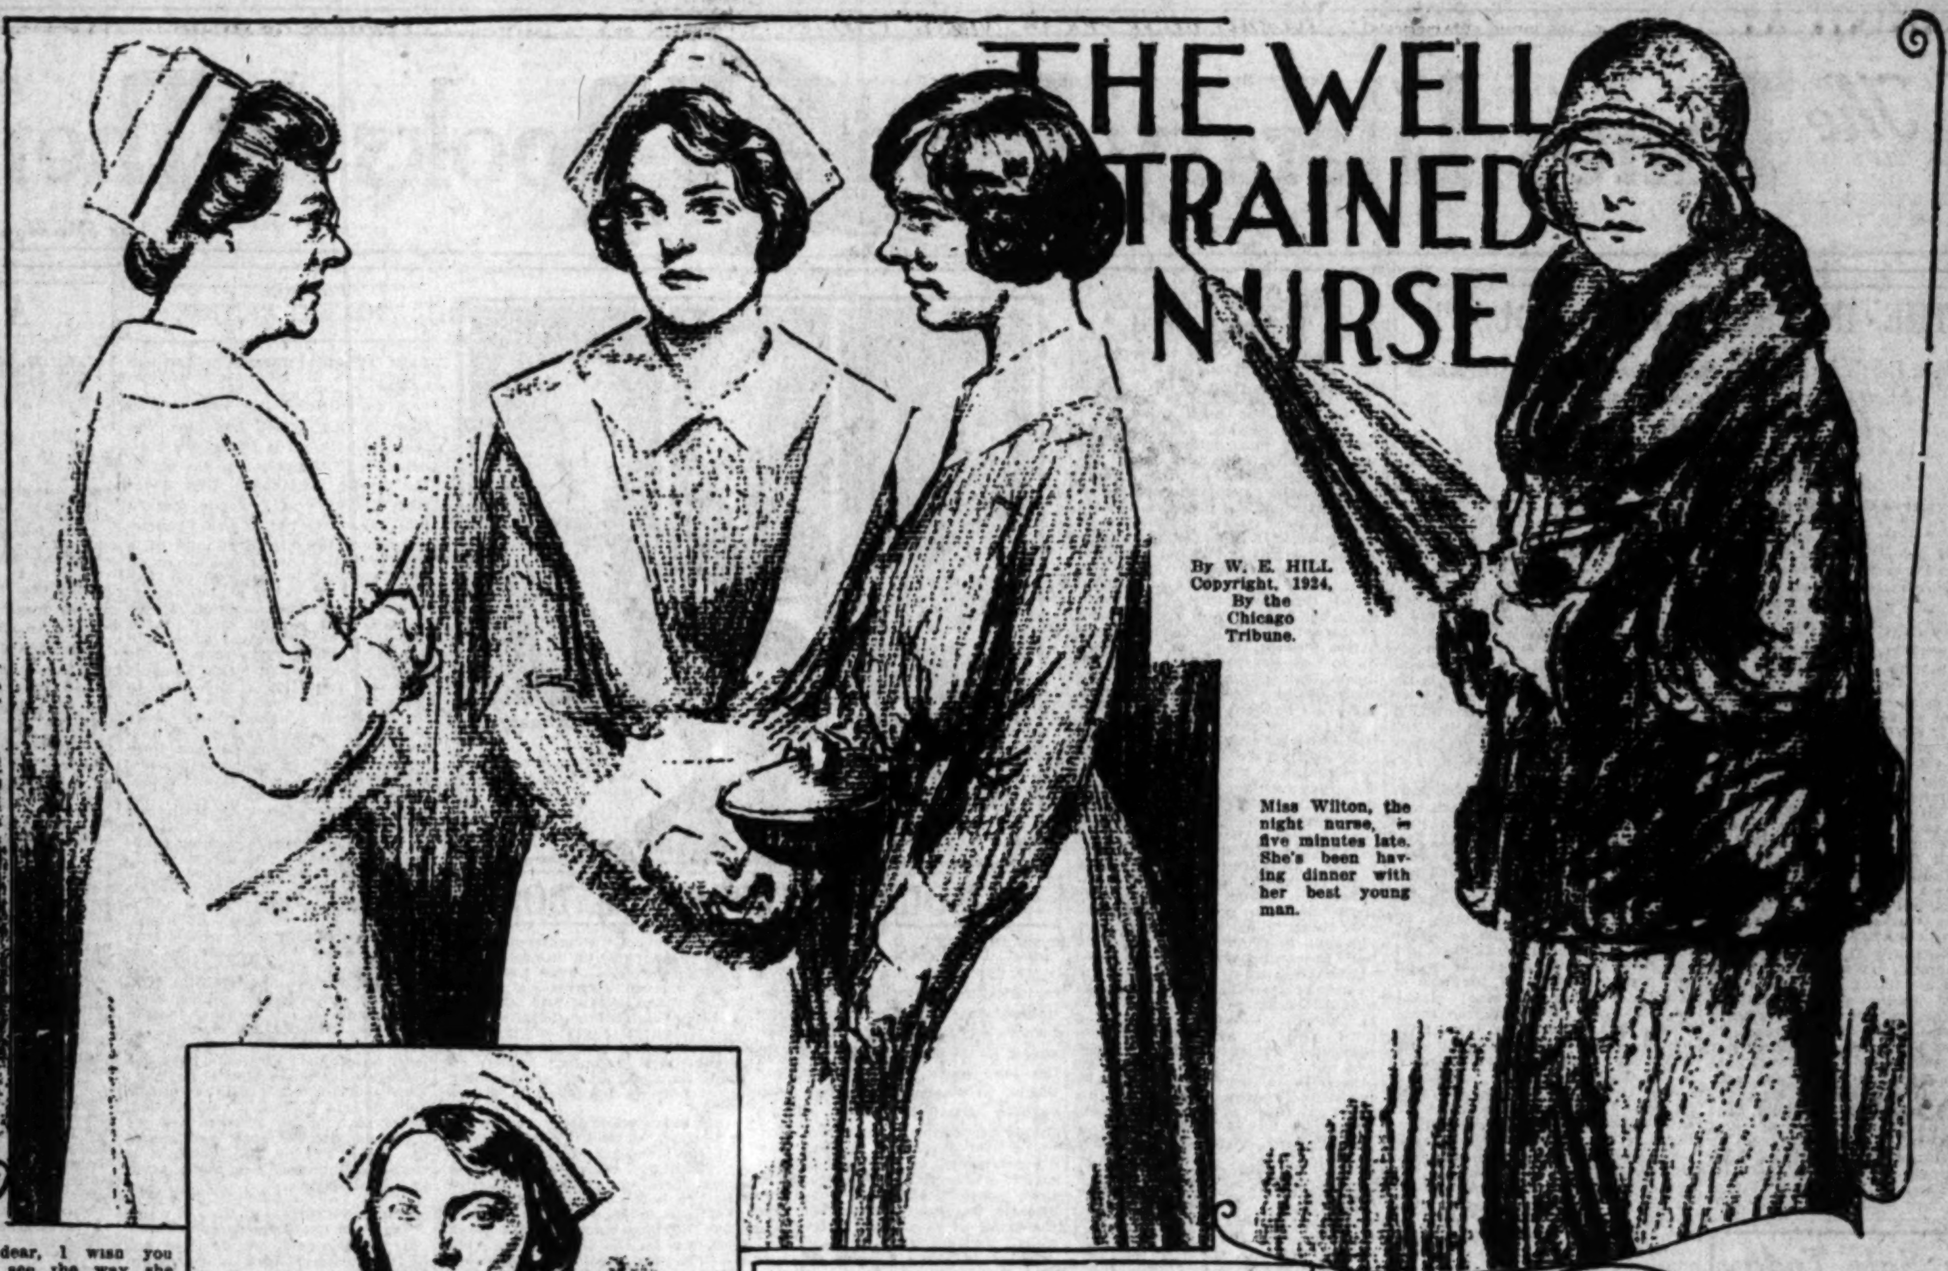
By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1924, By the Chicago Tribune.

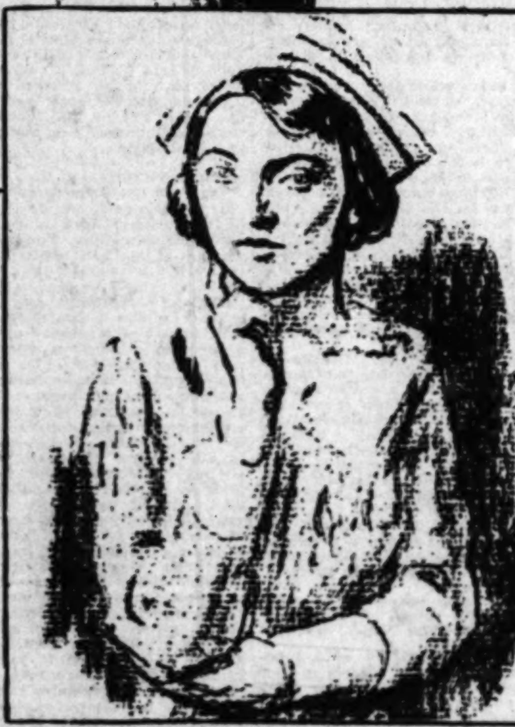


Miss Bemis, Mrs. Dawsey's day nurse is helping entertain Mrs. Dawsey's visitors. She's brought out the Dawsey appendix in its own little pickle jar to show them.

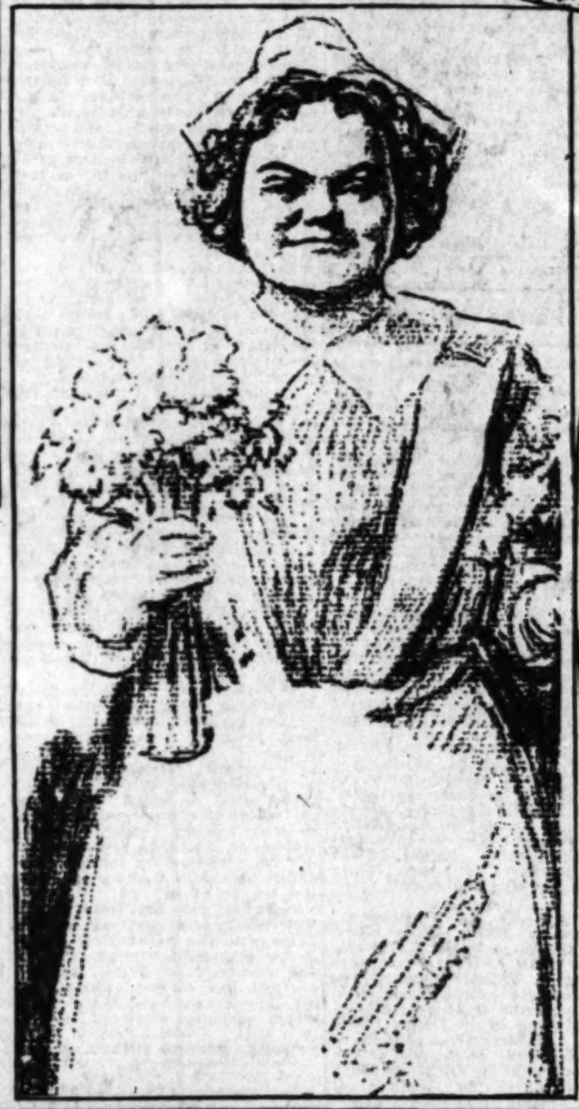


"My dear, I wish you could see the way she dolls up before the doctor comes! And a little rouge for even the internes!" Two nurses and a probationer talk over the patients.

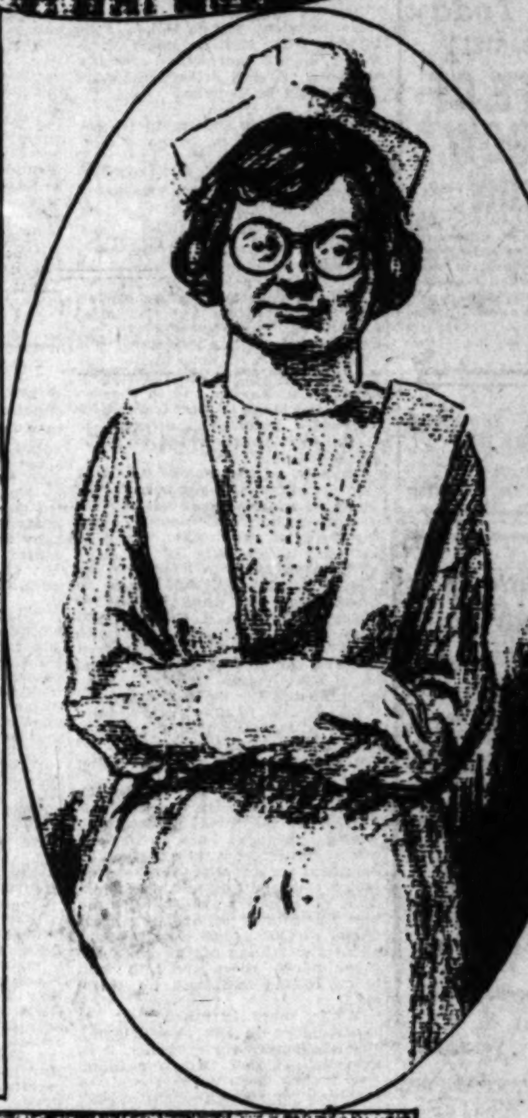
Miss Wilton, the night nurse, is five minutes late. She's been having dinner with her best young man.

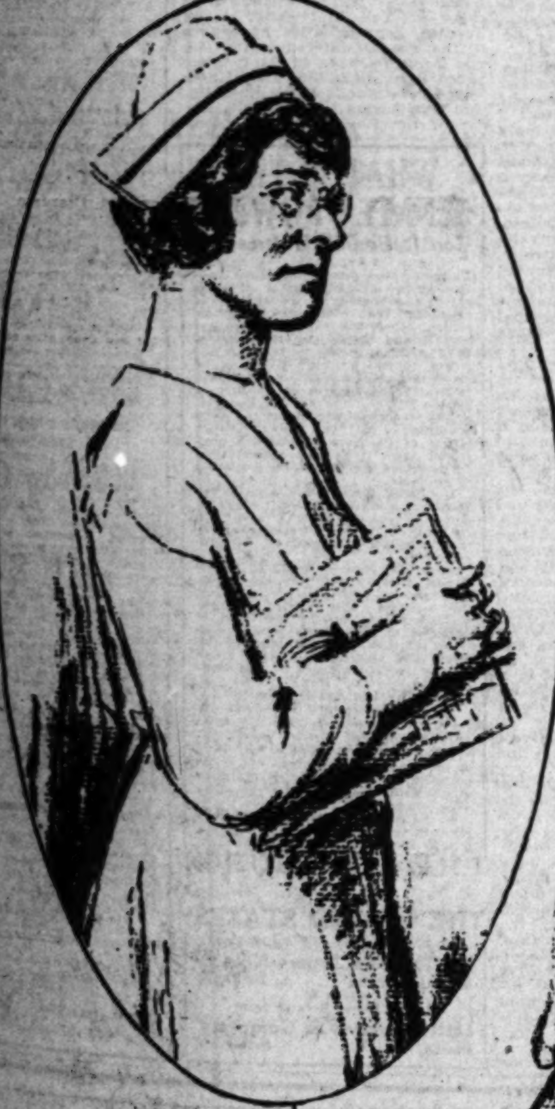


Miss Boriclor has been on cases in all the best movie households and oh the illusions she shatters by so doing. She knows for a certainty that Gloria Gleeson wears false teeth and curses out her mother, and as for Dorrance Devine, the idol of the screen, "Why he's just a little ignorant wop with bad teeth. I know because I nursed his wife when she had influenza, and every time he came near her he threw something at her." You won't have an idol left when good Nurse Boriclor finishes.

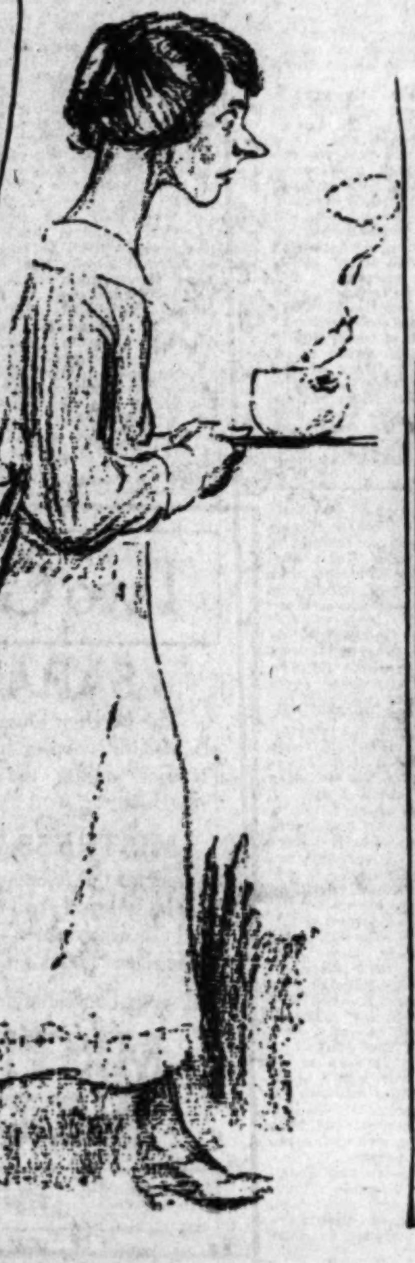


"Say good night to your posies," says Miss Ploughman, as she takes the flowers outside the sickroom.

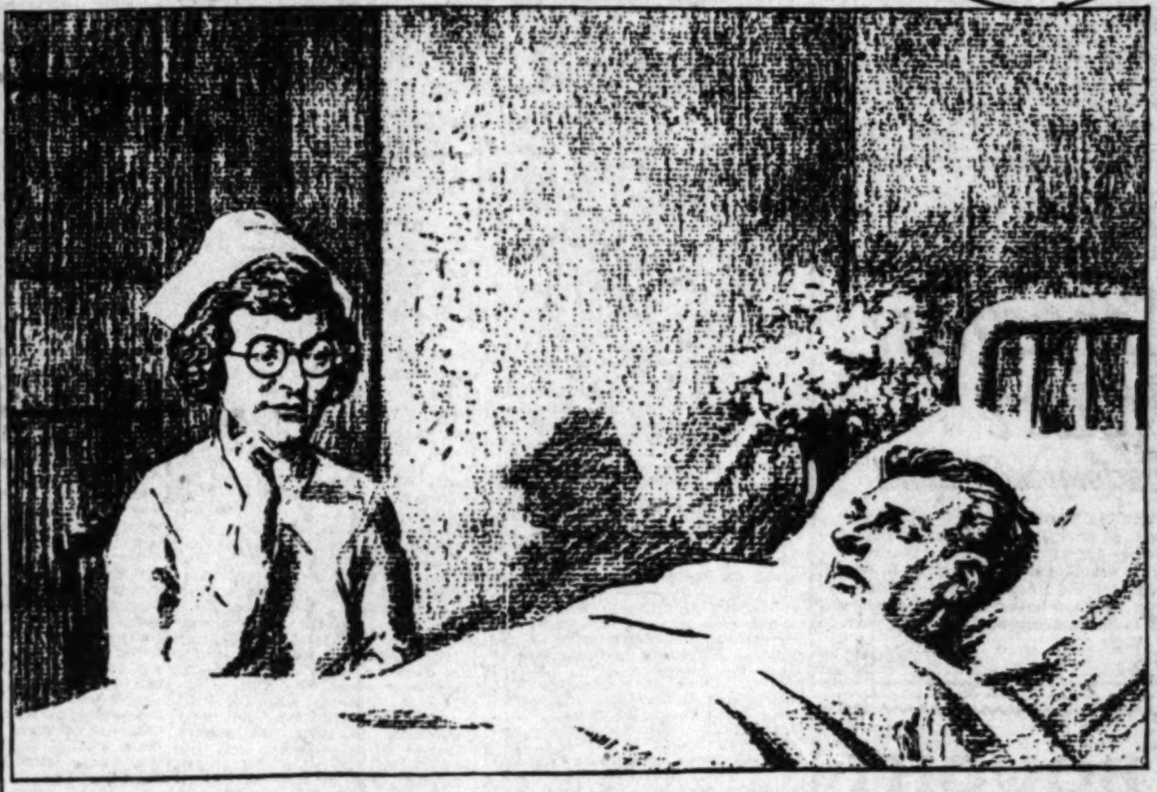




Oh, those fresh internes — they just have to be put in their place now and then!



A probationer with a nice bowl of broth, and a thousand and one things on her mind.
It's a long road to a graduate nurse.



The nurse with the chatty bedside manner, who aims to entertain. She will tell the patient whose appendix has just been removed all about the case she heard of last year, where a man had the scissors and a sponge left inside him and they finally stuck through six months after the operation.

Mrs. Gorphy specializes in nervous ailments and such. Mrs. Gorphy has a great deal of trouble below stairs when on a private case. The cook is always doing her dirt. Once Mrs. Gorphy found out that the chauffeur was having the choicest of delicacies for his meals while Mrs. Gorphy was living on the very plainest in the land. Often Mrs. Gorphy is grievously insulted. Many's the time she has gone to French Lick or Atlantic City with an old gentleman suffering from lumbago and had to turn right around and come home, so obvious was it that things weren't quite right. Poor Mrs. Gorphy.

"THE INTERPRETER'S HOUSE"

Struthers Burt's First Novel and Other Arresting Essays into Fiction Offer Spring Reading for Those Who Like Somewhat Serious Narration

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

THE INTERPRETER'S HOUSE. By Struthers Burt. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is Mr. Burt's first novel, although he has won recognition as a writer of short stories. It is a study of New York life of today, but has three generations on the canvas. The older, represented by the retired banker father of the hero and by a querulous and domineering rich aunt—very much the stock rich aunt of fiction—is kept properly in the background. The younger generation has two representatives in the foreground, Lael, the flapper whom the hero eventually marries, and a very real and lovable little boy, who thinks that God must have had a lot of old bones lying around in order to make all the animals.

It is the dangerous thirties, however, upon whom Mr. Burt concentrates, but most especially upon his hero, Gulyan Eyre, a young dilettante returned from the wars, and incidentally from many years spent abroad, having found Paris more to his liking than our crude country. But at last he returns to try for real life in New York. Belatedly, he seeks a career in business, but makes no headway until stress of circumstances turns him into a masterful business man.

It is his seeking for love, or finding it without the seeking, that is first developed. He at first pursues and is later pursued by a fascinating woman of his own high social connections, the wife of a bounder. Unhappily, she does not love her husband; neither will she divorce him. The author, in order to create a barrier, makes her a Catholic, to whom divorce is anathema. This is unnecessary, as he very deftly shows that she prefers married freedom to divorce. Far more convincing this, than palaver about religious inhibitions.

When the honorable Gulyan finds out that his Vida is too warm for safety and too cool for divorce and remarriage, he leaves her. He is sadly disillusioned, but with splendid resiliency he finds himself in love with Lael, almost in the next chapter. Lael scandalizes him, flaunts him, loves him, jilts him.

In the meantime, there are good pictures of Gulyan's brothers and sisters and their wives and husbands, and so, of a certain part of prosperous New York society. Then there is a financial crash and family upheaval, with Gulyan becoming the sobered and dominant head of the family, though he treasures under his ribs a broken heart. But Lael is reunited to him and most positively refuses to jilt him again because of his loss of wealth. I think she was level-headed here, for there was really plenty left. And she may have heard of that mining stock that I feel sure was scheduled to prove a bonanza.

The text is better than the plot. In the first place, the style is little short of distinguished. Then there is much excellent conversation, which only occasionally becomes bookish. Personally, I could dispense with some of the author's philosophizing, even though it is good of its kind. At any rate there is much cleverness, some profundity, considerable plot dexterity, and now and then, a little banality, all of which goes to show that it is a book that is made up of more than shining surfaces. And it is very readable and should be popular.

THE BOOK OF BLANCHE. By Dorothy Richardson. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

This is another first novel. The author is a well-known newspaper writer of New York. It is a love story, full of mystical implications, of a young violinist and the house surgeon in the hospital where she went for an operation for cancer. All the events take place during her first operation and the brief period of convalescence. Very adroitly the author describes the experience of Blanche under the influence of ether, when the spirit was free to wander and to observe what was going on. Her frantic interference with the surgeons is made convincing, which is in itself a feat.

Blanche is represented as being the daughter of Arpady, famed violinist, who deserted her mother and died shortly afterward. Upon the death of the mother, the little girl was taken care of by Bela, a mountebank, who loved her devotedly. His death sent her to an orphanage and then to the restricted life with a good woman who adopted her. Here a violin was forbidden. So Blanche went to high school and did the usual small-town things, always, however, hoping for the day when she would be free to take up her violin again. But when that day came, she had lost the magic touch. So the best she could do was to become a musician in a cabaret.

How her intense and all-absorbing love for the surgeon, who was a man of much experience with women, brought back to her the gift of music; how the surgeon, on his part, experienced a revelation which cleansed him and made him start on a new way of life; and how the coming of Arpady's great friend at the wrong time brought about the stilling of the girl's too eager heart—these are told with much feeling and with no little art.

While there is much that is overwrought in the book, much that challenges our credulity, it is, nevertheless, one worth reading. For it has beauty in it and a reaching for something other than the bread of life. And it definitely puts its author on the literary map as a writer whose work is to be given consideration.

CRAZY MAN. By Maxwell Bodenheim. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

A peculiar book, not so much a novel as an exposition and interpretation of the "crazy man's" philosophy of life. Unlike much of Mr. Bodenheim's writings, it is written in carefully lucid English that goes far to make the exceedingly difficult theme clear and understandable.

In the beginning it is only fair to say that the book must have a narrow appeal. Mr. Bodenheim's very plain speaking on various subjects, especially on sex relations, is bound to turn many persons away from the book. But those who get the idea from reading the first pages, descriptive of the "innocent" Selma of the dance halls, that this is another sex novel, are quite wrong. It is, on the contrary, a very sincere attempt to reveal the philosophy of the principal character, John Carley, who is the crazy man of the title and whose profession is that of a thief. As to how crazy he was and how insane his philosophy there will probably be as many opinions as there are readers of the book.

As for the philosophy, a few extracts will give an inkling. "Men," says John, "are the slaves of an evil dream in which they imagine that they own the things that whip their minds and hearts in an eventual numbness, but I have no desire to join them. As I peer into the dream I can see exceptional people, who are trying to free themselves, but are powerless because the dream refuses to pay them for their creations and forbids them to have idle bodies and vigorous imaginations. I want to help them and make them bolder at the same time, and so I steal to be able to give them money and to invade the unreal trap that seeks to mangle their expressions. I steal also to protect my own thoughts against the servilities and meaningless labors that would otherwise be forced upon them by the stupid dreams of men. In this way I can prove to myself that I am concretely awake and not merely playing with visions of rebellion and alertness."

So much for Carley's ideas of "trusteeship." Now for his religious ideas: "I have observed," he explains, "that the Christian religion has become a series of sterile observations, rhetorics and Bible quotations. . . . The spirit and purpose of this region are dead and have been virulently defiled. . . . The figure of Christ has appealed to the emotions of men, but has never stormed their minds, and the Christian religion has been impotent because it has failed to win this fused response. I shall become an intellectual Christ, tramping into sickly brawls and vapid scandals of streets and halls, and pleading with men to create a sharply pointed union between their thoughts and their senses."

The details of his experience in this self-appointed mission are recorded in the book.

LITERARY GOSSIP

John Buchan is a unique figure in the history of letters. He is at once a lawyer, soldier, business man, novelist, historian, poet and editor, as well as being a keen sportsman. His latest book, "The Last Secrets," recently published by Houghton Mifflin, Co., recounts the story of those perilous and hidden corners of the earth which have kept their mystery until this century. This is particularly in Mr. Buchan's field, for above all he is the prince of adventurers.

"Some New Letters of Edward Fitzgerald" with a foreword by Viscount Grey is announced by Putnams. These letters of the translator of "Omar Khayyam" were written by him to his father-in-law and contain many amusing and intimate comments on the figures of the day.

E. P. Dutton & Co. announce a reprint, to be ready shortly, of their "Library of Early Novelists." Fifteen titles are included, among which are novels by Mrs. Aphra Behn, Daniel Defoe, Thomas Amory, Sir Philip Sidney, Dean Swift, Margaret of Valois, Henry Brooks, Le Sage and others.

"Forty Years in Washington," published on March 15 by Little, Brown & Co., is by David S. Barry, a man who was for many years Washington correspondent of the New York Sun under Charles A. Dana, and who is at present sergeant-at-arms of the United States Senate. He gives vivid pictures of the Presidents from Hayes to Harding, with portrayals of such national figures as William J. Bryan, Gifford Pinchot, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Joseph G. Cannon, Richard Olney, et cetera. Mr. Barry brings back to life many of those picturesque figures that are fast fading in history—such as Roscoe Conkling, Adlai Stevenson, Marcus A. Hanna, James G. Blaine and Gen. George A. Custer.

All readers who love a baffling mystery story, especially those who have enjoyed Natalie Sumner Lincoln's ingenious and absorbing tales, will greet with delight "The Thirteenth Letter," Miss Lincoln's new novel, which Appleton published last week. Here is a startling murder, with amazing complications which shift suspicion rapidly from one quarter to another, leaving the true solution beyond conjecture till an ingenious cipher proves the key to the mystery. As this does not happen until the dramatic climax at the end of the story, "The Thirteenth Letter" offers absorbing entertainment for those who delight in the thrill of mystery stories.

Nina Wilcox Putnam, novelist and short story writer, has a new novel, "Easy," published by Harper Brothers. Mrs. Putnam has been spending the winter with her son, John Francis, on her citrus grove at Delray, Fla., hard at work on another novel.

Clayton Hamilton, whose personal research of "the trail of Stevenson" qualifies him as an expert on Stevenson matters, says of Rosaline Masson's new "Life of Robert Louis Stevenson": "The book in particular is unimpeachable in its record of facts. Miss Masson does not tell the entire truth about the life of R. L. S. but she indicates a sense that she is not ignorant of the entire truth; and she does her best, in accordance with the current circumstances, to replace, with the admirable image of a real and living man, the 'seraph in chocolate' that was propounded by Mrs. Stevenson and was decried with ribald violence by William Ernest Henley."

A GROUP OF IMPORTANT BOOKS

ECHO DE PARIS. By Laurence Housman. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

Mr. Housman has performed a remarkable feat of memory prestidigitation. He has made the readers of his "Echo de Paris" the guests at a luncheon in Paris in the long ago at which Oscar Wilde, in disgrace, discusses with various true believers, certain things pertaining to love and lore.

We hear Wilde, as in life, voice diverse views on art and letters, and if we sometimes quarrel with the paradoxical turn of his phrases we should remember that the trick of it all has grown familiar by repetition.

What is more to the point is that Mr. Housman, by some trick of memory-training, of which he alone holds the secret, has been able to recollect, almost word for word, what Wilde said at a luncheon table in Paris in 1899. Moreover, he has been able to supply the Boswellian queries and small talk of those various others who sat there enshrined in the presence of the fallen one in the last year of "the nineties." In other words, the blandishments of the great one did not blind Mr. Housman to the oracular efforts of Wilde's runners-up.

Perhaps selectively, Mr. Housmen has made a tragedy of the whole by twisting circumstances at the end so that Wilde leaves that luncheon table with a grim realization of the fact that he remains the outcast from the society of which he was once the idol.

Though we may be blamed for wrestling several gems, paradoxical and otherwise, from their setting in Mr. Housman's book, we may be pardoned for a slight selection of good things from the feast of reason and flow of soul supplied by Wilde.

Said Oscar: "When I was in America, I did not dare to tell America the truth; but I saw it clearly, even then, that the discovery of America was the beginning of the death of art."

Again: "Your Scotsman believes only in success—God saved the genius of Robert Burns to poetry by driving him through drink to failure."

Pursuing the same subject, Wilde says: "When, at the end of the eighteenth century, Scotland produced her second great writer of genius she inspired him to a terrible betrayal (for which the tradespeople of literature still praise him) to break his art on the wheel of commercial recitude, to write books which became worse and worse, in order to satisfy his creditors! In Dante's Purgatorio there is nothing to equal the horror of it."

Need we say that this author was Scott—and that we do not agree with the paradoxical Oscar.

For a careful summing up of the case against Wilde, readers are bid pay careful attention to Mr. Housman's "Footnote," with which he closes this book.

EPISODES BEFORE THIRTY. By Algernon Blackwood. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

Mr. Blackwood, who, as a literary man, largely concerns himself with men and ghosts, in "Episodes Before Thirty," bares his soul regarding youthful dealings with men. He finds them iniquitous and prone to mislead the innocent.

The first part of the book is as tame as a tongue-tied girl on her way to Sunday-school in a new dress. Mr. Blackwood begins by frankly painting himself as an Englishman of a large gullibility, newly arrived in America to seek his fortune. Again and again he is led as the lamb to slaughter, and the Walpurgis-Night surroundings of poverty and bad luck in an out-at-the-heels' rooming house are made as apparent by precise literary art as an ink spot on a new dress.

By easy gradations downward, or upward, phrase it how you will, Mr. Blackwood finds himself, after trying envelope-addressing, dairy farming, posing for artists and the hotel business with equal unsuccess, a reporter on the New York Evening Sun at $15 a week. This was in the Dana days, when the Sun was loudly for Tammany and art. It was like a bar-room bum carrying a lily in his hand at a high-church celebration. But the Sun seemed to be able to keep its literary equilibrium despite the ever-present necessity of apologizing for the yelps which came from the wigwam.

As a reporter, Mr. Blackwood seems to have had his limitations. However, he had a quick eye for the unusual and for interesting personalities, and his recollections of the elder days, of Richard Harding Davis up a ladder reporting a fake lion escape, of the Old Man of Visions in the flesh, and of James Speyer, are of the true tradition.

It is a hard book to start, but an easy one to finish, particularly for those who are Blackwood enthusiasts—and there are many of them these days.

It may be evidence of a functional disorder, or merely a case of short-sightedness on our part, but at any rate we fail to get "het up" over the works of Mr. C. E. Montague. This is not as it should be, for the critics tell us, with singular unanimity, that Mr. Montague's "Fiery Particles," "Disenchantment," "The Morning's War," and "A Hind Let Loose," are of the pure gold of literature.

Now, we have read all of these books, but always have arisen from the reading with the feeling that Mr. Montague is just about to let loose and mint-mark a few golden sentences when he is restrained. It may be another case of British reserve. Then again Mr. Montague may have the same trouble with soap bubbles of thought that we do. They look pretty when we are blowing them, but are as evanescent as a dream of paradise in the face of an alarm clock set for 3 a. m.

We will grant Mr. Montague a pretty fancy and an aptitude for the apt in quotations. He knows Shakespeare and his Bible. For instance, he finds the title for the book here considered in Genesis XLIX., 22: "Naphthali is a hind let loose; he giveth goodly words." The hero of this book "giveth goodly words;" he writes editorials for two rival morning newspapers at one and the same time. He is both accuser and accused.

As a working newspaper man and the son-in-law of the able editor of the "Manchester Guardian," Mr. Montague is fitted to ironically consider the writing game as it appertains to the inditing of articles for breakfast-table consumption. We are told that there is considerable irony in this book, but it is our idea that Mr. Montague could iron out some of his elliptical phrasing and make this book easier reading.

WHO AM I?

BY REBECCA WEST

Miss West, noted critic and novelist, will appear before a number of women's clubs in Los Angeles the week of April 18. The following is a breezy sketch of herself which we are glad to print for the benefit of those interested in this intensely vital and brilliant young Englishwoman.—Editor.

There's nothing very interesting about me. I was born on Christmas, 1892, my father was English garrison Irish, from County Kerry. We're descended from a man called Sir Anthony Denny, whom Holbein painted and who was a Privy Councillor under Henry VIII; had the cheerful job of breaking it to Henry that he was going to die. However, Henry took it well and gave him as a remembrance a pair of gloves that are now in South Kensington Museum. He was also a guardian of Edward VI. This sounds appallingly snobbish. But since then, except one man, Sir A's son who got grants of land for fighting in the Siege of Kerry, the family has done as little as it possibly could ever since. I ought to except a fairly recent ancestor who, in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century, was elected member of Parliament for the borough of Kerry, which meant that he used to ask the three voters of that constituency to breakfast and leave a £5 note under the napkin of each. Those days are gone. None of the family could raise funds for a seat even on those moderate terms.

My mother was a member of a famous family of musicians, the Mackenzies. Her father was musical director of the Theater Royal, Edinburgh, and was a friend of Coleman and Charles Kean and Ellen Tree and the Kembles, and your American actress, Charlotte Cushman. My mother was a marvelous pianist.

I was at school in Edinburgh and stayed in that town till I was seventeen. Then came to London and tried to act with very little success. I once got the sack for reading "Creative Evolution" during a rehearsal. At 18 I started writing, sent an article off to a feminist paper called the Freewoman and by return got an offer to join the staff, which I did. I had always written since I was a tiny child, published my first poem when I was 12 and shortly afterward, when I was 14, engaged extensively in newspaper correspondence concerning suffrage movement. I went on writing for the Freewoman, then joined a Socialist paper, the Clarion, and started reviewing in the Daily News. I've been torn between journalism and writing books and being ill, but the last I hope I've got over. I still find my journalism a handicap in a way, for people say of the "The Judge" in an aggrieved way, "It isn't a bit like your reviews," but there's more than what I put into reviews in me. Also, they say, "It isn't a bit like "The Return of the Soldier," but I mean to write all sorts of books before I'm done.

I had a house above the Essex marshes that I describe, lived there all through the air raids, which were longer there than anywhere else, and it was extraordinarily lovely.

RECENT FICTION

LEW TYLER'S WIVES. By Wallace Irwin. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

A very lively and well-written story is this, which has been out for some time. It is, as the publishers say, "American to the core." Mr. Irwin launches Lew Tyler with his first wife, Jessie, not in Salt Lake City but in San Francisco, where they lived in one of a row of little houses, all as much alike as the average crop of June brides. Lew was a handsome, sleek, well-fed animal, who smoked and drank and played poker in the Bohemian Club, and did a little publicity work on the side. He knew the "right" people and was hail fellow well met to the multitude. Jessie, a sturdy little red-headed nobody, had early learned to look up to her fine husband. Made patient by her love, she grubbed and saved and stood off collectors as long as she could. When at length the debts had piled up too high, Lew withdrew himself and his wife and small son to New York, where a good business opportunity was presented.

In New York he proved to be the same Lew, living beyond his means, always ready for a frolic, bored by dull evenings at home, not too particular as to who shared his pleasures. When Jessie lost her little son, as she believed because of Lew's neglect, she left him. After utter collapse, he pulled himself together and became, in due time, the respectable husband of the very correct Virginia. But we must admit that Virginia's new and correct and sadly chastened Lew, who took the place of the lovable goop whom Jessie had adored, failed to hold our interest. So we conclude that the book weakens at the last. But on the whole it is easy reading and has many vivid and vital scenes.

LUTHER NICHOLS. By Mary S. Watts. The Macmillan Company, New York.

If a sociologist were called upon to prescribe such a succession of experiences as would fit a woman of marked literary ability to write a novel like "Luther Nichols," these would be first, a period of teaching in a rural school, or else a life as the wife or daughter of a country parson or a physician with a widespread rural practice; second, a stay of some duration in a boarding-house patronized by prosperous store or garage keepers and their overhead employees, hustling lady buyers for mercantile establishments and ambitious owners of beauty parlors. Having survived and greatly profited by these divagations she would finally require at least a year as governess in one or more of "our best families." For Mrs. Watts's delineation of individuals and their varying environment have so many evidences of accuracy, combined with so fine an air of detachment, that unless, indeed, she is gifted with that rare and perfect attribute of genius which allows its possessor to enter the brain of those she meets and to think from that coign of vantage—she must have seen her principal characters at close and fairly steady range.

Luther Nichols was born and raised on a small farm in the Ohio Valley. Little was known of his father's lineage, but it seemed likely that his ancestors were of a somewhat better strain than the neighborhood average, for not only was he tall of stature, gracefully built and well featured, but he had a superior and taking air. These characteristics his sons inherited, but the daughters resembled their mother, who had been the tow-haired, stoutly built and very plain daughter of a German farmer, but one removed from the peasantry of his native land. Unforeseen circumstances forced Luther, the Banjamin of his tribe, out into the world at an early age. In a near-by city he found work in a garage and also found the friend of his childhood, Roy McArdle, a lovable, high-minded but by no means brilliant being, one of God's fools, and the only wholesome influence in Luther's new life.

When he was promoted to the rank of chauffeur and came in contact with a gayer and more fashionable class than he had ever known, he met wholly new conditions and temptations. His good looks and distinguished air made him the favorite chauffeur of many silly and impressionable women. The country's entrance into the war sent him into a training camp. When he supposed himself to be on the verge of sailing for France he married a girl who was deeply infatuated with him, but for whom he cared little. The morning following the wedding Luther woke

A NEW WORLD HISTORY

John Buchan, British Historian, Presents a New Acc the Nations of the World as Affected by the Great War

BY THOMAS F. FORD

THE NATIONS OF TODAY. A New History of the World. Six Volumes. British America, the Baltic and Caucasian Republic, France, Japan, Jugo-Slavia and Italy. Edited by John Buchan. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

This new "history of the world" differs from the ordinary world history in being a series of volumes, each devoted to one country or group of countries. It was called into being as a result of the changing of national boundaries and the erecting of new states by the treaties following the war. But it is far more than an account of the territorial changes due to the war. Each volume contains, in addition to a historical account of the country treated, statistical and other information as to the geographical features, data on the social and political conditions as well as on the resources and industries and up-to-date information on the naval and military situation. The fact that no old material is included, but that accurate and thorough research has been made in regard to present conditions and the results carefully tabulated and recorded, makes the work a veritable encyclopedia of the nations of today as they are in this year of 1924.

The editor in charge is John Buchan, which speaks volumes for the work. He has called to his aid 120 contributors, all specialists in their respective fields. Among these the following may be mentioned: Maj.-Gen. Lord Edward Gleicher, director of the British (political) intelligence bureau in 1917-18; Hilaire Belloc; Prof. John Commons of the University of Wisconsin; Prof. R. N. Gabriel of Yale University; H. M. Fleming of Harvard University; Maj.-Gen. F. E. Maurice, director of military operations of the imperial general staff; Sir William Meyer, high commissioner for India, London; Prof. P. M. Miliukov, former Russian Foreign Minister; H. Pirrie-Gordon, foreign editor of the London Times; Sir Rennell Rodd, late British Ambassador to Rome; Charles Seymour of Yale University; Andre Tardieu, representative of France at the Peace Conference; Dr. Moritz Bonn, member of the German peace delegation; Dr. Karl Hildebrand of Stockholm University; and Dr. Marion L. Newbegin, editor of the Royal Scottish Geographical Magazine.

The six volumes are those on British Baltic and Caucasian France, Japan, Jugo- Italy. One of special this reviewer is that on Jugo- one of the newest of nations of the world.

The liberation of the dominion of the Turk may be said to be the first step in the attainment of cherished ambition on the this sturdy little nation, that of uniting to herself groups outside her limits, a Jugo-Slav state. The Jugo-Slav state is made tially of a union of that group of Balkan formerly included within the tro-Hungarian Empire. when we speak of Jugo- mean Serbia, Montenegro, Herzegovina, Croatia, Dalmatia.

When we consider that ago the Jugo-Slavs were under six different and that their deputies teen different parliaments and provincial, it is facts to affirm that, ent rather unsatisfactory tions, the Jugo-Slavs cause for national drive out the Turk has age-old ambition. This accomplished. With this attained a national unity now accepted among the

WHAT IS THE SENATE'S POWER?
Can It Punish Witnesses?
In the investigation which the United States Senate has been conducting respecting leases of oil lands of the Government the Senators have assumed, the witnesses have assumed, the newspapers have assumed, and apparently the lawyers have assumed that the Senate has power to call anybody before it at pleasure and punish him for refusing to testify and to give up his private papers.
Has it such power under the Constitution? All the power either House of Congress possesses is conferred upon it by the Constitution. It possesses no power beyond what is granted.
Does the Constitution give either House of Congress judicial power?
Is the proceeding now going on for the Legislative Department or the Judicial Department of the Government?
In a book which should be in the hands of every youth in the grammar grades, the high schools and the colleges, this subject is explained simply, briefly, yet fully, at page 24, note 29. The volume contains 187 notes in explanation of the origin and application of that many of the leading clauses of the Constitution.
Says The Los Angeles Times:
"As the presentation of the subject proceeds, one gigantic conception, too often overlooked by the American, stands out, namely, that the Constitution is the bulwark of the freedom and the happiness of the individual, protecting him from oppression at the hands of his government or of his fellow-citizens."
In the name of intelligence in government take steps to have this book put in the schools of your children.

Here is an event that would justify extreme statements. It is an offering that will make more widespread than ever the well known (and altogether well founded) saying "Robinson's for Yard Goods."

This is an under-price event. The low prices are (and of good right should be) the extraordinary feature of this great day (Monday—remember). Nevertheless, were these the regular prices too much could hardly be said about this collection of beautiful fabrics. For beautiful they are as only really fine fabrics can be, in patterns, in shades and in textures.

A Pre-Easter Event In Silks, Woolens, Linings, Exceptionally Priced

This Event Will Be Held on Monday, Monday the Seventh

Silks

Crepe de Chine, of a splendid quality, is this taking a low Monday pricing. 40 inches wide, besides white, cream, black and ivory, the colors are maize, orchid, lilac, turquoise, peach, apple, coral, jade, apricot, orange and amethyst.

Priced at $2.65 a yard.

Crepe Failline, a dull finish crepe, is much in vogue for frocks this spring. And women who appreciate the finer silks at the lower pricing will be quick to take advantage of this Monday pricing. In white, jacot, tan, mineral (gray), bobolink, silver, almond, negre, midnight, navy, vert vert (green), empire and black.

In 40-inch width, priced at $4.45.

Cat's Purr, of lustrous finish is 40 inches wide. Its colors are navy, autumn, zinc, mahogany, sand, bobolink, rose, boy blue, taupe, toast, sandalwood, African and langlen.

And its price is only $4.25.

Radium Silk, of a heavy quality is 40 inches wide. For frocks, for linings, for lingerie, Radium has become a favored silk.

At $2.45 a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

Linings

Wash Silks for sports frocks and shirtings. In narrow stripes, as well as broken stripes, in such shades as roseleaf, tan, poudre, champagne and pistache, 28-in. wide, priced at $1.95.

Jacquard Crepe Faille of silk and cotton is more substantial than all silk. And therefore makes a splendid lining. In navy, black, Lanvin, tan, brown, gray, cocoa and white. Priced remarkably low at $1.95.

Brocaded Satin, may convert itself just as readily into a covering for a down quilt as a coat lining. In self color or two tone effect, it is 36 inches wide. Priced very low at $1.95.

Domestic Pongee is always desirable for different purposes, — frocks, lingerie, blouses or linings. But it is particularly desirable when so low priced as one will find it at Robinson's, Monday.

In tan, pongee, flesh, white and black, it is 95c a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

Woolens

Wool Crepes are just the right weight to meet the demands of spring days. They are 44 inches wide and their colors embrace all the lighter and darker shades of spring. And a price which compels immediate attention at $1.65.

Wool Jersey has developed something new in the way of a fancy self colored stripe. Also, it may be chosen in plain colors.

A wide variety of colors, in 52-inch and 54-inch at this low price, of $2.45.

Broadcloth, of the luster, close cut nap and twilled back which one would ordinarily find much higher priced. Some of the newer colors are lanvin green, Kelly green, artichoke, copen, sand and black.

54 inches wide, at $3.65.

Black Marvella, of first quality. Genuine Marvella, which has passed a rigid test to assure a fine finish and a uniformity of surface, is this which Robinson's offer to Monday shoppers at such remarkably low price. Black Marvella, 54-inch and 56-inch width, will take for one day only, a price which seems incredibly low, at $10.65 a yard.

THREE ARTS AFFAIR CHARMS

Annual Program of Music, Drama and Painting Given in Club Home Delicately Balanced

Music vied with drama and painting to enthrall the interest of Angelenos in the annual program presented by student members of the Three Arts Club at the clubhouse on Magnolia avenue last Sunday. If the disciples of any of the three arts carried off honors it was so only in the preference of individuals—the program was delicately balanced and each number well interpreted, while the work of the art students was grouped in a most interesting exhibit.

At this annual student program, the most vital event of the year, the associate members and their guests learn just what is done by the artistically ambitious girls for whom the club was created. Mrs. William N. Goodwin, the president, although she was in La Jolla with Mr. Goodwin, who is ill, sent a message of love to "her girls." Mrs. J. Wells-Smith presided.

IN FOURTH YEAR

The Three Arts Club, in existence only three years, has been forced to seek a larger place than the first home on West Washington street. It is quartered at 987 Magnolia street, where there are dormitory accommodations for thirty girls and home privileges for the nonresident members, who combined make up the 125-odd student membership. Miss Tyce, recently arrived from St. Louis, presides.

Due to the ambitions and efforts of the club sponsors, Los Angeles' Three Arts Club occupies as eminent a place in the cultural development of the city as do the Three Arts Clubs of New York and Chicago. Patterned after similar organizations abroad, the club affords a real home and a broadening atmosphere for art students.

Associated with Mrs. Goodwin during this three-year period as her co-officers and directors are Mmes. J. Wells Smith, Godfdey Holtherhoff, Jr., William A. Edwards, A. B. MacBeth, Oscar Rogers, H. E. Insley, Chauncey Clarke, Wesley Clark, George Fishburn, Benjamin Goldman, James Moore, Dan Murphy, H. D. Schroeder, Robert Wagner, Kenneth B. Wallace, Julia Bracken Wendt, W. T. Wyatt and the Misses Margaret Goetz, Marie Rose Mullen and Mary Workman. The large associate membership is divided into professional, regular, sustaining, patron or patroness and life. Miss Loren Barton is chairman of the student members.

ONE CLUB PROGRAM

Throughout the year the members are responsible with their committee chairmen in securing artists and lecturers for the programs and teas, but once a year they themselves are the participants. Mrs. Evelyn Bruner is chairman of the music section. Miss Nina Garrett has the drama section, and Mrs. Winthrop Page heads the art section. This year's program opened with a piano group by Lillian Puthuff, who played Balakirev's adaptation of Glinka's "The Lark" and Chopin's "Ecossaises." Georgie Williams, violinist, played Viewtemps's "Ballade et Polonaise," and gave a combined whistling and violin rendition of "Cavaliera Rusticana." Miss Ruth Thompson was her accompanist.

DANCES AND SONGS

Serita Desnukes, Valencia Renard and Marjorie Hallowma did an East Indian dance, "Atsarasses." Nina Garrett, who is on the staff of the Denishawn School, interpreted another phase of the East Indian symbolic dances in the "Tunisienne."

Two of the most interesting numbers were piano selections by Elizabeth Phillips, "Etude" and "Meditation," which she herself composed.

Maude Frances Shenberg sang "Chi Vuo la Zingarella," in Old Italian (1741-1816,) and La Forge's "Song of the Open." Elsie Manion offered a second violin group, the Schubert-Wilhelmj "Ave Marie" and Bazzini's "Goblin Dance." Willa Wagner had the third piano group. She played MacDowell's "Concert Etude" and "Widmung" (Schuman-Liszt.)

ONE-ACT COMEDY

The program's climax was Christopher Morley's one-act domestic comedy, "Thursday Evening." Vesta Mills, who played the part of the bride's mother, also directed the play. The other members of the cast were Andor de Loos, Serena Wood and Grace Adams.

The work of the art students also absorbed attention. In addition to the many varied and delightful exhibits of the students was a group of water colors shown by Joris Dahl, whose work has had the praise of Mrs. Randall Hutchinson. Even the Filipino houseboy had some pastels prominently displayed! The students exhibiting were Jeanice Barnett, Juanita Black, Alice Craise, Carolyn Gill, Inez Grover, Marion Kadish, Mary Lightfoot, Katherine Mortimer, Mrs. Clarence Runkle, Eleanor Simpson, Lela Weir, Rebecca White and Welhelmina Zanetti.

CLUB BRIEFS

Miss Clare McNee, regent of Sequoia Chapter of the San Francisco D.A.R., will be the guest of honor at the meeting of Cabrillo Chapter at the home of Mrs. George R. Bent, 2205 South Gramercy Place, Wednesday afternoon.

Young musical proteges of the American Musical Optimists will benefit by the Tuesday evening performance at the Criterion Theater, when tickets sold by the organization will yield a percentage to the scholarship loan fund through the courtesy of the theater management. The fund is used to rent or buy pianos, to help pay living expenses and to obtain proper tuition. The work of the club is sponsored by Mrs. Cecil Frankel, vice-president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, and Mrs. Mellen Chamberlain.

Mrs. John Lyons, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs in America, will arrive in Los Angeles on the 15th inst. on her way to the State convention. She will be at the head of the receiving line at the Lyric Club theater party at the Criterion Thursday evening. Mrs. Walter Goodfellow, president of the club, Mrs. L. E. Behymer, Mrs. Cecil Frankel, Mrs. Sherman Hoyt and Miss Jessica Lawrence will act as hostesses in the theater lobby.

Prof. R. T Thompson formerly of Harvard University, now assistant professor of English at the University of Southern California, will address the Verse Writers of Southern California on the 14th inst. at the Women's University Club. Prof. Thompson will also judge the manuscripts submitted. The meeting of the club last Monday evening was a welcome home to the Verse Writers' lately returned president, Ben F. Field, and his wife, Rowena Field.

In a proposed measure to exempt mothers from jury duty, the New York Legislature will have an opportunity to recognize the importance of motherhood. Mrs. Alice MacDougall, head of a business and mother of three grown children, and a prominent antisuffragist, expresses herself forcefully as follows: "Having the vote we must accept every obligation and be willing to sacrifice our convenience, our housekeeping, and our business just as men have had to do for years. But we must not sacrifice our children. Any woman who has small children must be within their call at any hour, not locked in a jury room. Many classes of men are exempt—physicians, newspaper men and firemen. None of these is serving society more urgently than the woman who is rearing her children."

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Glendale on April 8 at 7:30 p.m., at the Harvard-street High School will hear a talk on Boulder dam by Ralph Criswell of the Los Angeles City Council. The program is open to the public. Dr. Jessie A. Russell, president of the club, will preside.

The nursery committee of the Women's Auxiliary to the Goodwill Industries, Mrs. R. Von KleinSmid president, on Tuesday decided to open the new nursery on the 14th inst. The public is invited to inspect the nursery on the 14th, 15th and 16th insts. Babies of working mothers will be scientifically cared for during the time of the mothers' employment.

Mrs. Zoe Ballard Fuller, member of the Los Angeles Ebell Club, is enjoying several weeks' stay in Chicago. Mrs. Fuller gave several programs of literary interpretations through the West before reaching Chicago.

NEW HISTORY OF THE WORLD

nations with every prospect of increase in power, wealth and national prestige.

The process, slow and often circuitous, through which this ambition has been achieved, with its acceleration and final consummation as a result of the war, is told in this volume. The history of Serbia and of Montenegro and of the other parts of the new nation is considered separately. Then come chapters on the Jugo-Slav movement and on Jugo-Slavia to date. A section is devoted to the economics and resources of the new state. Valuable appendices give data on the question of national defense. Bibliographies, maps and a good index are included.

The volume dealing with the Baltic and Caucasian states includes Finland, the Baltic provinces, Lithuania, the Caucasias, Georgia and Azerbaijan. The relations of these states with Russia, of which they were a part, before the war, is dealt with and the writers are optimistic as to the future of these peoples. They hold that they have the essentials for self-government within their past experience and that they are a sturdy and resourceful stock from which the world has much to expect.

Under the title "British America" we get a very full account of much of Britain's colonial possessions, particularly Canada and Newfoundland.

Andre Tardieu well represents France in the series, explaining to all who are fair-minded enough to give him a hearing. His cry is for reparations for the past and security for the future. France, being in the position of the toad beneath the harrow, knows whereof she speaks, even though more fortunate nations may scoff or laugh. Following Tardieu's opening shot, experts set forth the various phases of France's condition today.

Dr. Joseph H. Longford writes the volume on Japan, setting forth the history, social life, religion and present condition of that country in what seems to be a fair and able way.

Much interest attaches to the volume on Italy, where political turmoil has been constantly threatening. The organization and activity of the Fascisti are both carefully followed and the problems that confront Mussolini are clearly outlined.

Other volumes of this series will shortly be issued. It is a set of books that all readers desiring to know the world of today will find essential.

A GROUP OF RECENT BOOKS

to hear the newsboys calling the news of the armistice and he "looked at his bride with a feeling so near hate that it appalled him."

Returning to civilian life, where he found work hard to obtain, he eventually became a private chauffeur. The daughter of his rich employer, by way of a psychological experiment, led the handsome and susceptible Luther into a desperate clandestine flirtation, alternately encouraging and repulsing him until he was half insane. The tragedy in which the story ends is made inevitable.

THE SAFETY PIN. By J. S. Fletcher. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.

Just about the time that we were denouncing Mr. Fletcher's "latest" thriller as about of the potency of a tale of a tea party told by a tongue-tied girl in the original Zulu, the prolific English author of twentieth-century Nick Carters slips under the wire with a volume in which heart palpitations are timed at about one to the minute. As a result, apologies and all that are in order.

For some years now Mr. Fletcher has been producing a thriller with about every change of the seasons. I don't know how many he has to his credit now, but it must be twenty or more. With rare exceptions, they are all good. The one here considered is perhaps not one of his best, but it is better than the average.

A young barrister contemplates the world from his window and thanks whatever gods there may be that he had not gone in for police court work. Then a lovely girl hurries into his office and at once he is in the thick of crime. Of course there is a mystery, and in unraveling it Mr. Fletcher not only keeps one's attention but also proves that things are not what they seem by fastening the crime on a person who comes into the story only as a lay figure.

The love interest might be described as summer heat and something more.

THY NEIGHBOR'S WIFE. By Liam O'Flaherty. Boni & Liveright, New York.

Now that Seumas O'Kelly is dead and Daniel Corkery preserves an aloof silence, let us present Mr. Liam O'Flaherty as the authentic voice of Ireland.

Unless we are misinformed, "Thy Neighbor's Wife" is Mr. O'Flaherty's first novel. He has taken the Aran Islands of Synge as his setting for a concentrated drama of a young curate who finds himself still in love with the girl who had been his sweetheart before his ordination. His temptations and trials came to a quick climax during the week in which the action passes, but he comes unscathed through the fires of allure and the book closes on a high religious note.

Unless you know the Aran Isles, half of the beauty of this book, in which age-old things move to an ancient rhythm, will be lost to you. But the tale told is as old as the ages, but here new, told by one who is a master of psychology, and who, himself, must have resisted temptation in the long ago.

HALF GODS. By Lynn Montross. The George H. Doran Company, New York.

A first novel. Mr. Montross has taken three months in the life of a quiet ordinary American family and shown the members of that family as they are. He has neither forced them nor rearranged them dramatically. His purpose is simply to hold them up for our inspection.

It so happens that the most striking thing about the Leepers is a condition typical of millions of Americans—they have lost the faith of their fathers and they have nothing to take its place. The book reverses Emerson's line, for the gods have gone, and half-gods are all the Leepers—their friends, associates and neighbors, likewise—have.

The novel does really raise the question: Has the Church a place on Main street? In most American towns, the church building still stands on Main street—but the question is whether it really belongs there any longer. The lodge, the motion-picture theaters, the woman's club, this, that and the other enterprise and business, which Americans will worship in the absence of any other god, all combine to raise the question.

Lynn Montross, at one time a student of the University of Nebraska, and his wife, Lois Seyster Montross, were joint authors of a first book, "Town and Gown," a series of portraits of faculty and undergraduates in any college, U.S.A. Published a year ago, "Town and Gown" attracted wide attention throughout the country.

PLANTED
FIG GARDENS
NO PAYMENTS DOWN

J. J. C. Forkner, president of the J. C. Forkner Fig Gardens, Inc., hereby offers to 100 families a most remarkable proposition.

I have planted and sold 10,000 acres of fig gardens; I have spent $6,000,000 during the last ten years developing these fig gardens, there are 100 happy families living on these home acres now. I want 100 more families.

I have decided to sell 1000 acres of planted fig gardens, just coming into bearing, on the following conditions:

You may move upon 5 or 10 acres of my fig gardens, just coming into bearing, adjoining the city of Fresno, and build a home and farm the land; will give you ten years in which to pay.

THE CROPS WILL PAY FOR THE LAND

Roads, ditches, highways, electric lines are built; townsites on land being developed; best water right in State; canning factory already built, church, schools and $5,000,000 lumber mill, employing 1000 men, on tract; only 15 minutes from center of Fresno.

I live on the land and have developed these fig gardens myself; any man who moves upon these fig gardens cannot fail, for I will help him to success.

For details, see my personal representative, or, if you cannot personally call, write to address below, telling frankly what your circumstances are and what you plan to do.

A 5-minute interview with our personal representative will relieve you of any doubt as to the sincerity of our proposition.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY
Is there in California right now a young woman between the ages of 19 and 30, good character, fairly well educated, musically inclined, who has considerable cash and is willing to assist a Canadian Colonel and Author in first marketing his novel, titled "BROTHERS AND SISTERS ALL," then in dramatizing it and a scenario made therefrom which will be the greatest historical and intense love picture of the twentieth century, scenes dating back into the making of Spain: who the Spaniards are and whence they came? There is a legend which "Mariana" recites, to the effect that the prial laws of Spain were written in verse and framed 6000 years before the beginning of time. The young lady who qualifies for this opportunity will be introduced into the Courts and to some of the Royalty of Europe. She will be favored of Society and will be starred in the picture. There are minor parts open also, so answer, anyway. Mothers who have ambition for the Daughter, and you who have cash means and would like to see your dear one on the right road, please answer. Your confidence will be respected. Address O, box 40, TIMES OFFICE.

WAR BREWING IN SOUTH AMERICA

Argentina and Brazil Have Chips on Shoulders

Tension Tightens as French Provide Munitions

Other Nations Seen Drawn Into Conflict

BY J. W. WHITE

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]
[Copyright, 1924, by the Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, April 5.—Although it will be denied by embassies, foreign offices and other officials a soft pedalers the French military mission in Brazil has done its work so thoroughly that Argentina and Brazil now are in the position of two boys with chips on their shoulders who have glared at each other so steadily that the slightest move by either will start a mix-up.

If this appears to be the exaggerated viewpoint of yellow journalism it may be stated that the undercurrent of unrest and suspicion between the two countries is so apparent to some trained diplomats that the Uruguayan Minister of Foreign Affairs either already had or will in the immediate future ask the American State Department for a statement as to its position in the event of a war between Brazil and Argentina.

IN POSITION LIKE BELGIUM

Uruguay was formed as a buffer State between Brazil and Argentina and it is anxious to know if the United States will guarantee its neutrality in case of a war between Brazil and Argentina or whether it must look to European nations to prevent its becoming the Belgium of South America. The source of information concerning Uruguay's inquiry of Washington is unimpeachable.

Argentina has been forced to enter the armament race by the unrelenting anti-Argentina propaganda of the French military mission in Brazil which has been using this means of persuading the Brazilians that they are in danger of an Argentine invasion. This war scare in Brazil enables the French government to sell to Brazil at a huge profit American artillery, machine guns and other munitions left in France at the end of the World War.

This, coupled with the presence of an American naval mission in Brazil leaves Argentina no other choice than to try to keep pace with Brazil and be ready for eventualities since Argentina is the only other country against whom Brazil could be arming. Argentina therefore has sent a military mission to Europe to purchase armaments with $100,000,000 voted in a secret session of Congress a few months ago.

There are other evidences that Argentina does not intend to be taken unawares. Trained observers state that the situation is rapidly approaching a tension where it would require only an unimportant incident on either side to start a conflict that would eventually involve almost all of South America as it is considered certain that Chile and Peru would join opposite sides.

BOLIVIA ALSO INVOLVED

Bolivia undoubtedly would join whichever of the Allies offered the best guarantee of its regaining an outlet to the Pacific Ocean as the spoils of war.

The Argentine government probably will announce within a few days that it is contracting with H. Foster Bain, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, to come to Argentina to make a geological and technical survey of the country in assisting the government to decide whether there is possibility of establishing a steel industry.

The Argentine government particularly wants to know if there is any coking, coal or iron ore in the country with which to establish a steel industry. Since German and Belgian structural iron and steel can be imported cheaper than it could be made locally under present freight rates observers who are watching the armament race think that Argentina's desire to establish a steel industry just now has closer connection with the armament race than it has with the housing shortage.

RELIEF SUPPLY MEN FAVORED BY JAPAN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) April 5.—Some of the exporters of relief supplies for Japan have made small fortunes here in the past few weeks over their fellow-shippers who were not as wise as they were. The report was circulated that the tariff would go up on all imports into Japan after March 31. This was accepted by many exporters, who ceased to make commitments to cover further consignments to the ports of Japan. Some of the dealers, however, were not satisfied, and continued to ship on the basis that any contracts for commodities made up to noon, March 31, would be honored in Japan. These brokerage houses have made commitments that will results in grain and flour moving to Japan under the exempt clauses until the end of April, and the Japanese government has decided to honor their agreements.

QUARANTINE DELAYS MULES AND HORSES

HANFORD, April 5.—The effects of the foot-and-mouth disease quarantine of live-stock shipments by rail and highway are numerous. A recent arrival in this county, Frank Johnson of Los Angeles, who purchased the Butler Ranch at Willow Grove, east of Hanford, has two carloads of horses and mules, in transit to this city, tied up indefinitely in the railroad yards at Bakersfield.

BRIDE GETS BURRO RIDE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

JEROME (Ariz.) April 5.—A new hazing stunt has been evolved by the nurses of the United Verde hospital staff. One of their number, Delia Kettle, slipped to Prescott with Lloyd Lavers, to whom she was married by Superior Judge Lamson. When the fact was learned, on their return, the bride was seized by her former associates and paraded down the main street mounted on a burro.

THIEF REALIZES MISTAKE NOW

Women Run Him Down After They Watch Him Steal Shawl

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, April 5. Sneak thieves may steal a gentleman's belongings and escape but let him try it with a woman. A Porterville woman chased a Mexican five miles to make him return a shawl he had stolen. While in Delano Mrs. A. A. Jenkins and daughter, Mrs. Harry Quinn, of Porterville, saw a Mexican "lift" Mrs. Jenkins's shawl from their car, climb into his own machine and drive away. They rushed forth to their auto and gave chase toward Bakersfield. The Mexican turned off onto what was apparently a side road with the ladies in hot pursuit, but it proved to be a driveway and the thief was bottled up. He clambered out of his machine with the shawl in hand and rushing toward the Jenkins car, exclaimed: "Some one lost shawl. Found it."

ADMITTED SWINDLER SENTENCED TO TERM

JUDGE CENSURES CONFESSED EMBEZZLER IN NUMEROUS BANK CRIMES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

UKIAH, April 5.—De Lafayette Flint, confessed swindler, today was sentenced to serve from one to ten years in Folsom State penitentiary for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Judge H. L. Preston in passing judgment, censored Flint for his several confessed crimes and recommended that authorities of New Haven, Ct., be on hand when Flint's sentence expires, that he may face charges in the eastern State of swindling three banks of about $15,000.

Before the court, Flint stated that he had started on a criminal career by taking less than $1000 from two children left to his guardianship. The children now are grown, he said. He also told of obtaining about $1000 from a bank in Ontario, Cal., and $2000 with an additional credit of $5000 from a bank in Willets, Cal. It was on complaint of the latter bank that he was arrested.

GOOD CHANCE SEEN FOR SAVING VESSEL

ADMIRAL RODMAN AGROUND OFF CANADIAN SHORE, IS HIGH AND DRY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

PRINCE RUPERT (B. C.) April 5.—Chances of saving the steamer Admiral Rodman, which ran ashore yesterday at Point Calvert, two and a half miles south of Gibson Island, B. C., on the mainland side of Grenville Channel, were considered good, according to a report brought back to this port by a salvaging company boat on returning today.

The Admiral Rodman, operated by the Pacific Steamship Company, will be aided by the Canadian salvage steamer Nanaook, Monday, officials stated.

The vessel was high and dry at low tide and Capt. Samuel Glass reported there were several holes in her hull on the starboard side which he thought could be patched sufficiently to permit the craft to be refloated. The weather was said to be moderating. The ship, at present, was in a sheltered position.

DISINTEGRATION WIDENS IN CHINA

Many Cry for Fundamental Revolution

Idealism Falls Easy Prey to Money Grabbing

Moral Code of Family Only Crime Check

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]
[Copyright, 1924, Public Ledger.]

SHANGHAI, April 5.—"What China needs is a strong man."

That was the talk in China after the establishment of the revolution.

"What China needs is a fundamental revolution."

That is the new talk spreading in both Chinese and foreign circles. Behind it is the effect of a fundamental revolution in Russia, the desperate lack of program on the part of Chinese officials and citizens in determining the future of their country and the impotence of foreign policy in Peking.

The old Tung Men Hui, the political organization which effected the revolution of 1911, in co-operation with the secret societies, was for a fundamental reorganization of China. They despaired of anything good coming out of the Manchus, who had grown weak and degenerative in the Dragon Court at Peking. They had met a fate similar to that of the Mongols, the descendants of the sturdy Ghengis Khan, Kublai Khan and the Tartar hordes of the North. They had come to love the exquisite silks and fine teas of China, rather than the rough life of a conquering people in camp.

When the Chinese revolutionists got to Peking, their intentions were to establish a model government. But the atmosphere of the place, the practice of corruption, tempted most of them into sinking back into a fairly easy life—a broken official today paying his last dollar for a good job and becoming a millionaire within two years.

As the young men go up to the capital with the best of intentions, agile, fresh, idealistic, stern in principle—so they come out of it within a few years, fat, clever, sleek moneygrabbers, the pawns of the older officials, rapacious in building up family treasures, rich beyond their wildest dreams.

There are exceptions, mostly outside of Peking, but some even within the walls of that mysterious, colorful city on the edge of a desert. The exceptions are now laboring for a fundamental revolution. They are seeking a way for cutting themselves out of the tentacles more firm in their grip than the most powerful of sea monsters.

Foreigners have a way of throwing a scare into Chinese by constantly demanding of their own governments some form of foreign intervention in China. The Chinese then have to support whatever government there is in Peking, no matter how evil, for to the Chinese mind the worst kind of Chinese government is preferable to foreign domination, particularly foreign military domination.

POLITICIANS DIVERT ISSUES

The wiliest of the politicians in Peking know this. They constantly divert the issues of the day from themselves to foreign affairs. When they were making Tsao Kun president, they started an anti-Japanese boycott. Now they are belaboring the foreigners for not carrying to fulfilment the provisions of the Washington Conference treaties.

Meanwhile, the forces of disintegration are working rapidly. Bandits, secret societies, underlings in the officialdom, petty officers in the army, educators, students, merchants and the landed gentry are working in every direction to achieve an impasse during which all governmental control in China will break down—except that curious organism which has kept China together for forty centuries, the family.

There is probably less violence in China than in any country in the world. There are fewer crimes of violence. There is less theft, less meanness in dealings between man and man. Yet, there is no law, no fear of the arm of the law. The explanation is that in China, the pater familias is still a master, the family is still in control, the necessity, stronger than religion, of keeping one's family name sacredly clean keeps men from committing breaches of the moral code, a code deep-rooted in the character of the people, described by Confucius and stronger than any written constitution man has yet devised.

EX-AMBASSADOR DIES

FINDS JOB ONLY TO LOSE LIFE

Needy Man is Killed by First Slingload of Oil Casing

"Broke," but finally finding a job, only to hold it a few minutes before a slingload of oil casing crushed his skull, was the fate of Joe Hathaway, 40 years of age, of Los Angeles Harbor yesterday.

Mr. Hathaway told the foreman of the Republic Supply Company he was without work and suffering. That was Friday. He was given a job, and was preparing to haul his first load of casing to the Lomita fields from Wilmington, when the last slingload of pipe crashed upon him.

He was given emergency treatment at Wilmington and taken to a Long Beach hospital, where he died yesterday noon.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—The liner Kroonland sailed today for New York, via Los Angeles, Panama and Havana, with almost a capacity cargo of 5787 tons and a large passenger list. The cargo was said to be a record this season for a combination freight and passenger vessel. More passengers will be taken on board at Los Angeles.

Three hundred Oakland school teachers were taken over the freighter Lillian Luckenbach at the Howard terminal in Oakland today. The construction of the vessel, her loading and unloading and handling in port and at sea, were explained.

The Garland Line freighter George Allen sailed today for Portland and Port Angeles, where she will discharge a cargo of sulphur from the east coast and load a cargo for the Orient. The George Allen is the sixth vessel of that line to enter the trans-Pacific trade.

SEATTLE, April 5.—Beating her schedule into this port by a full day, the Admiral liner President Madison arrived late today. The vessel carried 520 passengers, 120 Chinese laborers in steerage and a large silk cargo.

Preparatory to being turned over to T. H. G. Brayfield of Hongkong, China, representative of Carmichael & Clark of that city, the steamship Commercial Scout, formerly the German steamship Liebenfels, which has been sold to Carmichael & Clark by Moore & McCormack, was lifted today on the big dry dock at the Todd plant for a thorough survey and possible overhauling.

Bringing down 200 boxes of fresh fish from Southeastern Alaska ports, as well as 1500 tons of copper ore from Cordova, the Alaska Steamship Company's liner Northwestern arrived today and shifted to Tacoma to discharge the ore cargo.

When the steamship Alameda of the Alaska Steamship Company's line departed for Alaska points today, every available berth aboard was taken. The majority of her passengers were Alaska cannery officials and employees en route north to attend the opening of the fish packing plants in southeastern and southwestern territorial points.

VANCOUVER (B. C.) April 5.—The master's certificate of Capt. C. W. Harris of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine steamship Canadian Scottish, was suspended for three months by the marine court of inquiry here today. The Canadian Scottish was stranded when she was leaving Prince Rupert, B. C., March 3, causing damage estimated at $25,000. Capt. J. D. MacPherson, who announced the decision, stated the court would have liked to impose the same penalty on Capt. Alexander Brown, the pilot, but could not because pilotage is noncompulsory in coast waters and therefore the entire responsibility rested on the captain of the vessel.

THREAT ISSUED BY STATE KLAN

Officials Demand Pasadena Reinstate Officers

Pledge Legal Move Unless City Takes Action

Town Torn by Struggle Over Discharged Police

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 5.—Legal action was threatened against the city of Pasadena today by State officers of the Ku Klux Klan if within a short time the seven discharged police officers are not reinstated in the department. This announcement came as a climax to Pasadena's heated war against the hooded organization.

At an executive session of the city directors today, Paul G. Taylor, service officer of the realm of California; J. Roush Bronson, national lecturer for the Klan; and Rev. E. Burger, a retired minister, appeared before the directors and demanded that the seven officers who were discharged by the Chief of Police for being members of the Ku Klux Klan, be returned to their duties without loss of pay. Legal action will be taken by the Klan if this demand is not granted, it was declared.

WON'T BACK DOWN

Following the closed meeting, William W. Wadsworth, chairman of the board of directors, announced that the board has not, and will not grant the demand. He further declared that the whole matter rested with City Manager Koiner, who made the anti-klan ruling now existing in this city.

Gathered at the City Hall during the meeting was a group of klansmen, a number of the discharged police officers, and representatives from various Klans throughout the State. The latter were Rev. Leon L. Meyers, pastor of the First Christian Church of Anaheim; S. L. Scott of the Anaheim order; Rev. E. H. White, pastor of the First Christian Church of El Monte and chaplain of the El Monte Klan; William W. Mather of Sacramento, and others.

Mr. Taylor, the spokesman for the group said that he explained to the Pasadena directors the principals, policies, and teaching of the Ku Klux Klan and demanded that the seven Pasadena officers be reinstated. He further requested that the directors hold no further discriminatory ban against Klan members. He stated that legal action could be taken by the Klan against the city of Pasadena on the grounds that the city was interfering with the rights of American citizens.

CHIEF UNDER FIRE

From reliable sources it was learned today that there is a movement under way by the hooded organization to have Chief of Police Charles H. Kelley, ousted from the local department. Chief Kelley, acting under orders of the city manager has been conducting the investigation and has done the discharging of police officers. New officers are replacing the old ones as soon as they are relieved from duty.

Pasadena is excited over the whole procedure and feeling in the matter is at its highest ebb. It is believed by many that the city's action will cause a great disturbance among Klan organizations throughout the State. Both the city officials and the Klansmen have intimated they will fight to the finish.

SEARCH FOR G. G. GREEN IS FAILURE

Outside Communities Are Now Being Combed; Second Family Tragedy

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, April 5.—Continued search for G. G. Green, oil man and popular Scout executive of this city, who has been missing from his home, 53 North Marion avenue, since Thursday afternoon, has proved futile, it was announced by his family today.

All day yesterday and the night before the police and scores of Boy Scouts combed the dark hollows and gulches in Eaton's Canyon. It was feared he had taken a walk in the foothills and had met with a serious accident.

Today the search led outside the city of Pasadena as it is believed he might have wandered to some near-by suburb or met with foul play at some near-by point. The search is being led by C. A. Wells and Philip Wells, relatives of the missing man.

This is the second tragedy that has visited the Green family in recent years, it was disclosed today. Ernest A. Wells, father of Mrs. Green and a prominent Y.M.C.A. secretary during the World War, became temporarily deranged and committed suicide by hurling himself from a window on the fifth floor of a building.

Mr. Green is well known in Pasadena and has for a long time been an active worker in the Calvary Baptist Church and as a Boy Scout leader. He has been connected with the Union Oil Company for some time. He is 26 years of age, and an ex-service man. Besides his wife he has a 2-year-old daughter.

CITY PLAN EXPERTS TO GET IDEAS

Rancho Santa Fe Will be Visited by Easterners on Way to Los Angeles

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DELMAR, April 5.—In recognition of the endeavor of the Santa Fe Railway interests to create in Southern California the most perfectly planned rural community in America as a demonstration to the entire country of the possibilities of rural life in this region, the delegates to the National City Planning Conference in Los Angeles will spend tomorrow forenoon studying rural community planning at Rancho Santa Fe.

Among the delegates will be some of the most noted city planners in this country, including John Nolen of Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass.; B. H. Saunders, chairman of the Paterson, N. J., Planning Commission; H. J. Marsh, engineer executive of the Buffalo Plan Commission; Alfred Beattman, president of the Ohio City Planning Conference; A. C. Godward, engineer executive of the Minneapolis Plan Commission; Miss E. M. Herlify, secretary of the Boston City Planning Board, and others.

The unique plan of the Santa Fe interests, under which a virgin cattle range is being transformed into a beautiful, self-supporting rural community with all the modern improvements of city life, and in which every building erected, all roads and landscaping and even orchard planting must meet the approval of a staff of noted architectural, landscaping, irrigation, horticultural and soil experts, has made Rancho Santa Fe of great interest to community planners throughout the country, and it is with a view to adapting this plan to other communities that the city planners are coming.

INGLEWOOD BANK WILL OPEN AGAIN

Citizens Savings to Resume Operations Under Banner of Security Trust

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, April 5.—The Citizens Savings Bank of this city, with deposits of approximately $1,000,000, will on Monday re-open its doors with resources of close to a quarter-billion of dollars back of it, as it will on that date become a branch of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles. The institution closes today as the Citizens Savings Bank, closing a successful career of fourteen years, having received its charter in 1910. The capitalization was then only $25,000, and this had subsequently been increased to $100,000, under the able direction of F. A. Zilligitt, who has been the president for the last ten years.

There will be no change in the personnel of the bank, or in its Hyde Park branch. Mr. Zilligitt will be the branch manager, the directors will be an advisory board and the other officers and employees will remain as heretofore.

The great growth of Inglewood and its promising outlook was a large factor in effecting the taking over of the local institution, it was said by Mr. Zilligitt, the Los Angeles concern being impressed with the great possibilities here, while Mr. Zilligitt was inclined to the plan because he believes that greater resources are needed to finance Inglewood's industries.

The same friendly spirit that has characterized the local bank in the past, he declared, will be the policy under the new regime, the same aim of mutual service for the benefit of the community.

LITTLE WINE COSTLY

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN FERNANDO, April 5.—It cost Andrew Menard $300 and a ninety-day jail sentence for having been found with a fruit jar full of wine in his possession. That was the sentence imposed upon him by City Recorder E. H. Schwinger, after the jury before whom the trial was conducted had returned a verdict of guilty. Menard had the liquor in his automobile at the time of his arrest. The extreme penalty resulted from the fact that this was not the prisoner's first appearance before the court on a similar charge.

PREDICTS THAT IN AIR CURE OF FUTURE MEN WILL TAKE TO BALLOONS FOR OZONE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, April 5.—The air cure of the future will be a mile-high air cure, according to Prof. Willis L. Moore, former chief of the United States Weather Bureau. He told Kiwanians here yesterday that the sanatoriums of the future will be high in the air, where the patient will get the tonic effect of a pure ozone through giant dirigibles that will be used.

In the not-distant future man will spend a large part of his time in the air he believes.

"Climate has always affected man," said Prof. Moore. "More people die under the influence of an east wind that a west wind, the west wind is a purer wind. Rome was blotted out because of a climate of enervation. The climate began changing with the beginning of the fifth century."

Men Suspected of Hold-ups in Jail in Venice

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

VENICE, April 5.—James Strong and C. E. Davis asserted to have been identified as hold-up men were arrested by Detectives Burnett and Watson and are being held in the local jail pending investigation. Police believe the two men to be responsible for an Ocean Front hold-up that occurred January 8, last, when their victim, a visitor to the city, was relieved of more than $100 in currency.

Strong is well known in the amusement zone here having been connected with a shooting gallery for some months.

The hold-up was staged, it is said, without a show of guns. One man is asserted to have held the victim while the other relieved him of his money and valuables.

Date of arraignment in Police Judge Frank Willard's court, has not been set.

Pioneer Church Leader Dead at Alhambra Home

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, April 5.—Leaving behind him a record of having attended preaching service, Sunday School exercises and prayer meeting every week for fifty years, Matthew Ulmer, 92 years of age, died this morning at his home, 1804 West Commonwealth avenue. The aged man, although he had been in failing health for two years, attended the dedication ceremonies of the new edifice of the Marengo Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday. He told his son, Henry Ulmer, with whom he had made his home since coming to Alhambra five years ago, that he felt it would be his last opportunity to attend public worship. Returning to his home after the services Sunday he suffered a relapse and grew steadily worse until the end came today.

The funeral will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Marengo Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the deceased had been a member since coming here. Mr. Ulmer was a native of Germany, coming to America in 1854. He settled on a farm near Bloomington, Ill. in 1861, and was one of the pioneers in building the town of Arrowsmith. He was always a stalwart churchman, and was instrumental in the establishment of a Methodist Episcopal Church in Arrowsmith. In 1886 he came to California and settled in Ventura, later going to Los Angeles where he resided for eight years before moving to Alhambra. In addition to his son, Henry, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ernestine U. Anderson of Los Angeles. Mr. Ulmer had been a widower many years.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VENICE, April 5.—The identity of the man who ended his life Thursday on a Pacific Electric car her by swallowing strychine was established this afternoon. The victim is Eugene Karnland, 28 years of age, who lived at 3416 Tallman street, Los Angeles.

The body was identified by Thomas C. Kean, with whom Karnland roomed. Kean stated that Karnland had been despondent for more than a year through the loss of his mother in a traffic accident. He is said to have an uncle at Fresno and a cousin in Los Angeles. The body is at the O. A. Kirkelie mortuary at Ocean Park.

For a time it was believed that Karnland might be Lieut. Ervine Brown, naval paymaster, who disappeared from his ship, leaving a shortage of $120,000 in his accounts.

QUAKER CHURCH TO HAVE PIPE ORGAN

MOUNTAIN, CANYON PTY.
For Sale, Exchange, Wanted

FOR YOUR MOUNTAIN HOME
LAS FLORES CANYON PARK,
LOS ANGELES CO.

With the increasing demand for mountain property near to Los Angeles and easily accessible, it will be a comparatively short time until every bit of available mountain property of this character will have been subdivided into mountain homes, or will be in the hands of wealthy owners who will retain it for their own individual private use. Not many people realize that when mountain property is subdivided in its entirety and when every piece of that subdivision has been sold, every bit of the primitive natural environment will have been lost, as each purchaser clears off all or part of his land and utilizes it to his individual desire, and a checker-board effect will be substituted therefor. There are certainly one hundred people in or about Los Angeles who would deplore such a condition and who desire a nearby, easily accessible mountain home site in a locality retaining permanently in a large degree its primitive appearance and condition. This is the purpose of LAS FLORES CANYON PARK.

Situated at the head of LAS FLORES CANYON and reaching from the ridge on one side to the ridge on the other. LAS FLORES CANYON PARK is complete in itself. One hundred people may select a site of approximately one acre, and when all of the one hundred sites have been selected there will still remain 215 acres of wild, natural mountain park surrounding these one hundred home sites. In order that these 215 acres may remain in a natural native condition, the ownership is vested jointly in the one hundred purchasers of home sites, each of whom will own an one-hundredth undivided interest, thus preventing in any large way disturbing or changing the natural mountain condition.

Each home site of approximately one acre may be selected anywhere on the property, but shall not be used for any but residence purposes, nor be subdivided into smaller parcels. In the course of time, these protective features, retaining the primitive and natural environment from despoliation or change, will make LAS FLORES CANYON PARK one of the most valuable and desirable mountain home sections anywhere adjacent to Los Angeles.

FOREST OF ARDEN, ORANGE CO.

The Forest of Arden is located in Cleveland Forest Reserve, Santiago Canyon, Orange County, California; is 18 miles from Orange, 24 miles from Santa Ana, 9 miles from El Toro, on the Santa Fe Railroad.

Good auto roads lead to "Forest of Arden," either by way of Orange and Santiago Canyon or by San Diego Coast Route Boulevard via Santa Ana, Tustin and El Toro.

This is not a wild, undeveloped mountain or canyon proposition, but is an attractive foothill valley, the development of which commenced over 40 years ago, at the time Madame Modjeska (the famous Shakespearean actress) purchased the ranch. In the center of the Forest of Arden is the Modjeska Inn, open to the public as a place to picnic and to spend the day among the beautiful trees, in a most romantic and historic environment.

It is the intention to confine the restrictions more stringently to the purchaser than to the building to be erected on the property purchased. It is intended to make this an ideal mountain community for desirable people only, and extreme care will be used in selecting the purchasers of this property. The building restriction so far as cost is concerned is very moderate, but no unsightly nor unsanitary structure will be permitted.

Each site is easily accessible without the necessity of climbing over difficult trails, as every one may be reached by automobile. Many desirable locations are now available at $200 and up. Very easy terms may be arranged.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE,
SAN BERNARDINO CO.

Is a little town on the "top of the mountain," located on the famous "Rim o' the World" road, thirteen miles from San Bernardino, where the roads leading to Seeley Flat (Los Angeles Playground), Thousand Pines, Skyland, Squirrel Inn, Pinecrest, Lake Arrowhead and Big Bear. The "Rim o' the World" road is maintained by the Highway Department of the State of California as a part of its highway system and is always in splendid condition any time of the year.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE is located at the top of the grade, and is a community of mountain homes, with conveniences of stores, postoffice, stage station, etc.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE is in the heart of the big pines district with practically every home site covered with magnificent trees, comprising pines, firs, cedars and oaks.

The views from CRESTLINE VILLAGE are magnificent and ever changing. In one direction is the San Bernardino Valley, with its orchards, groves, farms, fields, cities, towns and villages; and beyond the broad Pacific Ocean, and in the far distance Catalina Island is frequently visible. At night time the lights of the homes and cities in the valley below form a picture beyond description. In the opposite direction, looking over and beyond ranges of mountains is the great Mojave Desert. This view is awe-inspiring in its ruggedness and vastness.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE is not a camp, a resort or a picnic place, but is a desirable attractive community of mountain homes adjacent to and surrounding a business district such as one would find in any little town or village, making it entirely unnecessary for anyone to be dependent on outside sources for the usual household supplies.

The roads through CRESTLINE VILLAGE are all complete, and each site offered for sale fronts on a road open to travel; not a narrow trail, but a wide auto road of easy travel, so that all material for the construction of your mountain home may be delivered on your site.

A drive along these roadways through CRESTLINE VILLAGE, all of which lead from and to the "RIM O' THE WORLD" road, is an interesting trip in itself.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE has a water supply of which we are justly proud. Water mains are laid in front of each site offered for sale, and water is supplied under a pressure which is adequate to lift it to the highest point on the entire property, thereby affording unusual pressure over the greater part of CRESTLINE VILLAGE. This water supply is furnished by a Mutual Water Company in which each lot owner owns a proportionate interest, and the water supply is furnished at actual cost to the company. A small annual charge is paid by the owner of each parcel to cover the repairs, upkeep and operation of the Mutual Company.

CRESTLINE VILLAGE home sites are offered at extremely low prices considering the advantages of location, accessibility, roads and water supply. The prices of these lots range from $100 up, and this does not mean that only a few lots are offered at $100, but there is at all times a choice of one hundred lots available at $100 each. Other lots with special advantages are offered at proportionately higher prices, but in all cases are the prices most reasonable. For the reason that you buy direct from the owners of the property, very easy terms of payment may be arranged for your accommodation and convenience.

SKYLAND

is a portion of CRESTLINE VILLAGE, which has been set aside for the construction of homes representing a larger cost and under restrictions which do not prevail in CRESTLINE VILLAGE.

The same conditions as to roads and water supply exist, but the lots are of larger size and a great majority of them command views which are unobtainable in other portions of CRESTLINE VILLAGE. There is only a limited number of these lots in Skyland, and the prices range from $250 to $2500, depending on the location and area. The higher-priced parcels contain several acres and command unobstructable views.

SKYLAND is reasonably near to the business district of CRESTLINE VILLAGE but not near enough to be directly connected with it, and SKYLAND is intended exclusively for residence purposes.

Free booklets, maps, prices, terms and full information regarding any or all of the above will be sent upon application to CHAS. S. MANN, 807 Loew State Bldg., Seventh & Broadway, Los Angeles.

MORTGAGES—
Trust Deeds

7% SAFE BETTER THAN 12% RISK.

We have assigned to the Union Bank & Trust Co. of Los Angeles first mortgages and trust deeds as security for the payment of notes we issue.

The mortgages and trust deeds assigned as security are first liens, not exceeding 50% of a conservative valuation, on homes occupied by owners or city income property. It is an absolute fact that safety for the note holder is the first consideration.

If your money is drawing 4% and you lose the interest by drawing before an interest period, is it not better to have it drawing 7% and in case it is wanted at any time get full amount of interest?

If you have money out on mortgage and desire cash, it is necessary to discount it. Our note will be cashed in any month of three years, with interest in full. The notes are issued in amounts of $100 or more.

THE part of Mexico in which our mining co. is located is the richest mining country on the globe. Recently, the president of our company picked up fourteen gold, silver, lead, copper and zinc mines for us at his own price. The assays from them are astounding. One assay shows 75,300 kilos of silver and 67,290 kilos of gold per ton, from our San Francisco mine, and from our Ricardito mine assays show 72,900 kilos silver and 62,140 kilos gold. Our Esmeralda mine assay shows 1,650 kilos silver and 37% copper. Our company has eighteen valuable mining properties, and not one of them is for sale. We are not mining brokers, but native mine owners here continually ask us to assist them in disposing of their mining property. We can secure A No. 1 mining properties for you at a fraction of their worth and will assist you in proving titles, as well as securing engineer's reports, and will be glad to co-operate with you. Address F, box 163, TIMES OFFICE.

THEIR "VISITORS" CLOCK

"Is that clock right?" asked the caller who had outstayed his welcome.

His hostess yawned.

"Oh, no," she said. "That's the clock we always call 'the visitor.'"

The obdurate one sat down again.

"'The visitor!'" he remarked. "What a curious name to give o'clock!"

His hostess ventured an explanation.

"You see," she said, "we call it that because we can never make it go!"

And even then he failed to see the point.—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

He Saw Her

Hubby: Well, dear, I suppose you were right about there being burglars in the house last night.

Wifey: Why?

Hubby: Because the money I had in my pocket is gone.

Wifey: Well, why didn't you get up and shoot the burglar?

Hubby: If I had, I'd have been a widower this morning.—[Prairie Farmer.

TO TEST DOHENY'S LEASE

Oil Man Refuses ot Accept New Permit in Lieu of Thirty-Year Contract With Harbor Board

E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, has rejected the city's proposition that the Pan-American Petroleum Company surrender its thirty-year permit for the use of seven acres of municipal pier No. 1 at Los Angeles Harbor and accept in lieu of the permit a strictly revocable permit which can be canceled by the city upon a year's notice to the company by the municipality.

This stand of Mr. Doheny was made public yesterday by City Attorney Stephens following a conference on Friday afternoon attended by Mr. Doheny, his attorney, former Judge Charles Wellborn, City Attorney Stephens, Assistant City Attorney Leach and Attorney J. A. Anderson, representing the Municipal League.

CITY SEEKS CHANGE

Since the legality of the thirty-year permit has been questioned, negotiations have been held with Mr. Doheny's representatives by the city's attorneys in an effort to secure the oil company's assent to surrendering the questioned permit and accepting a revocable permit.

Mr. Doheny as chief officer and stockholder of the oil company said a final "No" to this at Friday's conferences and instructed his attorneys to battle in the courts in an effort to secure a decision upholding the legality of a thirty-year permit.

The oil company received this permit from the Board of Harbor Commissioners last June and since that time has inclosed the property with a $250,000 fire wall to protect the other properties on the pier, and has expended in all more than $1,000,000 in pipe lines to the property, in oil storage tanks and for a wharf which is now being built for the loading of tank steamers. Even those who are opposing the thirty-year feature of the permit admit that the transaction was a profitable one for the city and that the company's oil loading station there will bring in large revenues to the city.

ONLY LEGAL ISSUE

The only question at issue is a legal one, as to whether or not the harbor board's thirty-year lease is anything more than a revocable permit, and whether or not the city is able legally to grant anything more than a revocable permit for the use of this municipal pier.

At Friday's conference Mr. Doheny took the position that the thirty-year permit is legal and binding and that the oil company is now established there and can remain there for thirty years under the lease. He declined to accept a permit which can be revoked upon a year's notice.

City Attorney Stephens will now ask the City Council and the Board of Harbor Commissioners to adopt resolutions declaring that the city has given the oil company a revocable permit and the city will stand on this. These resolutions will bring the controversy to a head, and make possible the application by the city, the oil company and the Municipal League to the Superior Court for a decision as to just what the rights of the city and of the oil company are under the permit which has been granted.

WOMEN GIVE SUPPORT TO TRASH DRIVE

Momentum Added to Work of Cleaning Up County and City

Added impetus to the clean-up drive inaugurated by the Board of Supervisors recently to bring about the elimination of trash and other unsightly debris from property along county highways and railroad lines resulted at a meeting of the California local board of women's clubs yesterday.

A resolution adopted by the Supervisors was indorsed by the women's organization and it was planned to carry on a personal campaign in all sections of the county to make the clean-up effective.

The resolution reads as follows:

Whereas: The attractiveness and beauty of Los Angeles county is one of our most important assets; and

Whereas: Rubbish, old papers, tin cans and other litter along our highways, railway lines and in our cities and towns detracts seriously from the beauty of our county; and

Whereas: This is of especial seriousness in view of the fact that 1924 will be a year in which many conventions will be held in Los Angeles county, in particular the Biennial Conference of Federated Women's Clubs and the National Conference on City Planning; therefore be it

Resolved: That this Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county calls especial attention to the necessity for cleaning up all unsightly litter and maintaining a clean county of all possible attractiveness to our visitors and of satisfaction and pleasure to ourselves; and be it further

Resolved: That this board urges picnickers to refrain from scattering litter; newsboys to keep their stands clean of scattered papers; and all others to exercise care in disposing of rubbish; and be it further

Resolved: That all residents of the county be asked to co-operate by keeping their yards and vacant lots and the parkways and gutters adjacent to their premises clean of rubbish and weeds and as attractive as possible; and be it further

Resolved: That this board urges the governing bodies of all cities in the county, all city planning commissions, chambers of commerce, improvement associations, realty boards, clubs, churches, lodges, and all other organizations to carry out the purposes of this resolution by publicity and action; and be it further

Resolved: That all newspapers, magazines and motion picture producers and exhibitors be urged to give this movement for a clean county the fullest possible publicity.

INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION WORK BEGUN

Permanent Organization of Los Angeles-to-the-Harbor Body is Effected

Joining the campaign of the Greater Los Angeles Association to keep the "White spot white," there has been formed during the past week a permanent organization south of Slauson avenue known as the Los Angeles-to-the-Harbor Association with J. C. Smith, president of the Manchester-Moneta State Bank as its president. The association has been functioning since November as a temporary association with Lemuel J. Coburn, president of the Pioneer-Pacific Worsted Mills, which is about to be built in this district, as its president.

The territory encompassed in the association's activities, lies south of Slauson and extends to the ocean between the Los Angeles River and Redondo Road. Here, it is believed, will be a great industrial area of Los Angeles because of its strategic position near the harbor and beyond the reach of the downtown congestion. The new association expects to follow up its publicity campaign already begun to boost this territory for industries. Activities will be centered outside of this in the building of more wide boulevards to the ocean before the territory is built up in order to prevent expensive widening later on. It is hoped to develop the extension of Broadway to the sea; Vermont avenue, Western avenue; South Park avenue; Central avenue and Compton avenue. Cross-town arteries, the association believes, should be built through are Slauson avenue, Florence avenue, Manchester avenue, Ninety-ninth street and One Hundred and Fourteenth street.

New officers of the association elected at a meeting at the headquarters at 7822 Moneta avenue are: J. C. Smith, president; L. D. McGahan, editor of Southwest Topics, vice-president; J. A. McCahill, manufacturer, vice-president; Thomas D. McHale, hardware merchant, treasurer; directors are, C. W. Clegg, F. M. Shepard, J. C. Belton of Athens-on-the-Hill; Henry Clark of Palos Verdes; C. H. Lewis, E. J. Rosch, H. P. Kegley, Oscar Lampman of Gardena; A. B. Gettelman, G. M. Petty and Peebles Shoaff of Watts. S. W. Cunningham has been elected executive secretary.

OFFICIAL SAYS TANKER WAS NEVER IN PERIL

COALINGA'S PLIGHT REPORT DENIED; COMING TO PORT UNDER OWN POWER

That the Union Oil Company's tanker Coalinga, which early yesterday morning was reported to be in a dangerous condition some 2000 miles south of Los Angeles Harbor, has never been in serious trouble and is proceeding to harbor on its own power and with another Union Oil vessel standing by, was stated officially yesterday by William Groundwater, manager of transportation for the corporation.

"The facts of the case are these," said Groundwater. "At 9 a.m. on Thursday, when the Coalinga was some 600 miles north of Balboa, the piston rod on one cylinder became bent and the crew was unable to remove it. This crippled one cylinder and the vessel resumed its journey on two cylinders and at eight knots an hour. Our steamer, Deroche, was within 100 miles of the Coalinga at the time of the accident and immediately proceeded to the vessel, both ships then starting on to Los Angeles Harbor.

"The Coalinga and her crew have at no time been in danger. The vessel was at all times able to proceed under her own power and is doing so now. The weather at the time of the accident also was reported ideal."

Phonograph records with an invitation to attend his party were recently sent to friends by a New York man.

GREATER CITY BODY GROWING

Los Angeles Association is Expanding Rapidly

Industrial Leaders Join in Extensive Program

Kleiber Motor Company to Spend $1,000,000 Here

The campaign to place Los Angeles on a proper industrial foundation is gaining momentum daily.

Harry H. Merrick, president of the Greater Los Angeles Association, which is heading the movement to "Keep the White Spot White," declared yesterday that memberships are pouring into the association's offices at 206 Hill-street Building in ever increasing numbers.

Virtually every one of the larger organizations in the city has enrolled itself in the movement and is aiding in every way to give the necessary industrial balance to the city.

In the background of the association is the Industrial Finance Corporation which is being formed with a revolving fund of more than $50,000,000. This will be utilized to purchase bonds of manufacturers who desire either to expand their present facilities, install branches in Greater Los Angeles or establish manufacturing and industrial plants in this district.

LIKE NEW YORK

The fund will be administered on a plan similar to that employed by the great industrial financing corporations of the East. It will function to provide ways and means for new industries and bonds purchased by this organization will in turn be sold in the eastern markets and the money again utilized in the same way.

Mr. Merrick pointed out that the same situation exists in Greater Los Angeles today that existed in Greater New York fifteen or sixteen years ago. Like New York, Los Angeles has drawn a shifting population from all over the world but it has not developed sufficiently industrially to keep pace with the great population. Countless families are attracted to this city by the climatic and living conditions, only to find in a great many cases that there is not a large field for the worker here.

"The success of this movement," Mr. Merrick declared, "means a greater population. The goal has been set at 3,000,000 by 1930. Today the city is growing at the rate of 300,000 or more a year and the future growth will be augmented by the establishment of factories and industries. It is evident from the success so far attained in this drive that Los Angeles has at last awakened to her responsibilities. Los Angeles long ago has sold itself to the world and it is now time that we engaged in selling Los Angeles to itself.

WINS SUPPORT

"The Greater Los Angeles Association has received indorsement from every broad-gauged business man in this community. The appeal for membership is for everybody and the investment which is made in the foundation of a greater Los Angeles, by joining the Greater Los Angeles Association, is an investment in the greatest metropolis in the world.

"This is a city which says, 'It can be done,' and every movement for the betterment of Los Angeles which has ever been launched, has been carried to a successful conclusion. It is that by reason of a great united effort in the entire community, the 'White spot will be kept white.'"

PLANT TO EXPAND

More than $1,000,000 will be spent in Los Angeles by the Kleiber Motor Truck Company soon in expanding its local plant, it has been learned by A. G. Arnoll, manager of the Industrial Department of the Chamber of Commerce, which is conducting a Balanced Prosperity campaign in an effort to keep Los Angeles's industrial expansion at an even pace with its growth in population.

The notice of the expansion of the plant which manufactures Kleiber trucks at Eleventh and San Pedro streets, was communicated to Mr. Arnoll by Paul Kleiber, head of the company, who announced that a three-story factory will be erected here soon for the manufacture of touring cars.

The company's investment here already represents between $500,000 and $600,000 and covers an area of two and a half acres on San Pedro street between Tenth and Eleventh streets. The expansion of the local plant will give employment to hundreds of persons, and with the proposed improvements completed it will turn out at least 2000 cars annually, adding between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 annually to the total manufactured output of the city.

FOREST IN HAWAII TO BE LOGGED

Mahogany Company at Honolulu Prepares to Increase Output

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HONOLULU (T. H.) April 5.—Exploitation of the forests of koa and ohia trees on the slopes of Mount Mauna Loa, Island of Hawaii, commonly known here as the "Big Island" of the Hawaiian group, is to be carried on on a more extensive scale than ever before, according to information received here. It is stated that the Hawaiian Mahogany Company, Ltd., of Honolulu, has increased its holdings of these woods and that its logging operations are to be much enlarged.

The mill of the company is situated on the Kona side of Hawaii. On account of the dense growth of tree ferns and other tropical vegetation, much difficulty is experience in cutting and dragging the logs to the mill. The rough lumber is shipped to Honolulu where the company has a furniture and finishing plant. The koa wood is manufactured into furniture and the ohia is used for flooring. All lumber is dried for six months to two years, but the old method of curing is to be replaced by a modern kiln which is to be erected at once. The furniture factory of the Hawaiian Mahogany Company, Ltd., was started only a few weeks ago. All kinds of furniture, including mah jongg tables, are turned out. Koa has the appearance of mahogany and is called Hawaiian mahogany, ohia resembles black walnut, except that it is harder. It is said to be superior to oak for flooring.

C. Q. Yee Hop is president of the Hawaiian Mahogany Company, Ltd. F. W. Fuller is manager of the company's furniture and flooring plant in Honolulu, and G. H. Evans is superintendent of the mill at Kona. In the logging operations upon the mountain slope caterpillar tractors are used for dragging logs to the most accessible places where they are loaded upon trucks and hauled to the mill.

SAN DIEGO, April 5.—Mrs. Mae Drew Clark, divorced E. Drew Clark, was released from the County Jail this recommendation by the District Attorney's office.

She has been in custody for nearly six months, having been co-defendant with Clark on forgery charges in connection with the dispotion of part of the estate of George E. Schick, for whose murder Clark was found guilty in the first degree. Clark was sentenced Monday to life imprisonment.

In addition to the forgery charge, Mrs. Clark was also held on a charge of conspiring to commit a fraud against the Schick estate. By the action of the District-Attorney's office today, she is freed on her own recognizance on both charges, and her bond of $8500 was returned.

With the conviction of Clark for the murder of Schick, it is believed the forgery charges against Mrs. Clark will never be pressed. [EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Mrs. Eleanor V. V. Brewster, Eugene V. Brewster, wealthy publisher of moving-picture filed suit in Supreme Court today for $200,000 damages Palmer, motion-picture actress, asserting she alienated Mr. affections.

The suit comes as an anti-climax to the report of Brewster's romance with the southern girl. Recently Brewster admitted that Miss Palmer had left him only a few days before she was to have moved into a $250,000 house at Morristown, N. J.

REFUSED DIVORCE

Mrs. Brewster's refusal to grant him a divorce was the reason given by the publisher for his parting with Miss Palmer.

In papers filed by Davis, Auerbach and Cornell of 24 Nassau street, counsel for Mrs. Brewster, she sets forth that she was married to Brewster December 7, 1916 in Stamford, Conn. They had one child, Virgil, born February 20, 1920.

She and Brewster lived happily, Mrs. Brewster says, until 1920. She asserts she helped him in his business ventures and was largely instrumental in his success.

About Oct. 10, 1921, Mrs. Brewster charges Miss Palmer planned to get Brewster's financial support, "affection and consort." She declares her husband and Miss Palmer have passed as man and wife since December, 1920.

Swedish Scientist Discerns Legendary Fimbul in Extremely Cold Season

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

[Copyright, 1924, Public Ledger.]

STOCKHOLM, April 5.—Is this year's winter, which for bitterness and snow has been unequaled in Northern Europe years, an omen of the approach of the so-called fimbul win sied in the Edda, "when all winds will bring snow, the prevail against the clouds, and three winters will come in summer between," and "when two such winters shall be great wars throughout the world?"

[Edda is the title given to two very remarkable collections of ancient Icelandic literature. Some of the manuscripts contained in the first, or prose, Edda, date from the beginning of the fourteenth century. The fimbul winter, according to one Norse myth, is the terrible winter, three years long, which is to precede the end of the world.]

Prof. Rutger Sernander, head of a committee of Swedish scientists studying plant life in connection with Sweden's climatic development, believes Edda's words refer perhaps to the ice age, which intervened between the bronze and iron eras, and has assembled proofs for anticipating the beginning of a new ice age, historically in the future.

Prof. Sernander says thousand years of the were preceded by a period by an extraordinarily mate. Climatically, a riod has just passed over and Northern Europe.

Note Floating in Ocean Forty Years Is Found

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, April 5.—A sealed bottle of odd shape, containing a note which, there is reason to believe, has been floating in the Atlantic Ocean or elsewhere for forty-two years, was picked up on the sand at Rockaway Beach yesterday by Frank Pick, real estate man. The note, written in pencil, reads: "This bottle is cast into the sea at Kingstown, County Dublin, Ireland, on the fourth of December, 1882, by Elizabeth Kinch, Pave Lane, Kingstown, age 18. I hope some nice boy returns it soon."

Pick saw the bottle rolling in the surf close to shore and seized it. The cork was covered with sealing wax which he was unable to dislodge. Through the glass he could see a white piece of paper so he broke the bottle and extracted the note, which he took to the ship news office at the Battery.

The paper is in perfect condition as the bottle was hermetically sealed.

If Elizabeth Kinch is alive she is 60 years of age and her message has been more than two score years in reaching a reader. Mr. Pick, who might be said to be "nice," is a "boy" of middle-age and married.

SCIENTISTS PLAN FINE CHURCH EDIFICE

Structure Will be Most Distinctive of Its Kind in Country

Photographs of Architects' Study

These interesting views of the proposed Ninth Church of Christ, Scientist, were taken from models constructed in the studios of Meyer & Holler, architects and engineers. Picture at top shows full view of church while others show close-ups of side elevations.

GROUND was broken last week for a new church edifice of the Ninth Church of Christ, Scientist, to be erected at the intersection of Fifth street and Normandie avenue, under the supervision of Meyer & Holler, architects, engineers and builders. The corner has a frontage of 270 feet on Normandie avenue and 150 feet on Fifth street.

Main portals of the church open upon Normandie avenue, giving entry to the auditorium and an auxiliary auditorium to be used as a Sunday-school. In case of emergency it will give auxiliary seating to the auditorium. The main auditorium has a seating capacity of 1250 and the Sunday-school auditorium has a seating capacity of 800.

The Sunday-school room is divided into forty-one loges for the assembling of classes and has provision for thirty-nine additional classes. In addition to these rooms there will be the necessary appointments, such as readers' rooms, ushers' rooms, checkrooms, a board room and secretary's office.

CAREFULLY STUDIED

Planning and architectural design of the building have been carefully studied by Meyer & Holler, who have spent months of research in collecting data for the design of the building. The architecture is based on the Domestic Tudor period of England and follows closely the precedent of well-known buildings of that period such as Hampton Court, Compton Wynyates and Ightan Mote House and other buildings of the period.

Travelers will recognize many features such as door-ways, crenelated parapets, oriel windows, buttresses and English leaded sash which recall the buildings mentioned above. A very rare and authoritative work on the domestic architecture of the Tudor period compiled by Garner Stratton was specially imported from England to be used as inspiration in the study of this building.

Exterior building materials are red brick with stone trimmings and English clay tile roof. Three portals of the main entrance are large Gothic arches and these, as well as the minor doorways, contain beautifully paneled and carved doors, each one of which is distinctive and based on some English precedent.

FACT AND COMMENT

Now that plans for the practical application of a principle that has become generally recognized—namely, that Los Angeles, in order to keep her prosperity, must look more carefully to the industrial phase of her growth—are making phenomenal progress, the outlook for the future becomes indeed encouraging. The enthusiasm which has marked the campaign of the newly formed Greater Los Angeles Association for funds which are to be devoted to financing industrial projects is an indication not only

DRIVE ON LOS ANGELES BY UNIONS STARTS SOON

Gompers's Campaign to Put City on Closed Shop Basis on in Next Two Weeks

BY F. J. ZEEHANDELAAR,
Secretary Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association

Within the next two weeks international organizers of every craft in the building trades will have arrived here to spend the major part of the secret fund of $500,000 appropriated by the American Federation of Labor to make Los Angeles a unionized city. The campaign of organization will then be decided upon at the joint meeting of the executive committee, comprising the international organizers as well as the local organizers and the presidents and secretaries of every local union, so that the attack upon the open shop will be made simultaneously in all branches of the building industry.

It is expected that the campaign will last well into the summer and when as much as possible of the campaign fund has been squandered here and it has been shown that the attempt to put union shackles on the independent workmen has proven a failure, the organizers will then move to San Francisco to clean up whatever money is left of the campaign fund.

Thus far the local organizers have been sorely disappointed in their skirmish and the arrival of the international organizers has been anxiously awaited to take charge of their hopeless situation here.

Abe Muir, who made such a horrible fiasco in the strike of the carpenters last May, has endeavored for several months to unionize the carpenters with a promise of an increase in wages to a minimum of $10 per day and absolute closed-shop conditions on all carpenter work. This inducement was the same as he held out a year ago when only 175 men walked out at his call.

MASS MEETINGS FAIL

Lately he conceived the idea of holding mass meetings and the first of the series was held on March 25 and the result showed the absolute futility of inducing contented and happy wage earners to be inveigled in his scheme. On that occasion the auditorium of the Labor Temple was selected for the event and in his own mind, he was so sure of the crowds that would listen to his propaganda that he had engaged two extra halls in that building for overflow meetings. The small attendance, however, must have convinced him that the carpenters think for themselves, and not only were the two extra halls unused, but the auditorium itself only contained less than 500 and that audience was made up of union men who came to see the show, and only a few independent workmen were induced to join the union.

When it is taken into consideration that the cost of living since July, 1920, has decreased 19.9 per

J. Y. Blaikie is Appointed Sales Manager for Sites in Mountains

Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of Frank Meline Company as exclusive sales representatives for homesites at Lake Arrowhead Woods. This announcement comes as the culmination of a series of negotiations extending over a period of several months, according to Harry Lee Martin, manging director of the Arrowhead Lake Company, owners of the property.

Sixteenth Convention of City Planners to be Held at Ambassador This Week

The sixteenth National City Planning Conference to which the city of Los Angeles, city of Pasadena, city of Long Beach, county of Los Angeles, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Los Angeles Realty Board are hosts, will open its formal session at the Ambassador tomorrow morning with registration of delegates from all over the country. The City Planning commissioners and other delegates from the East were joined yesterday by delegates from San Diego and reached Los Angeles this morning. A large attendance also is registering from Northern California, Oregon and Washington.

The Los Angeles City Planning Convention is the first ever held west of Kansas City, and it comes to Los Angeles largely as a result of the rapid progress made locally in city and regional planning. All sessions of the conference are open to the public

INSTITUTE MEETING

The National City Planning Institute, the technical body on city planning which usually meets concurrently with the conference, opens its session this afternoon at the Ambassador Hotel.

Mayor George E. Cryer of Los Angeles and R. F. McClellan, Chairman of the County Board of supervisors, will formally welcome the city planners at a luncheon Monday noon at the Ambassador Hotel. This event will be preceded by the usual registration of local and visiting delegates and by the first discussion of the sessions led by John Nolen, eminent landscape architect and city planner of Cambridge, Mass. The subject of this opening meeting will be, "The Importance of Citizens' Cimmittees in Securing Public Support for a City Planning Program."

HARBOR DEVELOPMENT

The afternoon session, beginning at 2:00 p.m. will be devoted to a discussion of harbor terminals by C. J. Colden, president of the Los Angeles Harbor Commission. Discussion will follow by M. M. O'Shaughnessy, City Engineer of San Francisco, and E. P. Goodrich of New York, the engineer who originally designed the Los Angeles Harbor. The evening session at 8:30 will be devoted to the annual address by George B. Ford of New York City, president of the national conference whose subject will deal with actual accomplishments in city planning during the past year.

Local organizations, notably the Chamber of Commerce, Realty Board, Southern California chapter of American Institute of Architects, City Planning Association and American Society of Civil Engineers, are planning to attend in large numbers due to the popular character of the subjects under discussion.

CITY OWNERSHIP HIT BY HANSON

Municipally Owned Property Increases Taxes

Control of Public Utility is Efficiency Loss

Spread of Plan Attributable to Politicians

BY OLE HANSON

[This article on municipal ownership was published in a recent issue of the Journal of Electricity.—Ed.]

What do I think of municipal ownership? Such ideas as I have are probably no different than those of thousands of other business men who have a grain of common sense. Theoretically, municipal ownership is absolutely right. So, too, are the League of Nations and prohibition. Practically—well, they have their drawbacks.

No one can argue against the theory of municipal ownership. Interest rates for municipal bonds are less; they are tax exempt; there is a feeling that in all municipal bond issues the city is back of the securities. Municipally owned utilities pay no taxes. They can obtain franchises at no cost. Condemnation proceedings for them are a simple matter. Run properly, municipal enterprises should be able to sell their product cheaper than private companies run for profit.

But do they do this? In most cases, I do not think so. The reasons are obvious.

In the first place, municipal properties are immediately removed from the tax roll, thus increasing the burden upon the taxpayer in general. Every taxpayer shoulders a heavier burden. So, too, indirectly, does every citizen, whether or not he is benefited by municipal ownership of that particular city-operated enterprise. The purchasing power of every dollar he spends for food, clothes, rent and entertainment is reduced by the fractional sum necessary to make up the deficit in the public treasury caused by the loss to the city of the taxes formerly paid by the private company.

The loss of efficiency in the operating staff resulting from municipal ownership is a well recognized phenomenon. Private companies will pay for brains, and brains are one of the chief requisites for the successful operation of a business as technical and intricate as a public utility. The brains can be Republican or Democratic, so far as the public utility is concerned, just so the knowledge and performance are there. Municipal enterprises often will pay a higher rate than the current market price for hands, as evidenced by the support given them by labor. Municipal or government ownership is synonymous with more jobs, more pay, less work. They will not pay, however, for brains. I have seen cities with a $20,000,000 street-car system, municipally owned, refuse to pay more than $5000 a year for its head! Ridiculous, of course, but remember that salaries are fixed in municipalities not on account of what a man can earn, but on what the public thinks is a fair wage.

In the development and construction of public works, contractors are notoriously delinquent. They depend upon the municipality to change their contract and not to enforce its penalties. Few, if any municipal utility projects are ever constructed within the original estimates. Political promises are made, an undertaking started and from that day on, the cry is for "money, money, money." "Another million and the job will be completed," is the plea. That million is voted, and another, and still more. Usually such an alarming total is built up that the public refuses to vote additional funds and the municipal project is left high in the air. This has happened in more than one instance.

Every man's job in a private company depends upon his making good. Either make good or leave, is the doctrine. This may seem crude but it very efficacious. In a municipality the job often depends on political control, influence or votes. Because of this, municipal enterprises are usually overmanned. There are more men than jobs. Two job-seekers are placed on the pay roll when one could do the work. There is a woeful lack of efficiency. The public pays the bill.

The public itself does not understand technical matters. The voters as a mass are more likely to listen to the oratorical spouting of a politician than the hard facts of a business man. In the furore before a municipal election, municipal business cannot be kept out of politics. We have had many demonstrations of the utter futility of mixing business and politics. Like oil and water, they do not go together.

The politician's business is a business of holding office. He is on the job from two to four years. What would you think of a private company that changed managers that often? The politician has no personal responsibility. His constituents—the voters—are notoriously lax taskmasters. In order to hold office he often sacrifices the vital interests of the municipality for his personal political gain.

The cause for the spread of municipal ownership is largely attributable to the selfish desires of these same politicians who see in the control of utilities an opportunity for more power. They are aided by certain misguided theorists who actually believe that it will work. Another factor in the present situation is the fact that the public has not yet recovered from the domineering acts of some of the public utility companies of forty years ago. What is needed is a stronger public conviction of the truth in the statement, "more business in government and less government in business."

TWO HOTELS PURCHASED

M. A. Samuel, hotel and business man of San Francisco, has purchased the furniture and business of the Huntington Hotel at Eighth and Main streets, and has secured a new lease for ten years at a gross rental of approximately $600,000. Mr. Samuel has already engaged several firms to change the lobby and when completed it will be one of the most attractive lobbies in the city, costing in excess of $8000 for improvements.

The Eastman Investment Company has purchased the Parkway Hotel Building and ground located at 682 South Coronado street, for a consideration of approximately $200,000. The property has a seventy-foot frontage on Coronado street and is improved with a ninety-room four-story brick building.

Sydney W. Smith has purchased the furniture and business of the Parkway Hotel and has taken a lease for fifteen years at a gross rental exceeding $200,000. Parties in both transactions were represented by E. J. Hardeback of the firm of Cason-Whilton & Co., local hotel brokers.

FACT AND COMMENT

of the wide acceptance of the belief that the city must be built upon a firm industrial foundation, but it is also evidence that the old-time civic spirit, which has been so potent a factor in the city's growth, is still in a flourishing and healthy condition.

The business, commercial and industrial interests of the city cannot afford to do otherwise than give full and ungrudging support to the plan, which has the indorsement of men with long years of experience in business affairs and in community building. The project as outlined at the initial luncheon a little over a week ago, seems to be the most comprehensive and thorough yet advanced for the advancement of the industrial interests of Los Angeles.

An immense capital will be provided and the funds of the association will be available to industries in need of working capital. Operated strictly on a business basis, the interests not only of the city and the city's industries but of the investor will be safeguarded. With such capital for industrial expansion available, Los Angeles will have a tremendous advantage over other cities of the Pacific Coast.

The project, as outlined, will constitute a form of insurance for the city; insurance against business and financial depression; against unemployment and its attendant evils. And as such it is worth the careful consideration of every resident of the city, for the individuals are few and favored who would not be affected by a period of depression.

Any such depression would, in all probability, be felt first by the realty men of the city, for their prosperity is probably more closely linked with the prosperity of the community as a whole than any other line of business. The realty men, therefore, should be among the first to give their unqualified support and assistance to the Greater Los Angeles Association, for the association is undertaking a work from which they will derive immediate and lasting benefit.

No Cause for Pride

In the support of another community enterprise, the All Year Club, which has thoroughly demonstrated its usefulness to the city, the realty men seem to have been somewhat remiss. For more than a year the All Year Club has been devoting its efforts to bringing new settlers to Los Angeles, and these efforts have been attended by a marked degree of success. From the efforts of the All Year Club the realty men, again, have been the first to benefit, since for every new arrival a dwelling place, temporary or permanent, must be provided.

Apparently, however, the great body of realty brokers of the city has been the last to recognize the value of this work; at least, such would be the conclusion to be drawn from the lack of interest the real estate men have shown in the club's activities, and the very limited financial assistance they have given to the club.

A communication addressed to The Times, and signed by a real estate man who heads one of the largest organizations of the kind of the city, calls attention to this fact in rather pointed terms. "To my way of thinking," he says, "their subscriptions are entirely inadequate. Out of nineteen members of the board of governors of the Los Angeles Realty Board, I am informed that just five have subscribed. I find that some of the most prominent real estate men in town, whom you will find in all public assemblies, conspicuous in this subscription list by their absence."

Certainly that is plain language—and it must be rather surprising language to those who have formed the opinion that in every community undertaking, the realty men of the city are the first to pledge their assistance. There are some who are always among the first to pledge their assistance, but that is as far as they ever go. There is a small group of silent workers who pledge their assistance with less noise, but who give of their time and money unstintingly. This group is represented by the five in the Realty Board who are on the subscription list.

In proportion to the membership of the Realty Board, the number of subscribers among its executives is exceedingly small, if that same proportion exists throughout the great body of real estate men operating in Los Angeles, the situation is not one of which they can be proud.

The work of the All Year Club is not an experiment. Its value to the city and to the business interests of the city—and first of all to the realty brokers—has been well demonstrated in recent months, and if the realty men continue in their failure to recognize the value of this work, they are indeed lacking in business acumen.

trusses and paneled beams, its large expanse of wall surface which in turn is paneled and decorated with carved ornaments, its large arched openings and leaded-glass windows, this auditorium will doubtless be one of the most charming on the Pacific Coast.

Acoustics of this room have been carefully studied and pronounced perfect by acoustic experts. The space over the rostrum has been reserved for a large organ, and the organ grille is highly carved, ornate and beautiful.

Remaining rooms and appointments of the building have likewise been carefully studied and are in keeping with the character of the period. It is believed that the building when completed will be recognized as one of the most beautiful and distinctive church structures in the United States.

SPECIAL TRAIN LEAVES IN MAY

Realty Men to Gather for Big Convention

Nashville Board Plans Large Attending Body

About Fifty Local Men Plan to be Present

Southern California's special train to the seventeenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Washington, D. C. to be conducted from June 3 to 6 will leave May 29 and will travel directly to the capital, according to plans of those in charge from various realty organizations.

C. C. C. Tatum, Pacific Coast vice-president of the national association, will leave Chicago today after attending a meeting of the officers and directors of the organization.

A second Pacific Coast special is projected with Washington and Oregon real estate men as its nucleus. The Texas boards will head another convention. Delegates from a number of States will plan to connect with the "Presidential special" from Kansas City, bringing President H. R. Ennis, who will be joined by past President L. F. Eppich of Denver, and the Denver delegation.

Florida representatives have arranged for a special train to leave Jacksonville June 1. An electric sign with the legend "Florida Realtors' Special" will be attached to the rear of the train. The Miami delegation is expected to number fifty.

The Chattanooga, Tennessee Real Estate Exchange plans to entertain several hundreds of convention-going real estate men en route. A special train will be made up in Chattanooga for delegates from the South who will be concentrated there on the way to Washington. The Nashville board plans the biggest convention delegation of its history.

Two special cars will be needed to carry the New Haven (Conn.) delegation, it has been announced. Chicago delegates plan to leave for the convention May 31, visiting Gettysburg and Harper's Ferry on the way, with time on their schedule for seeing Washington a day or two in advance of the convention sessions.

Formation of an automobile caravan to scatter news about Louisiana along the miles from New Orleans to Washington is now under discussion by the New Orleans Real Estate Agents' Association and the Louisiana Real Estate Association.

Indications point to an attendance of between forty and fifty persons from the Los Angeles Realty Board, according to W. L. Brent, president.

Council Passes Bill to Develop Flower Street

The City Council last Monday passed an ordinance of intention for the opening and widening of Flower street to a ninety-foot street from Washington to Figueroa street at Thirty-eighth street, Mayor Cryer signed the document Tuesday. The petitions which were filed for the opening of the street carried a large majority of the owners on Flower street, so there is nothing to prevent now the early opening of the street.

Until the recent opening of Hill street, there were only three streets, Main, Grand and Figueroa, which entered the business district and extended south of Adams street. The opening of Hill street has alleviated much of the congestion on the streets leading to the south. The opening of Flower street is expected to afford further relief to traffic.

The passing of the ordinance of intention will prevent any further buildings being erected within the the lines of the new street. The actual physical opening of the street probably will be accomplished within eighteen months.

Apartment Is Sold to Local Woman Buyer

An apartment-house transaction recently completed through the Frank Meline Company is the sale of the Venelea Apartments at 1823 North Vine street. The property was sold to Elsie T. Ornstein through the income and property department, for L. S. McDonough.

Sales price of the property, amounting to $100,000, includes complete furnishings. The house contains twenty-two apartments, a spacious lobby on the ground floor in addition to a large basement.

PAVING OF MELROSE PROVIDES NEW ARTERY

Owing to its logical position as a main east-and-west artery of traffic, the completion of widening and paving of Melrose avenue between Vermont and Western avenues, is an important improvement, inasmuch as it offers a new thoroughfare to the fast-developing districts south and southwest of Hollywood. Melrose avenue is now widened and paved from Hoover west through Vermont, Western, Larchmont, Highland, La Brea and Fairfax streets and thence to the outskirts of Sherman.

Increase in property values is seen in the proposed extension of Melrose avenue east from Hoover to Sunset Boulevard. This project, sponsored by the Melrose Avenue Community Association and Virgil Avenue Improvement Association, will provide a more direct route to the beach cities.

PLAN LARGE HOTEL

Plans for a large hostelry directly across from the Pickford-Fairbank studios are being seriously considered, according to rumors in hotel circles. Frank Case, owner of the Hotel Algonquin in New York, is said to be looking for a suitable location in Hollywood as a twin sister to the eastern structure. Douglas Fairbanks is said to be one of the local backers.

Energy required to boil away a kettle of water could lift a ten-story building 50 feet into the air.

Wilshire Home for Bachelors of Los Angeles

Preliminary Sketch of Clubhouse

Plans are being prepared by Fleming & Williams, designers, for a new home for the Wilshire Bachelors' Club to be built in the Westlake Park district. Capt. A. H. Mitchell, Gordon A. Durfee and Jack Golderer of the building committee state that a site will be selected within a few days. The structure will contain clubrooms and bachelor apartments, and will cost $150,000.

Beverly Hills Residence Is Sold to May

The outstanding real estate deal during the last week at Beverly Hills was the sale of the E. R. Wood home at 713 Canon Drive to Tom May, manager of the Hamburger Department Store, for a cash consideration of $300,000. This is the largest residential sale made in the history of this city.

The property occupies an entire city block and was built several years ago as the winter home of Mr. Wood, a Canadian capitalist. The sale was made by the Beverly Hills Realty Company.

First distinctive life boat was designed by Lionel Lukin, an English coach builder in 1785.

Fraternal Day is Celebrated in New Hall

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

DINUBA, April 5.—Fraternal Day was celebrated here today with an all-day program of interesting events in honor of the dedication of the new fraternal hall and city hall.

This building, constructed at a cost of $50,000 is thoroughly modern in every respect. Friend & Kimzie, Dinuba architects, were the designers and Graham & Son of this city erected it.

With brick as a medium of construction, an artistic and pleasing plan was followed which not only promises a solution for fraternal needs of the city, but is a decided addition to handsome buildings of the business district. It contains a large and small hall for fraternal assemblies, commodious anterooms and wating rooms. There are five business rooms on the ground floor. The largest on the corner will be occupied by an automobile supply house, and two of the smaller rooms by a poultry and feed supply store.

The Fraternal Hall Association is a stock company composed of Charles C. Rice, Odd Fellows' Halls Association; E. Barris, I. O. O. F. Lodge; J. G. Hyman, Knights of Pythias; J. S. Turner, Woodmen of the World; W. H. Warburton, Modern Woodmen of America; J. B. Patterson, El Modello Rebekah Lodge, and J. H. LaRue, Grange.

The Most Pitiful Human Being in the World is the One Who Has Lost Faith

We have never lost our faith.

Just the other day a friend insisted that we could'nt interest you in HIGHLAND HILLS homesites thru display advertising in the daily papers. We fought back for we believe we can. We still believe that if we have something fine with great big honest values we can sell it by telling you about it in the daily papers.

We know you can't buy as large homesites for the same money we are asking in HIGHLAND HILLS anywhere in Southern California. We know HIGHLAND HILLS is absolutely the finest of hillside subdivisions—easily accessible—with a supreme view of the city, valley and sea, at less cost than fifty foot lots on the flat.

Our faith is not weakened if you don't buy today. All we ask is that you come and see HIGHLAND HILLS. Look it over. You be the judge.

HUGE HOSTELRY CONTEMPLATED

Orange to Get First Large Hotel Building

Structure to be Fireproof and Up-to-Date

Syndicate Will Spend Big Sum in Project

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, April 5.—Furthering plans for the construction of a $500,000 hotel in Orange, a committee recently appointed to handle details of the enterprise today tentatively decided on a number of important features to be embraced in the new hostelry, a site for which was recently purchased by a syndicate of local men.

At a meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms this week the committee entered into an informal discussion of plans for the proposed structure, resulting in the definite conclusion that the hostelry will be four stories high, absolutely fireproof, arranged to contain approximately seventy rooms equipped with modern conveniences. About thirty-five of the rooms will be for transient trade while the remainder will consist of apartments.

The building, constructed along skyscraper lines, will represent the first unit of what ultimately will develop into a large structure, rivaling skyscrapers in other Orange county cities. The hotel will be so arranged that a second unit may be added on the west side where a sixty-six-foot frontage, now occupied by the Orange Inn, will be reserved for this purpose.

The site, purchased by the local syndicate at a consideration near $100,000, has a total frontage on Chapman avenue of 198 feet and approximately 120 feet on Olive street. The original hotel unit will be situated on a site embracing 132x120 feet. A fifty-four-foot strip purchased following the original site deal will be utilized for a hotel garage, leaving sufficient space for an alley leading to Lemon street.

At the committee meeting it was definitely decided that work on the $500,000 structure will start during the fall or early winter. A campaign for financing the enterprise will be launched during the summer.

DEL MONTE MEET IN MAKING

Representatives of the hi-jinks committee on arrangements for the Los Angeles Realty Board's annual entertainment for the members of the San Francisco Real Estate Board will make a preparatory trip this month to Del Monte to plan for the celebration of the traditional intercity friendship gathering which is to be May 23, 24 and 25, next.

Chairman Frank Ryan and others of his committee will go north to confer with the hotel authorities and the San Francisco committee and to complete all preliminary work for the three days of fun which have become such a marked feature of the intercivic life of the business leaders of the two largest cities on the Pacific Coast.

The members of the local organization are planning to outdo all previous efforts. Reinforced by more than 1200 salesmen, members, the Los Angeles Realty Board is considered to be better prepared than ever before to eclipse the record established a year ago by the San Francisco Real Estate Board. This year the committee plans to enlist the support of the motion-picture industry and representatives of the film world will be aboard the special train which pulls out of the Southern Pacific station Thursday evening, May 22, as part of the Los Angeles delegation.

A meeting of the hi-jinks committee will be conducted tomorrow afternoon in the offices of the board in the new Realty Board Building on South Flower street. Preparation of the first notice to the membership and other publicity details will be considered by the committee while the subcommittee on entertainment of which Mason Case is chairman will make a full report to General Chairman Frank Ryan.

UNIONS TO OPEN DRIVE ON CITY

cent, while the wages in the building crafts have remained stationary as compared with the increased wages during the war period, it is inconceivable that the wage earners would jeopardize their present satisfactory economic conditions in order to follow the blind lead of organizers who derive their income by creating strife and strikes.

For the past three years, Los Angeles has been near the lead in building activities. Last year the building permits amounted to $200,000,000 and for the past three months of the present year, the building permits issued have amounted on an average to $17,000,000 per month with every assurance that these conditions will continue for an indefinite period.

WORKERS PROSPEROUS

The mechanics have lost no time on account of climatic conditions and have shared to a great extent in the prosperity of this community. They drive to and from their work in their own automobiles, to their own homes, participate in the enjoyment of life, their families are able to maintain a high standard of living with all the amusements and attractions that life offers, and they do their own thinking no matter what any agitator may lay before them as an inducement to depart from the satisfactory surroundings that are the result of industrial freedom.

Union-ridden Chicago offers a strong object lesson of the real meaning and consequences of unjust demands and desires of the labor unions. The one hundred million dollar building construction program in that city is now awaiting the settlement of all building trades wage demands made by the Building Trades Council. The bricklayers and plasterers in that city have made a demand for an abnormal increase in wages and if these demands were granted they would automatically raise the wages of the other basic trades to that level, and it has been computed that if these demands were granted it would tax the building industry in the amount of about $20,000 per day, and as a consequence would force the building public to strike against the high cost of labor. Already these demands have made themselves felt and have shown a noticeable falling off of prospective construction, and contractors report a considerable falling off of requests for estimates, and in many cases where estimates have been submitted, owners are delaying decisive action pending the adjustment of wage matters.

This serious reaction in the construction activities in Chicago, due to the unjust demands of organized labor, should be an object lesson to our happy and satisfied workers in this community. As true Americans they certainly will realize that their own happiness, that of their families and the future prosperity of Los Angeles depend upon their decision and it is obvious that if they follow blindly their so-called leaders, they simply injure themselves and the community in which they live.

SELFISH MOTIVES

The propaganda spread by the organizers is simply a camouflage to hide their selfish motives. As long as they can keep up their agitation at high salaries, without working, at the expense of the union, they will continue to create strife and controversies whenever possible, leading ultimately to strikes. The independent workmen and even the union men have nothing to gain by obeying the demands of the organizers because they are assured uninterrupted work at fair wages under open shop conditions as now exist in this city.

It must be remembered that the more workers they can cajole under false promises to join the union, the per capita tax paid by them to the local unions as well as to the American Federation of Labor going to enrich the funds of those organizations, the more secure will be the high salaries paid to those officials.

The vast majority of satisfied men who own their homes will turn a deaf ear to any arguments of the agitators affecting present status, and the efforts that have and the efforts that have been thus far made to organize men have been a total failure.

The strike inaugurated a few days ago by the painters for closed shop and an increase in the scale of $1 per day has taught the agitators and the union men a severe lesson. The few painting contractors who were operating under closed-shop conditions have now declared for the open shop and the places of the strikers have been filled with independent workmen.

Every possible means of creating a sentiment among the workmen in favor of unionism is being employed. The opening of the labor bank that was to take place last Saturday has been postponed for a month and it is now the intention to declare a legal holiday for the unions when the opening takes place.

ENTERING POLITICS

Another important development within the last few weeks was the visit to this city of Paul Scharrenberg from San Francisco, who devoted two weeks in Los Angeles preparing the unions for political action for the next election for the State Legislature. It is intended to place in nomination in every Assembly or Senatorial district in the State, a labor-union man, and concentrate the voting power of the unions on these nominees from the labor ranks and invite the support not only of the union men, but of the women's clubs affiliated as auxiliaries in order to elect their candidates, and if successful, to control the next Legislature for the purpose of passing laws favorable to the unions and controlling the industrial destinies of this State.

Word has been received from Samuel Gompers that all the radicals must be eliminated from the unions, and in certain crafts, the men who carry cards in radical organizations have been expelled. In this manner it is hoped to induce the independent workmen to join the unions under the guise and through an appeal that the unions really are a body of constructive and conservative members, who frown upon any propaganda that might sound un-American or dangerous to the flag and our country.

Option Taken on Fifteen Acres at Lankershim; to Hold Bond Election Soon

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LANKERSHIM, April 5.—With the Los Angeles Board of Education taking an option on a fifteen-acre boulevard site as the proposed home of the Lankershim High School, to be erected in the newly annexed Lankershim zone is today enjoying experience of growing pains. At the same time the community is said to be fully signing the petition for a water bond election. This means the expenditure of something more than three-quarters of a million dollars for mains to supply the entire district with water from the Aqueduct. Proposed city bonds provide for a branch city hall, fire engine house and city park. Miles of highway leading into the city from every direction are to be paved. Contracts for much of this work are ready to be awarded, while on other projects the proceedings are in various stages of development.

The State Highway Department's headquarters here are being enlarged so that all valley work may be handled from a central station. The Woman's Club is undertaking a campaign to raise funds for the erection of a new clubhouse, and local capital is organizing for the purpose of erecting a commercial hotel.

The industrial outlook is no less encouraging, two new factories having located here within the week. The tractor factory is already installing its machinery in temporary quarters while completing plans to build, and the industry turning out bakers' and confectioners' supplies, such as fruits and syrups, is soon to be ready to meet the demands of the public.

TWO APARTMENTS ARE BOUGHT DURING WEEK

A ninety-six room apartment-house, known as the Strathmore Apartments and located at 910 South Grand View avenue, was purchased last week by Dessa W. Miller and Warren R. Williams for a reported consideration of $184,000 through the Elmer Salomon Company.

The Page Apartments at 629 South Burlington avenue was sold by O. Z. Perry to J. F. English for $109,000 through the same company. This house contains forty-seven rooms.

SECOND LARGE THEATER OPENS

San Diego Showhouse is Valuable Addition

One of Finest of Its Kind in United States

History of Balboa Revealed in Architecture

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

SAN DIEGO, April 5.—Opening of the new Balboa Theater here marks another step forward in the progress and development of the city. This is the second large show house to be opened in the city within a month.

Balboa Theater represents an investment of $800,000 and easily ranks in place with the finest playhouses of the country. Placing harmony of design above arrogance of furnishing, it is a gem in theater construction which will not fail to delight the most fastidious.

Interior of the structure is of Spanish Mission renaissance architecture; appropriately so, because the playhouse has been named by its owner after the discoverer of the Pacific, everything about the building being suggestive of the history of Spain (and the history and traditions of early San Diego. Architecture is simple, rather than ornate, and its black and gold [illegible] dome is virtually its only embellishment. Besides containing a theater which occupies a major part, the structure also houses thirty-four offices and six stores.

Mezzanine is a special feature of the new theater, designed as a lounging and meeting place for patrons. Davenports and comfortable chairs invite leisure and [illegible] rest; soft music emanating from concealed echo organs charms the ear; decoration of the room, done by the same artists who decorated the famous Teatro Internationale in Mexico City, delights the eye.

The auditorium, spacious, comfortable, beautiful, is an ideal of theater construction. Leather-cushioned opera seats, thirty-six inches apart, engage the sloping floor from the rear of the room to the orchestra pit. The orchestra pit accommodates seventy-five musicians and dressing-room facilities are provided for eighty performers.

A feature of the interior decoration of the Balboa, said to be [illegible], is the replica of world-famous waterfalls, created by falling water and the superb lighting effects of the showhouse. For this, two immense grottoes, nearly twenty-five feet high, have been built into the wall on either side of the proscenium arch. The lights play upon the water, representing cascades.

The theater is owned by Robert Hicks, who has been engaged in the show business in San Diego for nearly fifteen years and has himself built several motion-picture theaters. The experience he has gained in previous years has been of inestimable value in the construction of the Balboa, for here he has combined all the features of construction known to modern houses.

MANY BUILDINGS UNDER WAY BY MEMBERS OF ASSOCIATED GENERAL CONTRACTORS HERE

The Southern California chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, announces activities of some of its members for the last week as folows:

The Milwaukee Building Company completed plans for the construction of the new Ninth Church of Christ, Scientist, on Normandie avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets. This structure, which is to cost approximately $400,000, will rank among the finest religious edifices on the Pacific Coast. It will be built to conform to class C type of construction and will cover a ground area of 28,175 square feet. The exterior trim will be ruffled brick and cast stone, while interior trim will include hardwood and pine, marble and tile.

Lang & Bergstrom were awarded a contract for construction of the Bridges Memorial Art Gallery in Balboa Park at San Diego. The building, according to the builders, will be one of the most artistic institutions in California when completed. It was designed by W. Templeton Johnson, San Diego architect, and will be two stories in height covering a ground area of 100 by 250 feet. Reinforced concrete will be used in construction and the trimmings on the exterior will include limestone and stucco. The total cost of construction will be $240,000.

CONTRACT IS LET

A contract for the erection of the new Scottish Rite Cathedral on Madison avenue, Pasadena, was awarded this week to William C. Crowell, Pasadena builder. The structure will cost $160,000 and will be built of steel and concrete. It was designed by Joseph J. Blick, Pasadena architect, and will cover a ground area of 16,275 square feet. The structure will be 70 feet in height, containing a basement, auditorium to seat 800, billiard-room, banquet-rooms and kitchens. A large pipe organ will also be installed.

H. M. Baruch, who specializes in the construction of commercial and industrial structures, was awarded a contract this week by A. C. Martin for the erection of a five-story Class A store and loft building on Figueroa street, south of Eighth street, at a total cost of $112,878. The building will cover a ground area of 7750 square feet and have brick walls, brick facing and an exterior trim of terra cotta.

AT WILMINGTON

J. S. Metzger & Son are planning to start work immediately upon a garage and auto sales building for Alex Kirkpatrick on Canal avenue, Wilmington, that is to cost approximately $35,000. It will cover a ground area of 90 by 155 feet and be of one story and mezzanine proportions. A. Godfrey Bailey, local architect, prepared the plans.

Contracts for the construction of additions to the Venice Union High School at Venice were awarded this week to two local members of the Associated General Contractors. Robert Millsap received the contract to construct two shop buildings at a cost of $41,990, while J. C. Bannister was awarded the contract to construct a gymnasium at a cost of $27,000. Work in these buildings will start soon.

The E. A. Irish Company, public works contractors, have been awarded contracts by the Southern California Telephone Company for the installation of 320,000 duck feet of telephone conduits and manhole and transformer vaults. The latter will be laid on Vermont avenue, Santa Monica Boulevard, West Third street and West Seventh street.

DAY-LABOR SYSTEM IS CONDEMNED

Contractors' Association Urges Contract Plan in Public Construction

In an effort to prove that the construction of public work can be done cheaper by the day-labor method than by the contract system, the Associated General Contractors of America has adopted a resolution announcing its determination to combat the day-labor system to the fullest extent of its strength.

The text of the resolution, which was received here by E. Earl Glass, executive secretary of the Southern California chapter of the contractors' national organization, follows:

Whereas, there is manifest throughout the country a tendency among public officials to do public construction by the day-labor method, and

Whereas, this method of expending public funds is generally recognized as being economically unsound as a general practice, in that it provides no foundation of responsibility and offers no assurance that such work will be of the proper quality and performed for the amount of money voted or appropriated, therefore, and

Whereas, our construction history is full of notorious instances of the excessive cost of this construction method, and of its encouragement to inefficiency, incompetence and sinister political influence, and of a strong tendency toward socialism; and

Whereas, the constructors are especially fitted to interpret to the public this menace, and also lay upon us the responsibility of so doing; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Associated General Contractors urges its membership throughout the country to accept as a major duty a campaign to show the results of the day-labor method of doing public construction and to enter upon a vigorous and persistent effort to secure legislation which will require public bodies to do construction work by the sound method of firm contracts which guarantee the completion of the work at a fixed price.

This class meets every Wednesday evening.

In forthcoming lectures, Mr. McComb will discuss deeds and property, methods of transferring property, methods of using property as security for mortgages and trust deeds, ways of protecting title, recording, the Torrens title law, contracts between purchasers or sellers of real estate and agents and other important features of real estate transaction. The course is not only designed for real estate salesmen and operators, but for anyone interested in the subject. "I Will Take My Six Acres HERE...!" says

Gene Stratton-Porter

of Bel-Air

Read this Remarkable Statement from "The Bird that Needs a Champion" a story in GOOD HOUSEKEEPING for March;

........."THROUGHOUT these years I had been looking for such a location as I knew in my heart I wanted. For years I had had my eye upon it, and had supposed that it was unattainable, since it was part of a great estate; and then suddenly I learned that the very place I coveted was being cut into building locations and would be thrown open to the public. I immediately set out to state my specifications. I wanted not less than six acres... untouched by the hand of man since the crux and grind of things had evolved our world. I wanted a spot from which not a tree, a shrub, bush, vine or flower had been removed. I wanted the isolation of a baby mountain all to myself, with a canyon running down either side of it...and, of extreme importance, running water in one of these.

"When I first visited this location I found there were trees, not the giant hardwood trees of northern Indiana, but the live oaks of California, the wild walnuts, the mahogany, the madrona, the manzanita, and bushes of wild lilac as blue as the sky, sumac with its pink panicles of bloom, red-berried holly, and incense shrub bearing flowers as fresh and as delicate as trailing arbutus, in their full beauty in late November, and the entire location thickly decorated with a woody shrub that looked as if it might belong to the evergreen family.

"One morning, while I was wavering in the balance as to whether I should say, "Here will I set up my rest"—I went to the baby mountain with my lawyer, to look over the outlines of the plat and to reach a definite conclusion concerning the deal.

"We looked up to the north where the highest peaks of the big range of which this baby mountain was a part were outlined against the sky, and by slowly turning in panoramic view, we looked over the stretch of the Bel-Air subdivision, over the town of Beverly surrounded by the estates of the mighty, over Hollywood, and then in a great sweep Los Angeles, stretching to the Pacific, and from there past Wilmington and Redondo, on to Catalina, that exquisite jewel of the sea. Our eyes finally came to rest on the west slope of the canyon, and there, as we stood looking, from a group of live oaks there arose and came out, almost wing to wing, in slow, easy flight, a pair of snow white Arctic owls, no doubt in this land for winter quarters, as the time was late November. They had a three foot wing sweep; underneath they were white as the whitest snowfall. From their big eyes streamed gold lights. If they had delicate markings on their upper wings and backs, the color was invisible to us. From below, where I stood with the man of the law, they were great white birds that had journeyed down from the Arctic and were making their winter home among the live oaks on the canyon side, because this was the third time I had seen them there, but only once before had there been anyone with me.

"Then I heard the sound of my own voice saying in finality to my companion, 'If they will run my line up the side of the opposite mountain far enough to include that group of live oaks, I will take my six acres here.'"

PAPERS IN EAST BOOST OUR CITY

Interview With Authority is Given Publicity

Writer on Civic Development Sees Great Future

Says Los Angeles Will be Third Largest

Stanley L. McMichael of Cleveland, O., author of "City Growth and Values," and regarded as one of the leading authorities on civic development in the United States, recently returned to his home after spending the winter in the West. In an interview published in Cleveland newspapers he states that it is his belief that Los Angeles will within a very few years pass Philadelphia in population and become the third city in size in the United States.

"Los Angeles is now claiming a population of 1,000,000 inhabitants within its corporate limits, and if appearances and general activity mean anything, the claim seems to be well founded," McMichael stated in discussing the growth of the western city, and general real estate conditions in the Southwest.

"Los Angeles is the largest city in the world in point of actual area, the city having within its corporate limits 410 square miles of territory. The next largest city is Berlin, Germany, with 332 square miles. This large area does not include nearly forty cities and towns which are growing up on its very borders. Long Beach claims a population of over 100,000, Glendale about 50,000, Santa Monica about 30,000, Pasadena about 45,000, Alhambra with 25,000, together with the smaller cities of Burbank, San Fernando, Culver City, Sherman, West Hollywood, Venice, Ocean Park and a score of other as rapidly growing communities.

"The entire section tributary to the big city is seething with real estate activity. During 1923 the city alone recorded over $200,000,000 in building permits, with probably another $100,000,000 in the environs. This year during January and February alone the city building permits ran to over $33,000,000. Buildings are going up as if by magic. Many are of flimsy construction, yet again many magnificent twelve-story steel and concrete fireproof buildings are being built in different sections of the city.

"There is no doubt that Los Angeles is growing as no large American city ever grew before. Easterners are learning that it is in the center of the great playground of America where may be found a wonderful climate both winter and summer, splendid hotels and apartment-houses of every description, and artistic, attractive homes priced from $5000 upward. In no city in America can be found the large number of small inexpensive homes of good character and design that may be found in the Pacific Coast city. Good architecture is not confined to expensive homes. Even the humblest cottage is often a high grade of architecture.

"'Can its growth continue?' is the question every easterner asks. I believe it will. Just as long as Los Angeles has its climate people will flock there, many remaining as permanent residents. It is no place for anyone to go unless he has a money stake. Most of those who do remain have from $10,000 to $50,000, and it is this steady flow of money into the territory which is building up Los Angeles and making it the wonder city of the age."

RUSHING ROAD WORK

Palos Verdes Street Building Program is Progressing Rapidly

With more than $350,000 already spent on the road system of the Palos Verdes Estates, work is being pushed more rapidly than ever to complete the sixty-five miles of boulevards and streets which will comprise the completed system. Another steam shovel of large capacity was placed at work last week in the huge Douglas cut, and especial effort will be made to hasten the completion of that portion of the work.

"The biggest cut on the Ridge Route was 105 feet in depth. We had an excavation of 110 feet to make in the Douglas cut, and it will probably take about four months more to finish it," said Jay Lawyer, general manager of the Palos Verdes project, yesterday.

"The material being excavated from the cut is excellent road surfacing, and we have made extensive use of it. We expect to begin the work of surfacing the roads already graded in the Lunada Bay district in the near future. Much of the surfacing in Malaga Cove is already finished.

"The completion of the Douglas cut will connect Malaga Cove and Lunada Bay with a wide shore road of easy grades, that will ultimately be a part of the great Coast road of the State highway system."

Planting of shrubs and vines that will cover the banks where grades have been excavated along the hill sides has already commenced, and Olmstead Brothers intend to hide the scars of grading on the hill slopes as rapidly as possible.

CLUB STRUCTURE NEARING COMPLETION

On the second floor will be a large dining room, lounge room, writing room, ladies parlor and the offices of the club. The buffet, billiard room and kitchen also are located on this floor.

The third floor will contain the gymnasium, a large balcony and rooms for the accommodation of members who desire to make their home in the club.

WILL ENLARGE VALLEY PLANTS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY, April 5.—Considerably more than a hundred thousand dollars is to be spent immediately in the installation of enlarged telephone plants in the several cities of San Fernando Valley. The heaviest outlay will be at Burbank, where the plans call for the expenditure of $62,000 in trebling the switchboard capacity and laying millions of feet of wire in cables. Van Nuys comes next on the list with an estimated betterment program that will cost $42,600. The new equipment is to include eight switchboards and six million feet of wire enclosed in cable. At San Fernando the improvements will include the erection of a two-story building to house the plant, which will be enlarged to meet the demands of a city with a population of 20,000. The outlay in providing better facilities for the Lankershim vicinity will be $25,000.

WOODLAKE IS CENTER OF BUILDING ACTIVITY

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

WOODLAKE, April 5.—Considerable new building in progress here will contribute to the business and residential development of the city. P. G. Krehbiel will rebuild his home, which was recently destroyed by fire. The new building will be on the site of the house which was destroyed and almost a duplicate. The former foundation, cement porches, fireplace and chimney will be utilized.

Mrs. Lora Baldwin, recent arrival from Chicago, is building a home on Pal street adjoining the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Mains. Mrs. Mains is a niece of Mrs. Baldwin. W. E. Shuck is contractor in charge. W. G. Shetler has recently completed a home on Pepper street.

The Union Oil Company is erecting a station in the business district. Charles Moran has completed a garage on the main highway in the western part of the city. The new Woodlake grammar school is nearing completion and is a better building than had been anticipated. Each of the seven rooms is provided with modern conveniences. The exterior is being finished most attractively, the red-tiled roof and cream-colored walls being effective in their frame of trees. This building will be ready for use in about thirty days.

TO TAKE BIDS ON NEW SCHOOL

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, April 5.—Having effected a $1700 saving to the Orange School District by preparing the plans and specifications without engaging the services of an architect, the Orange Elementary School Board today issued a call for bids on the new grade school to be erected in the newly-annexed West Orange district.

The plans and specifications, adopted at a meeting of the board this week, call for a single-story brick school structure containing six classrooms. The structure will be situated on a five-acre site, recently purchased by the board at the corner of Almond avenue and Pepper streets. According to the plans the school building will be erected on the south side of Almond avenue, facing directly on Pepper street, a new thoroughfare running from Chapman to Almond avenue.

Approximately sixty orange trees directly on the site will be removed as soon as the crop, which will net the school district a substantial return, is disposed of, according to George C. Sherwood, school superintendent. It is expected that the crop will be sold by April 1, when work of clearing the site will probably get under way.

Bids on the structure will be opened April 7 at 1:30 p. m. at the intermediate school. The proposals are called for in one general contract covering the entire work, save the plumbing, electric wiring and the finish hardware, which are offered in separate specifications, and upon which separate bids are asked, according to Sherwood. The contractors, however, may bid on the entire work providing they submit separate bids on these three items, it was announced. The structure is to be entirely of brick construction with a buff brick facing in an ornate design.

Work is scheduled to start by April 20, and the structure is to be finished within four months so that it will be in readiness by September 1, a few weeks in advance of the fall term opening.

BUILDING PROGRESS

VANCOUVER (B. C.)—With more than $12,000,000 of construction work actually under way in Vancouver and vicinity, and plans out for additional expenditures of more than $4,000,000 within the area known as Greater Vancouver; with the lumbering industry working capacity crews in logging operations on the coast and the outlook for mining better than for many years, British Columbia is entering upon a new era of prosperity.

This is the unanimous conclusion of dozens of business men who have been questioned respecting their views during the past two weeks. Property agents report that there has not been such activity in real estate in Vancouver since the boom days of twelve years ago.

The phenomenal development of the port of Vancouver as a grain-shipping point, the low values for property, and the fact that British Columbia has as a basis of development the four great natural industries, lumbering, mining, agriculture and fishing, justify a great confidence in this city.

CARBON BLACK PLANT

MEDICINE HAT (Sask.)—The Sarnia Oil and Gas Company is arranging to spend a large sum in the development of the gas fields of this district. The present proposal calls for an expenditure of $5,000,000 developing carbon black and gasoline extraction in Many Island Lake district. English interests are said to be the chief backers. The company has acquired gas royalties on 14,000 acres of land in the Many Island Lake field. The contracts were secured from the Canadian-American Oil and Gas Company and the Medicine Hat Development Company.

Contracts in Triplicate Are Recommended

Elimination of misunderstandings in real estate transactions by having all contracts drawn in triplicate—one for the buyer, one for the seller and one for the broker—was advocated by M. C. H. Clinch, chairman of the residential property committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board, in a lecture before a class in general real estate in the extension division of the University of Southern California last week. He also suggested that where possible a client be taken to the office and an extensive explanation of the important clauses in the contract should be given, thus insuring a complete understanding of the document.

George R. Le Baron will speak tomorrow evening before this class on "Central Business Property."

TO EXPLAIN LAW

For newcomers in California and real estate operators who have been in business under the laws of other States, the course in real estate law offered by the University of California has been specially prepared. Marshall F. McComb, a lawyer with long experience in real estate transactions, and who lectures on government at the University of California, Southern Branch, will conduct the class. He plans to make the course practical and will explain the fundamental principles governing the purchase and sale of real property under California law.

BIG APARTMENT PLANNED

A three-acre tract at Highland and Sycamore avenues has been selected as the site for a proposed thirteen-story own-your-own apartment to be built by the El Encanto Apartments, Inc., at a cost of more than $5,000,000. Thomas Ball, attorney for the corporation, states that the structure will contain 2000 rooms, a theater to seat 750, garage, gymnasium, ballroom and other dwelling features.

E. P. Lewis, architect, has been selected to prepare the plans. Officers of the temporary board of directors include B. G. Hite, Davis D. Sallee, David K. Johnson, C. S. Harrison, Charles L. Williamson, D. M. Fitzgerald and Wayland A. Dunham. The corporation, capitalized at $7,500,000, has been approved by the Secretary of State.

ESCROW GAINS SHOW ACTIVITY

Volume of Realty Transfers at Redlands Increasing

Dairy Farm Exchanged for Hollywood Apartment

Several Transfers of Houses and Lots Reported

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

REDLANDS, April 5.—The sale of one of the finest dairy farms in this section, of a group of lots for the erection of a fine bungalow court and the statement of escrow officials and real estate men that the demand for real estate is steadily growing keener featured the activity in real estate here this past week.

An interesting report was made by F. Karl Grassle, manager of the escrow department of the Hellman Bank, during the week. He says that the escrow business in Redlands during December was the greatest in five years, that January showed an increase over December, February an increase over January and March an increase over February.

From his report and the reports of the real estate men is readily deduced that the movement of real estate here is steadily increasing and that the growth of the city is being maintained at a steady pace.

Harry L. Everett, who recently came to Redlands from Maine, has purchased from G. C. Clement his block of lots on the east side of Fourth street between Olive avenue and Clark street. On these lots he will erect a modern bungalow court that will cost about $30,000. There will be eight bungalows in the court, the two facing on Fourth street to be doubles.

The deal made during the week with the most property involved was that of the exchange of H. H. Ford's farm between Redlands and San Bernardino for an apartment-house in Hollywood. Mr. Ford, who is manager of the Hellman Bank here, comes into possession of one of the fine new properties of the Hollywood section in the deal, and also fifty feet of valuable unimproved property there.

Ford's farm, given over to diary business, is located two and a half miles east of San Bernardino, Sixth street and City Creek Road. It is an excellent property, with ninety acres of fine productive land and about 100 head of dairy stock, mostly graded Guernsey of proven worth.

ON SUNSET BOULEVARD

Mr. Ford gets in the exchange 100 feet of frontage on Sunset Boulevard, property at Sunset Boulevard and Rodney Drive, in Hollywood. It is just one block from Sunset and Vermont where the Bank of Italy will erect a twelve-story building on one corner and a six-story building is projected for another corner.

The property is improved with a twenty-apartment stucco designed apartment-house built just a year ago and having every modern facility for comfort and convenience. It is named the Quincy Apartments and will be managed by Mr. and Mrs. Claire Osborne, son-in-law and daughter of Mr. Ford.

The sale of two well-known five-acre pieces of property, both set to orange trees, has just been reported.

The first is that of Harry D. Wilme of the Independent Electric Company on East State street, property located in Church street at the Southern Pacific tracks.

There are five acres of oranges there, a newly remodeled house and large grounds. The property was sold to William J. Jones of Alhambra who plans to make it his home. The consideration was about $7000.

OTHER SALES MADE

The other five-acre piece sold is located at Kansas street and Orange avenue and was owned by J. S. Ericson, being sold to Henry Balsiger for $5500. It is planted to orange trees and the deal was made by Johnson & Cell. The new owners have taken possession.

Several houses have been sold during the past week and while some of them cannot be announced, deals have been completed on others. The largest one was of the Mallers property at Center and Palm. This was sold to J. S. Benson, who plans to spend about $5000 in remodeling the place. The consideration was not named but it is a valuable property.

The sale of two new houses during the week has been reported, one being that of M. A. Kavanaugh on College avenue in the University tract to Steve Goins. Mr. Goins also disposed of his house on Clay street to Hiram Young. The C. W. Melton house at 214 West Colton avenue has been sold to A. L. Williams, who has taken possession of the property.

Real estate men report that lots are in demand and during the week have sold two in University tract, one for $650 and one for $750. One was from Harriett Cotcher to Ethel Kinyon and the other from Dr. Kerr to Mr. Rixon.

TO VISIT IMPERIAL

Henry P. Barbour of the California Real Estate Association has issued invitation to seventy members of the State Association-Colorado River and San Juan basin committee to visit Imperial Valley and see the Colorado River and Imperial district headings and flood protection first hand. He has appointed W. I. Hollingsworth as the committee chairman.

Ray Edgar of the El Centro Realty Board is in charge of Imperial Valley arrangements.

URGE LARGE ATTENDANCE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, April 5.—A call to every member to attend the annual convention of the local Realty Board of the State association in Pasadena in October was issued by Charles Guthrie of Glendale, regional vice-president of the State association, in his talk before the weekly luncheon of the Inglewood Realty Board at the Inglewood Country Club. This was the only board out of twenty-four that he had recently addressed, he declared, in which State and national affairs of the State association were taken up with the regular order of business, and he congratulated the president, Frank D. Parent, upon the high standards of his organization.

The success of the newly formed Greater Los Angeles Association, whose button he was wearing, will redound to the benefit of Inglewood and other suburban communities as much in proportion as to Los Angeles. The success of its aim, to "Keep the White Spot White," will provide work for the great caravan of Ford motorists headed for the Southland, he said.

WILL HOLD SERIES OF LUNCHEONS

Divisional Meetings to be Held Bi-monthly by Realty Board

A new program of divisional luncheon meetings is to be inaugurated for Los Angeles Realty Board members, beginning with next Tuesday noon, the 8th inst., at the Elite, when the portion of the membership interested in industrial property will meet under the auspices of the industrial property committee, according to an announcement made yesterday by W. L. Brent, president of the organization.

The members of the industrial property committee are: F. L. S. Harman, chairman; E. H. Miller, Max Elsner Ralph Vandervort, H. M. Joy and Hugh Blue.

The program arranged for the coming luncheon by this committee provides for brief talks by the following: Charles R. Smurr, industrial commissioner, Southern Pacific Railway; Will E. Rauch, industrial commissioner, Union Pacific Railway; Tom F. Conway, industrial commissioner, Santa Fe Railway; Tom J. Day, traffic commissioner, Pacific Electric Railway, and A. G. Arnoll, manager industrial department, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

According to a notice mailed to the 2000 members of the board from President Brent, a second divisional luncheon will be held on April 22 at the Elite with either the business property division or the subdividers' division in charge.

The regular luncheons of the board will be held each alternate Tuesday as formerly and the schedule of these gatherings will not be affected by President Brent's new luncheon program.

"Divisional activities have proved successful in other real estate boards located in cities the size of Los Angeles and in some instances in smaller cities," said Mr. Brent yesterday. "It is believed that such activities will be unusually successful here."

THEATER PLAN IS INDORSED

Alhambra Backing Municipal Playhouse Project

Cost is Estimated at Three Hundred Thousand

Council Orders Installation of Lighting System

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, April 5. — Announcement of the plan to erect a unique open-air theater and art center in the municipal park, ten minutes' drive by automobile from Los Angeles, a project which was presented to the City Commission this week, has met with enthusiastic interest.

To work out the practical details of the theater, which is the idea of Glenn E. Palmer, author of Alhambra's civic pageant, a committee has been appointed which consists of the members of the City Commission, N. W. Thompson, chairman; W. P. Battelle, C. C. Garrison, P. E. Gibboney and M. E. Carroll, together with Oliver Van Amberg, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and W. M. Crown, president of the Alhambra Realty Board. This committee held its first conference following the meeting of the commission Monday night, going over with Mr. Palmer and with Russell Stimmel, for two years producer of the Pilgrimage Play, and Perry & Clarke, the architects, the details of the proposed building, which it is estimated would cost $300,000.

The committee is to meet again next Monday night at which time Mr. Palmer is to present a definite plan for financing the theater.

The Alhambra Athletic Club has named Quintin & Kerr of this city as the official architects for the club which is planning the erection of a clubhouse and gymnasium. The building and site committee is to make a definite recommendation to the club next Tuesday night, and it is expected that plans will be completed at an early date for a new clubhouse for the organization.

GETS GOOD START

The first day of April proved to be no April Fools' Day so far as the office of City Building Inspector Jenkins was concerned, for permits amounting to over $70,000 were issued, and the plans for new construction have been pouring in at a rapid pace during the balance of the week. Although the month of March set up the top record for this year and was the biggest March in the city's history, the present month seems likely to outstrip it in building activity.

Through an agreement between the city and the County Board of Supervisors Alhambra is to have an appropriation of approximately $30,000 from the county to be used in the improvement of Valley Boulevard through the Alhambra city limits, it was announced this week by City Manager Lorraine. The money will be taken from the gasoline tax funds which are to be spent for road improvement in the county. The city has already started condemnation proceedings to widen the boulevard to 100 feet within the city limits. The county is to finance the paving of a strip twenty feet wide after the highway has been widened, it is understood.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

Alhambra is to have a new ornamental lighting system the entire length of Main street and on Garfield avenue from Bay State to Woodward. Resolutions ordering the work were passed by the City Commission this week, after a small protest against the Main-street lights had been denied.

The decision to install the new lights came after a discussion of many months and is looked upon as one of the big improvement projects which the city has undertaken. The new system will cost the property owners on the two streets about $4.25 a front foot for installation.

The question of opening Bushnell avenue south from Alhambra Road to Main is again before the City Commission, a petition having been filed with this body at its last meeting. The matter was before the city some months ago but on account of the proposed extension running through the city's reservoir property near Alhambra Road the former petition was denied.

BONDING CHANGE DESIRED

Contractors to Meet With Representatives of Surety Companies This Week

Plans for the next step to be taken in improving the bonding conditions in the construction industry of the country are now being laid, according to announcement made yesterday by E. Earl Glass, executive secretary of the Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America.

The plans, Mr. Glass said, include arrangements for a joint meeting between representatives of the surety companies, State highway officials and executives of the Associated General Contractors of America, which will probably be held in Washington coincident with the sessions of the executive board of the American Association of State Highway officials in that city this month.

Representatives of the bonding companies, Mr. Glass said, have indicated a willingness to enter into a direct move which will have as its object the elimination of practices which are now eating the heart out of the construction industry of the nation. The contemplated meeting is the outgrowth of a joint meeting held in Chicago during the week before the fifth annual convention of the Associated General Contractors, at which the preliminary work accomplished at a joint session in New Orleans last December was finished.

Subdivisions and Subdividers

Bandini Expands

Forty-five homes, representing an investment of $250,000 will be under construction in Bandini within sixty days. Actual orders for lumber assure this activity, according to O. Nicholas Gabriel, head of the Bandini Syndicate. More than $300,000 in street improvement—including sidewalks, curbs, streets and electroliers along Atlantic Boulevard have been started by large crews who will rush this work. Bandini is a small tract entirely surrounded by developing industrial districts. Nearby is the $2,000,000 shops of the Union Pacific Railway scheduled to be opened May 1 with an initial force of 600 men. On the north side is the Union Pacific industrial district where factories to furnish carload freight to the railway will be located. On the south side is where sites for $8,000,000 worth of industries were purchased recently. Sales in Bandini approximate $800,000 to date.

Completes Plans

John Duncan Dunn has completed plans for an eighteen-hole golf course at the Los Serranos Country Club to be built on the Chino Home Ranch, recently acquired by H. C. Davidson of Long Beach, and now being built into a country club embracing 330 acres of hills and valley lands near Chino. It is the plan of Mr. Davidson to immediately construct the golf course, install water systems and to prepare the temporary clubhouse for guests and members. Davidson feels that this will expedite the club work, and assures members of an excellent golf course at an early date.

Seven New Homes

Ground was broken during the last week for seven new homes in the city of Albright on the Venice Short Line at Sawtelle Boulevard. The estimated building program now under way there, according to Harry H. Culver is close to $250,000. Several brick business buildings are about ready for construction on the boulevard frontages. Close to a million dollars' worth of residential and business property has been sold since the city was opened last November. According to Mr. Culver, the entire site of the original offering is expected to be sold inside of three more months.

Course Is Graded

A nine-hole golf course with natural hazards of lakes, creeks and ravines has been graded and seeded at Cedarpines Park, seventy miles from Los Angeles in the San Bernardino Mountains. A large log club house has been constructed, including an open-air dance floor, swimming pool and tennis courts for the convenience of campers. Four thousand cabin sites have been sold this year, and 105 cabins have been erected by purchasers, according to P. E. Houlette, owner of the tract.

Work Progresses

More than 150 men are being employed by Norco Irrigated Farms in the improvement or construction work incident to the carrying out of the program for the building of Norco. At present Norco Irrigated Farms is operating a cement products plant, planing mill, garage, lumber yard, department store, and a restaurant to further the development of the project during its infant stages of growth. Many Norco purchasers are engaging in poultry farming which has proved advantageous thus far.

To Preserve Beauty

Sketches and house plans given free to purchasers of cabin sites in La Joya is a new method adopted by Capt. Edward A. Salisbury to preserve the beauty of his close-by mountain paradise. Plans by Gilbert Stanley Underwood, Los Angeles architect, conform with the general lines of the central club house, which is to be erected as a part of the property of the La Joya community. Each cabin will be unlike from any other while the general harmony in line and style will preserve the beauty of the location.

Ready for Building

Notices to the effect that a large portion of Silver Lake Terrace is ready for building activity have been sent to lot owners by the subdividers. In the few days that have elapsed since that time, many houses have started and still others are about to be begun, according to George W. Dickinson of Strong & Dickinson, developers and subdividers of the district.

Grading Finished

Improvement work in Silver Lake Knoll is progressing rapidly. Grading is practically finished. This week gas, water and sewers will be installed. Bids for the improvement work in Moreno Highlands are about to be opened, Mr. Dickinson states. Improvements are to consist of concrete streets, sewers, water, gas, electricity with all wiring underground, curbs and concrete electroliers on some of the main drives.

Viaduct is Asset

Announcement made a few days ago that plans for the Macy-street viaduct were being drafted was welcomed by property owners in the vicinity of Huntington Terrace, according to the Loftus Land Company. When this viaduct is completed time will be lessened by several minutes, as the narrow bridge now crossing the Los Angeles River serves to congest traffic. Grading work is progressing rapidly in this tract, as the land lies high and is well drained, permitting the grading crews to begin work as soon as the rain ceases falling.

To Escort Riders

Through the courtesy of Roy L. Davis, owner of the Bel-Air stables, the Bridle Path Association will be escorted through Bel-Air today and formally introduced to the beauties and attractions of the bridle trails which interlace the estates. The trails through Stone Canyon will be part of the ride as the natural beauties of this property are at the best at this season.

Churches Interested

Purchase of several sections in Graceland Cemetery by several of the largest churches in Los Angeles promises to start a nationwide church movement to restore the sentimental attachment between the church and its dead that existed in the days of the old country churchyard. Founders of Graceland have offered churches an opportunity to acquire sections in Graceland under a plan which not only will enable a church to bury its own dead, but to substantially enrich the church treasury as well.

European Plans

John A. Evans, president of the corporation subdividing Hacienda Park, has received a number of interior designs for homes suitable for foothill property. So well planned are these submitted interiors that a number of lot owners have asked for these plans to use in outlining their homes. Mr. Evans is leaving for an extended European trip early this month and will bring back photographs of hillside homes from foreign countries.

Wilshire Widened

Wilshire Boulevard in the Carthay Center district, from Fairfax avenue to the Beverly Hills line, is now a 150-foot thoroughfare, according to the J. Harvey McCarthy Company. For the last three months the company, in co-operation with the owners of the property on the north side of Wilshire Boulevard, has been grading, widening and surfacing the thoroughfare with six-inch concrete.

Attract Thousands

Great activity is reported at the Toluca Lakes Park subdivision recently placed on the market by Heffron-McCray-St. John, subdividers. According to Ivar McCray, member of the syndicate, the tract has attracted thousands of visitors because of its natural beauty. It is said that sales during the last week have far exceeded the expectations of the sellers and that many are planning the erection of homes in the near future. Boating features together with picnicnicking accommodations draw considerable interest, it is stated.

Hearing Tomorrow

Before the Railroad Commission, in session in Los Angeles tomorrow, a hearing is to be held on the application of the city for the lowering of the Pacific Electric tracks at Eulalia Boulevard and McCarthy Vista, Carthay Center, so that access may be made to the Carthay Center business district. The necessity for the crossing has become pressing, it is pointed out. During the last few months forty-two homes have been completed in Carthay Center while the telephone company estimates that there will be 400 residences within two years. It has also been pointed out that construction work in the new retail business district is scheduled to be begun before June.

Many Homes Built

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are now represented in new homes under construction at Hollywoodland, according to S. H. Woodruff, community builder. One of the latest dwellings to be erected is the home for George Rattenbury, a seven-room Norman-French residence designed by John L. Delario and H. F. Hunter. Other important improvements are under way at the community.

Landscape Hints for Small Home Told by Expert

BY NEVILLE R. STEPHENS

The garden should reflect the simplicity and quaintness of the house, both as to design and planting.

Shrubbery should be used rather sparingly in the front, incorporating such graceful materials as Cotoneasters, Heathers and Scotch Broom.

Vines of not too heavy growth are necessary, care being taken to choose those with soft-colored blossoms, as brilliant effects would not be in keeping with the architecture. Rose climbers in pinks and yellows, combined with the Queen of Sheba vine, Clematis Montana or Jasmine would be charming on the front, with perhaps a lavender wistaria at the rear.

In the rear garden the lawn should be kept open, with the exception of one or two shade trees having rather heavy full tops, preferably deciduous.

At the edge of the lawn, and completely surrounding it so as to insure a feeling of privacy, there are high growing colorful shrubs in the background, with shorter ones in front and then faced with perennials and annuals. If the whole effect is carried out in pastel ones, a truly delightful scheme may be accomplished.

The fruit trees must be carefully chosen, as there are only a few that do well in the city. These include figs, peaches, apricots and the plum.

If the ground is adobe or of poor quality, two to three inches of good top dressing over all lawn areas should be used, and the shrub beds filled to a depth of five or six inches.

Especially high shrubbery must be planted to conceal the drying yard behind the garage.

The total cost of all materials and labor for the garden will be between $400 and $600, depending on the size and quantity of plants.

PLAN AUTO HOME

HUNTINGTON PARK, April 5. A building to cost $35,000 is to be erected on North Pacific Boulevard at Fifty-seventh street for the Howard Auto Company. The new building will have a frontage of eighty feet on Pacific and will extend to a depth of 140 feet on Fifty-seventh street. It will be one story high and of brick and steel construction.

NEW MASONIC TEMPLE

Approve Plan for Anaheim Church Units

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ANAHEIM, April 5.—Approval of plans for a $150,000 Presbyterian Church to be erected at the southwest corner of Clementine and Broadway by members at the annual congregational meeting this week, marked the first step toward the actual construction of the building which has been contemplated for more than a year.

The plans as prepared by the building committee call for two adjoining structures of brick construction designed in Gothic architecture. One building will be three stories in height and will be known as the Sunday-school building. The church building will adjoin this structure and when completed will be one of the finest churches in Orange county.

It was also announced this week that plans would be made for the building of an Episcopalian Church in the near future. A fund for this structure will be started Easter Sunday, according to an announcement made by the vestrymen, who declare that the capacity of the present church is overtaxed at Sunday services.

POLISH TEXTILE

The midwinter textile sales, which are now practically concluded in Germany, have resulted in clearing out stocks all over the country in the wholesale as well as the retail trade. Thus the winter season may be considered as having ended most satisfactorily for all branches of the industry and trade, and attention is now being directed to the coming spring period, Consul Louis G. Dreyfus, Jr., Dresden, reports.

WATER POWER EARNINGS

MONTREAL.—Shawinigan Water and Water Power Company which develops its power largely upon the St. Maurice River in this Province, exceeded previous earnings records in 1923 and went over $5,000,000 in gross revenues. This involved gross earnings of all subsidiaries of over $14,000,000. After payment of all expenses, interest and allowance for depreciation there was available for distribution $1,790,813, equivalent to 9 per cent on the capital stock outstanding. In 1922 the earnings on capital stock was 8 per cent, while the present dividend rate is 7 per cent.

RECTORS FOR YEAR ELECTED

lesmen Division of Board Chooses Officers

mbers of Group Eligible for Home Town Contest

urvey of Talent for Jinks is Being Made

Twelve directors were elected by the salesmen division of the Los Angeles Realty Board at a highly successful meeting held Tuesday evening in the assembly hall of the new Realty Board Building on South Flower street. The nine selected with the three officers, F. B. Burns, chairman; d B. Johnson, vice-chairman, and Charles M. Knox, representative on board of governors, will be the executive body of the salesmen division.

Those elected with their line of specialization are: Paul B. , business property; Frank , subdivisions; Harold , subdivisions; A. H. Wil-, subdivisions; Harold J. , business property; J. A. , residential property; Mann, business property; C. Getchell, agricultural real estate; John S. Shanklin, business property; T. B. Goodwin, industrial property; R. C. Baker, subdivision, and Phil Norton, subdivision.

The meeting was the first held by any group within the board in the new Realty Board Building on South Flower street. Talks were made by L. J. Haddock, who took as his subject "Ideals of True Salesmanship," and Mason Case, chairman of the board's publicity committee, who told of the plans for the Hi-Jinks in honor of the San Francisco Real Estate Board at Del Monte, May 23, 24 and 25. W. L. Brent, president of the board, congratulated the division on its plans for April meeting and on the constructive program of official work outlined for this unit of the realty organization. He closed by emphasizing the value of organization.

ELIGIBLE IN CONTEST

Tom Ingersoll, secretary of the board, informed the salesmen that they were eligible to compete for the Gilbert S. Wright trophy, which has been offered by former members of the board of governors to the member of the board who, in the opinion of the judges, has given the best five-minute talk on Los Angeles. He showed the beautiful loving cup on display. "It will be the permanent possession of the winner," said Mr. Ingersoll. "Mr. Wright will give one of these cups each year."

There were also exhibited several of the cups which the members of the local board had won in competition with the members of the San Francisco Real Estate Board in the Hi-Jinks celebrations which have been held in the last four or five years at Catalina Island and Del Monte. Mr. Case in his announcements concerning the coming Hi-Jinks stated that the trophy list this year would be larger than at any previous inter-city friendship event.

LINE UP TALENT

Questionnaires were distributed by Mr. Case to the salesmen present asking for a line-up on all available talent for the entertainment program to be rendered at Del Monte. Many of these were filled out and it was discovered that there were a goodly number of singers, instrumentalists, actors and stunt men among the membership of this division. One of the singers, Martin O'Noonan, opened the meeting by a series of vocal numbers which brought much applause from the salesmen present.

Mr. Haddock pointed out the fact that because of the advantages in Southern California thousands of able men—"the best in the country"—are coming to Los Angeles and he urged a policy of "being on the job" in order to compete with the newcomers. "Always be at your post," he said.

The motion picture produced last year for the national convention at Cleveland, O., was shown, as many of the salesmen had never seen this film, "The Romance of Real Estate."

It was voted by the membership of the salesmen division to have two meetings in April.

F. B. Burns, chairman of the division, will announce his committees in the near future.

ODGE TO BUILD NEW CLUBHOUSE

range Odd Fellows to ect Fine Structure on Chapman Avenue

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, April 5.—Prepared to add to Orange's skyline another building, the I.O.O.F. Lodge today approved plans for a three-story building to be located on the northeast corner of Chapman avenue and Orange street.

Newton Thornton, Santa Ana architect, has been engaged to draw the plans for the building. The structure will be built on property having a frontage of approximately 66 feet on Chapman avenue and 118 feet on Orange street. The premises are now occupied by a number of frame buildings.

According to Mr. Thornton, the plans call for a $100,000 structure, the main floor of which will be devoted to store rooms modeled on the latest lines. A main lodge room will be located on the second floor. A feature of the lodge building will be an elaborate ballroom and combination banquet hall with adjacent kitchen facilities. When completed the structure will rank with the leading lodge buildings in Southern California, and stand as a monument to the progressiveness of the Odd Fellows of this city.

TO BUILD SCHOOL

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GARDENA, April 5.—Residents of Magnolia Park recently made application to become a part of the Los Angeles school district. Their petition has been accepted and it is understood that during the summer a $30,000 school building is to be erected in Magnolia Park.

BUY before this original price opportunity is lost forever NOW

"After thoroughly combing the city and checking up on its development I am buying four lots in Westwood because I can see a quicker future for it than any other district."
—Wealthy Montana Land Owner.

"In my opinion Westwood offers the last great opportunity in the most desirable foothill section of Los Angeles at unusually low prices. It has a brilliant future for home or investment. My lot in Westwood is not for sale."—Wife of Prominent Chicago Business Man.

"I consider my lots in Westwood the best investment I ever made. I believe I will make bigger profits, with absolute safety, here than in any other section of the city."—Prominent Pittsburg Banker.

"The fact that I can buy in Westwood today at original prices is enough for me. I have only to watch the activity in this new community to realize that original prices will soon be 'ancient history' and will bring handsome profits in the near future."—Wealthy Nebraska Farmer.

"I have just purchased the highest priced Westwood Wilshire Boulevard corner and expect to make several hundred per cent on my investment within a comparatively short period."—Sales Manager Large Local Financial Institution.

"Not only am I buying in Westwood to the limit of my ability, but I am advising all of my Eastern friends to do the same. I see Westwood as the last great original price opportunity in the most desirable district in the path of the biggest growth Los Angeles can ever offer."—Well Known Illinois Professional Man.

There is no substitute for—
Westwood
The Second Hollywood

You can't push the Mountains back—

—nor can you push the ocean further from the shore. Westwood is the last great desirable property between Los Angeles and the West Beaches.

Experts state that there is not enough land remaining in this desirable section to take care of the NORMAL DEMAND that is positive for this property. When this property is gone there can be no more!

No wonder then that the men with vision are making Westwood their Chief Investment.

Act Today!

Experts—men and women with vision from all over the Nation—need only to see Westwood to recognize it as "America's Greatest Opportunity." And they back up their belief with their dollars. These Eastern men and women are quicker to see the opportunity of Westwood than many who live here. They are in line to make the big profits which some local people are overlooking.

Get in the Profit-Line Before It Is Too Late

Beverly Glen Boulevard, 100 feet wide, in the heart of Westwood's most desirable development, according to experts, is THE BIG OPPORTUNITY TODAY. Have you ever before been offered frontage on a 100-ft. boulevard of the importance of Beverly Glen for anything like the original prices and easy terms we are offering today? Beverly Glen is designed to be one of the most important cross boulevards in the city. Remember the profits which Western Avenue made. Beverly Glen Boulevard intersects Beverly, Wilshire, Santa Monica and Pico Boulvards!

The Profits Are Waiting NOW!

If you could buy a lot adjacent to one of the big Hollywood studios today for one-tenth of what it was worth and on easy terms, you would act in a hurry! Then realize that EVERY LOT we are offering you in Beverly Glen District is adjacent to what the producer predicts will be the GREATEST STUDIO ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Simple Honest Construction Typified in Home Design

PLAN OF HOME GIVEN THOUGHT

BY H. O. SEXSMITH

It is common talk among architects that the present decade has seen an awakening in the United States of an increasingly intelligent appreciation of good design in small houses. It is also unfortunately true that a vast portion of the money spent on small houses is expended for poorly built houses both in design and construction.

However, good examples are becoming more and more frequent and serve as stimulants to general upward trend. A well designed and carefully studied house goes up in a neighborhood; some one who is about to build senses the difference between it and the rows of mediocre houses that line the streets near-by. He goes to his trusted builder and instructs him to produce "a house just like that." The builder sails into the task of reproducing the other house.

Somehow, when the job is complete the two houses do not look alike. Neither the builder nor the owner can understand the difference. Only the architect who has spent patient hours of study on numberless elements that go into the making of a well-planned house is able to tell the difference. At any rate, there is a healthy sign in this frequent copying of better houses. There was a time when the better house was thought "too plain."

HONEST BUILDING

People are beginning to see the beauty in simple honest construction and are leaving out the jimcracks to relieve the cause of good design, and incidentally their pocketbooks. There is ample precedent for this trend toward simplicity in small-house design.

Our early Atlantic seaboard architecture is rich in examples which put to shame our modern showy attempts. All of these old houses are homelike and sincere in their atmosphere and have an air of simple gentility that true Americans love. Where could one go for a truer source of inspiration for the design of an ideal home?

The design presented today is one of many submitted in recent competition held by the Community Arts Association of Santa Barbara. It carries the spirit of the old New England houses, yet by intelligent planning has been made to fit all modern needs. The exterior of the house can be equally successful in wood, stucco or brick for its masses conform to sound principals of composition.

Of course, the plan is different from that which would have fitted the requirements of our forefathers. In some respects it would not be in keeping where climatic conditions are different than those of the mild Pacific Slope. It would meet admirably the needs of a majority of families and although small and compact, nothing has been sacrificed which would be conducive of privacy in the service portions of the house.

PLAN IS IDEAL

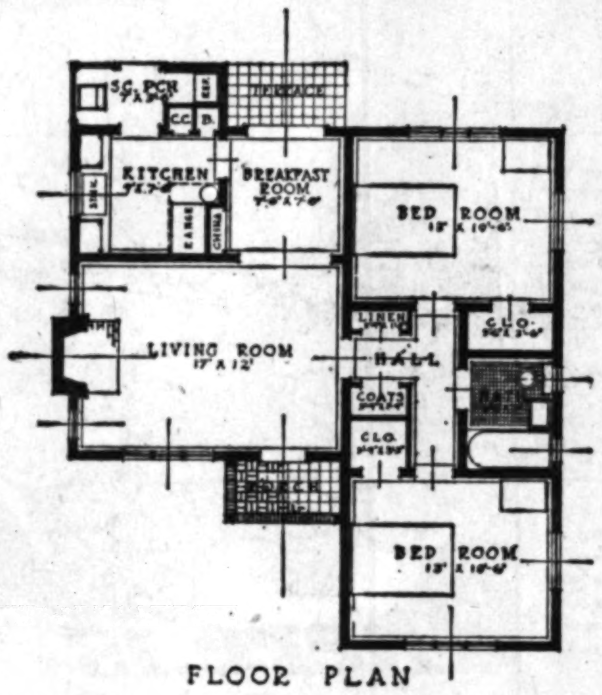
The plan is ideal for California in that all important rooms have two exposures giving more light and air. The front door is so placed that the circulation from the kitchen to the door will not interfere with the satisfactory grouping of furniture at the fireplace end of the room. The social life of the house generally focuses about the fireplace, and in the small house it is sometimes difficult to avoid encroaching upon the center of the family life.

Location of a coat closet near the living room is a happy thought. The small breakfast nook is a pleasant variation from the traditional Pullman nook. It is an open secret that the word breakfast nook is somewhat a misnomer. A good many housewives have confessed that the dining-room has been woefully deserted where a breakfast nook is a part of the kitchen equipment. The small breakfast room in this plan is a compromise for it is really a small dining-room ample in size for the ordinary needs of the family.

Location of the terrace provides for privacy and induces the family to spend more time out of doors. Californians have not discovered the charm of living and eating out of doors but when they do, architects are going to provide in their plans sheltered outdoor places to accommodate this new phase of family life.



FLOOR PLAN

Ideal for California

Plans for this house were prepared for the Small House Service Bureau under the auspices of the Architectural Club of Los Angeles. This bureau is located in the Metropolitan Exhibit of Building Materials in the Metropolitan Building. K. D. Church is the designer.

NEW COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

W. L. Brent, president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, has announced the personnel of the 1924 business property committee of the organization. L. J. Durnerin, former member of the board of governors, is to be the chairman and the other members are Richard C. Willis, R. V. Morrison, George R. Le Baron and J. W. Wilkinson.

According to the schedule of divisional luncheons to be inaugurated by the board this committee will have charge of either the 22nd inst. or the May 6 meeting for the members interested in a specialized line of real property development.

Mr. Durnerin, the new chairman of the business property committee, was chairman of the board's publicity committee at the time the Realtor, the official magazine of the board, was founded.

Builders' Questions Answered

Question: Will you please advise me as to whether there are any stucco and rock combinations in dwellings? Have never seen any and am wondering whether such a combination would be good-looking. We have a small square stucco house and wish to add a couple of rooms to it. We have all kinds of rock on the place to build with. On account of the position of the drive, which can't be changed without considerable trouble, and the plan of the house, the only place that it seems as if the addition can be put is across the front. Any information that you can give me upon this subject will be greatly appreciated.

Answer: Such a combination as you suggest is very uncommon and we do not know of any dwellings in this vicinty upon which such a combination has been used. It might be worked out, however, in a very attractive manner, but we advise you to consult a reliable architect or builder before attempting to carry out such an idea. Under their supervision or direction the plan might be worked out successfully, whereas, if undertaken without professional assistance the result would likely be unsatisfactory.

Q.: (a) Please send me pamphlets covering requirements for construction and repairs of small houses. (b) My lot is 34x105 and I would like to know if I can raise my house up and make a four-flat building of it? (c) Where can I obtain a copy of the zoning ordinance for Union avenue near Sixteenth street? (d) My house is a large six-room dwelling and on one side of it there is four feet and about eight feet on the other side. Would eight feet be wide enough for a driveway to a garage in the rear, or do I have to have at least ten feet, as my neighbor states? (e) Could I build a small house in the rear providing it is four feet from fences?

A.: (a) We are mailing to you the pamphlets requested. (b) Yes, it is quite possible to raise up your house and convert it into a flat building. If you intend to do this you should consult a reliable architect or contractor. (c) You can obtain a copy of the zoning ordinance you desire from the City Planning Commission at the City Hall. (d) If there is no dwelling in the rear of your house eight feet would be sufficient to comply with the law. (e) For the answer to this question we refer you to the State Housing Act, a copy of which you can obtain from the department of buildings, room 35, City Hall.

Q.: Can you refer me to some recent publication on interior painting? I am particularly interested to know how to obtain effects so much in evidence in the present-day "Spanish stucco bungalow," viz., antique stippling, stenciling, glaze, etc.

A.: We refer you to the Master Painters' Association, room 500, Stimson Building, Spring and Third streets, from which you can secure the information you desire.

Q.: Can you tell me where I can get a book, or books, showing plans for up-to-date Spanish dwellings? What I desire is a book that will give me the plans and specifications for dwellings within the $15,000 range.

A.: We are sending you the information by letter.

Q.: I have a property on the rear of which is a large garage with only two doors. I wish to enlarge the garage and would like to know approximately how much it would cost to have two more doors cut.

A.: Two carpenters should cut and hang two large garage doors in one or two days, so the cost of the workmen's time plus the cost of material would be your only expense.

Churches are Quick to Act

FIVE of the largest churches in Los Angeles have reserved sections in Graceland. Ministers or church officers representing 59 churches divided among six denominations, have endorsed the Graceland Plan and are presenting it to their congregations.

And they all have voiced the sincere belief that the plan devised by the Founders of Graceland to restore to the church its "God's acre" will be adopted in every American city in which the uncompromising law and the ruthless quickstep of marching population have condemned the old churchyard, engulfed the city cemetery, compelling the dead to make room for the living.

The quick response of the churches to the announcement of The Graceland Plan was a surprise even to the group of far-seeing men that conceived it.

It proved to the Founders of Graceland that they were right in their belief, that the bonds of friendship are not severed at the grave; that it is a deep and sweeping truth that the wounds of the heart are soothed by the ability to lay in lasting rest a friend among his friends; that our sentiments are still stirred by the memory of the simple churchyard scene, the solemn, silent procession to a fresh grave in that hallowed acre where each stone bears a name that is attached to some sunny chapter in our lives.

Said one pastor: "The Graceland Plan was an inspiration. The sinking life needs the feeling, I will be cared for when I am gone. My friends will be around me. I will not be alone. We are all so accustomed to the great atmosphere of friendship that we live unconscious of its worth until our last hours. And at that time, more than at any other, we must be able to feel that friends are around us. At this Easter Season it is fitting for us to remember that our care for our friends must not end at the grave. The Graceland Plan will make the people feel closer to their churches than they have ever felt since the abandonment of the church graveyard took the care of their loved dead out of the realm of the church."

Under the plan devised by the Founders of Graceland, not only may churches acquire a section—their own "God's acre"—in Graceland, but a way has been provided for the churches securing a section, to substantially enrich their treasuries.

The cost of caring for the church sections will be borne perpetually by Graceland, as provided by a fund of $300,000 which is to be held in trust for this purpose. In addition $150,000 will be expended on improvements.

The sections in Graceland set aside for churches are being rapidly taken up.

Reservations should be made promptly, as the available acreage is limited.

The former high [illegible] of $281,487 was reached in [illegible] of last year. Twenty-eight [illegible] homes were started during [illegible], with a total valuation of [illegible], or an average of $4912. [illegible] Seven duplex houses were [illegible] during the month, averaging [illegible] each. Permits were issued for two apartment-houses to [illegible] $23,000. Jackson, [illegible] points out that Inglewood's [illegible] as a home community is [illegible] with $166,800 in the [illegible] just closed for homes alone. [illegible] for the coming month [illegible] business buildings is very [illegible] according to the building inspector.

[illegible]HEIM.—Anaheim building [illegible], which slumped to the low-[illegible] in five years during the [illegible] of February and the early [illegible] of March, climbed out of the [illegible] the last day the month [illegible] established for the first quarter of the year a record equal to [illegible] 1923.

[illegible] total for the month of [illegible] reached $315,000, almost [illegible] the $355,000 valuation [illegible] during the months of [illegible] and February. The $670,- [illegible] for the quarter compares favorably with the $695,000 [illegible] recorded for the first [illegible] of 1923 and is considered [illegible] optimistic outlook, [illegible] the slump so seriously affect-[illegible] construction work here.

The [illegible] was $153,175, as com-[illegible] with $134,118 in 1923 and [illegible] in 1922.

[illegible] for the first three weeks [illegible] forecast that March would [illegible] only a low figure for 1924 [illegible] no permits for building [illegible] costing large sums of [illegible] were issued, this being one [illegible] reason for the small total [illegible] with January and [illegible] of this year, when the [illegible] totals were $219,823 and [illegible], respectively.

[illegible] of eighty-two permits [illegible] during the month, the [illegible] being for new homes [illegible] to the amount of $99,- [illegible] started during the [illegible] business buildings, $41,- [illegible]tions, $6325, and small [illegible] $3980.

REDLANDS—March was another month of gain in Redlands for reports of escrow agents show there was a greater sale of property than ever before, postal receipts showed a gain over the same month last year of about 10 per cent, and building permits showed a gain of about 30 per cent.

Escrow agents say that for the past four months there has been a steady gain in the amount of business they are doing, showing a greater sale of property all the time. Building permits for the month were $47,245, a gain of about $10,000 over last year.

ORANGE—Although March was featured by a slight building slump that reduced building permits to $40,853 for the month, local builders appeared undaunted today as they began laying plans for speeding up construction activities.

The March permits, though light, boosted the total for the first quarter of the year to $208,100, which mark surpasses the corresponding period last year by approximately $23,000. Twenty-four permits were issued during the past month. A comparison with last year's building marks, month by month, discloses that January, this year surpassed January last year by almost $50,000, while February last year shaded the same month this year by less than $3000, and March last year bested March of this year by nearly $32,000. The total for the first quarter of last year, however, reached only $185,075, as compared with $208,100 for this year.

UPLAND—Ten building permits were issued by City Clerk Ernest C. Mehl during March and represented an expenditure of $19,450. A gain of approximately $25,000 was made in the building total of the first quarter of this year over the first three months of 1923. Permits issued during the quarter just closed represented an expenditure of $69,900.

Of the ten permits issued, four provided for the erection of new dwellings. The permit providing for the greatest outlay was that to the Nazarene Church for building an addition to cost $10,000.

BAKERSFIELD—By coincidence, the aggregate valuation of construction permits issued during March by City Building Inspector R. H. Hubbard and the valuation of permits issued during the preceding month differ but $31.12, according to the inspector's monthly report which was submitted to City Manager James Ogden this morning.

The total valuation of permits for this month is $74,312, as compared with $74,343.12 for February. One hundred and forty permits for building, electrical, plumbing and sign construction were issued this month. This is but four more than last month, when 136 were issued.

TAFT—A sudden increase in building permits for Taft was noted during the month of March, according to the report of George Odell, building inspector. The total is $16,190—a substantial increase over the first two months of the year.

A large sum was spent by L. C. Thomas in erecting a house and garage on Lucard street near Fourth. The expenditure will be near $3000.

The Union Tool Company has erected a machine shop on Supply Row at a cost of $1500.

The rest of the total was divided into small sums, spent for additions and alterations.

HUNTINGTON PARK, April 5. The month of March has proved to be the largest building valuation of the month so far during the present year, ninety permits being issued during the month, with a total valuation of $196,925, or an average of $2,188.05 for each permit. This brings the number of permits issued for present year up to 259, with a total valuation of $482,461.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY, April 5.—That expansion and development feature the program throughout San Fernando Valley becomes apparent when the record of building permits issued for the month of March is examined. The total of new building improvements in the valley for the single month was $777,929, but this does not include work in county territory, for which no permits are required. Much of the new building is in connection with the poultry industry, which is daily becoming of more and more importance in those sections where tests have demonstrated that it can be carried on with success and at profit.

In the segregation of the totals no attempt has been made to give the record for Owensmouth, Reseda, Zelzah and other smaller communities— portions of the Los Angeles city annexation district—scattered throughout the valley. Figures for the several communities for permits issued during March are as follows:

|---|---|
| Burbank | $293,068 |
| Lankershim | 111,933 |
| Van Nuys | 107,635 |
| San Fernando | 73,310 |

The Burbank total for the month was nearly double that for the corresponding month of last year, when the aggregate was $167,365. The first quarter of the year gives the grand total of $483,295.

During the quarter 1102 permits were issued in the valley annex. The total improvement represented by these was $1,229,135.

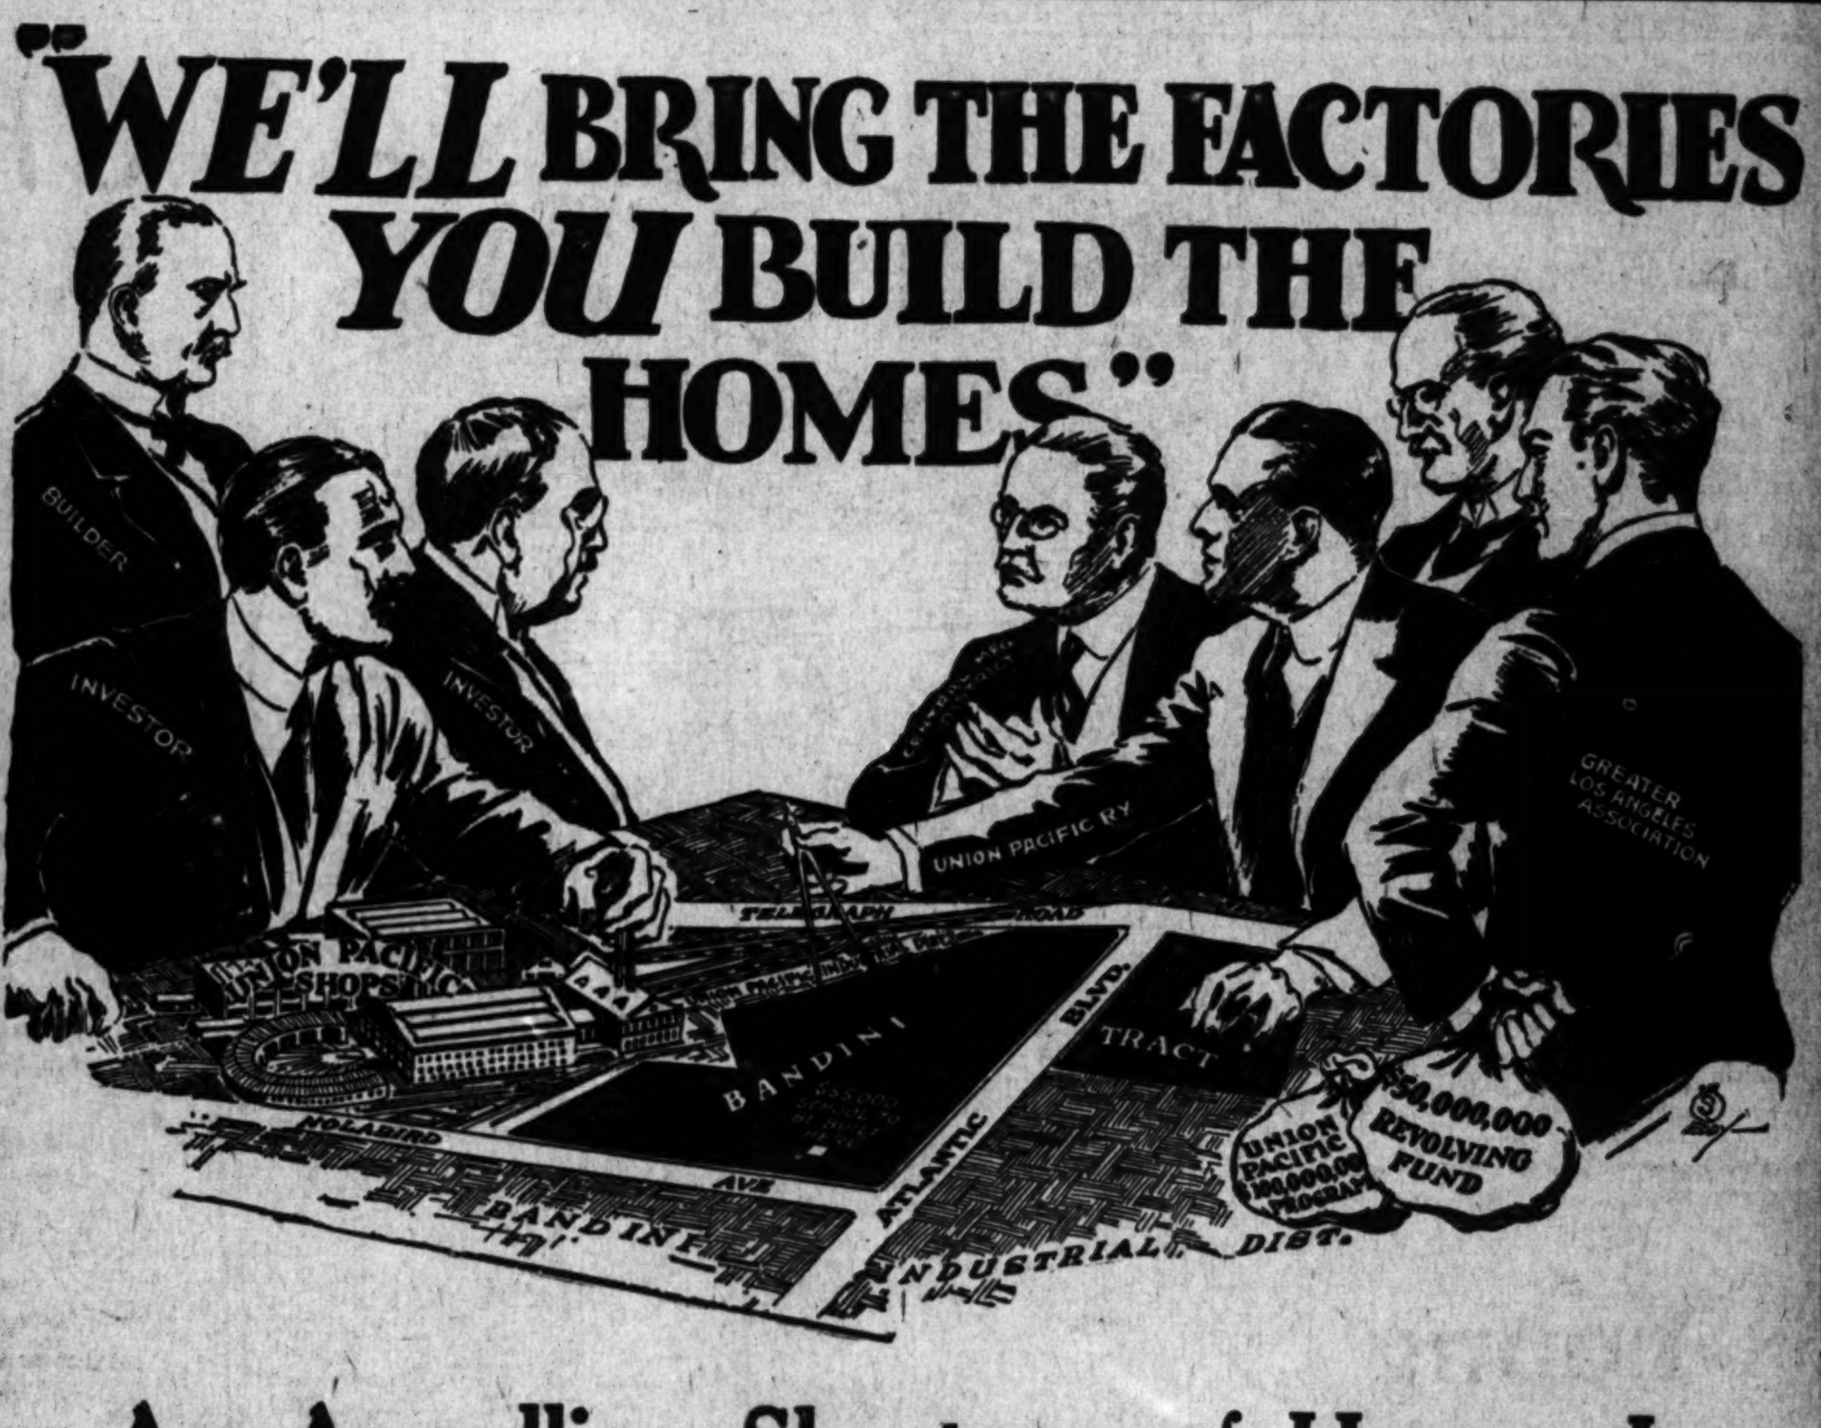
In the Lankershim zone the figures for the quarter were $285,339.

The Van Nuys district had during the first quarter new buildings to a total of $544,317.

SOUTHGATE.—The number of building permits for the month of March reached fifty-seven with a total valuation of $102,200. The total for the first three months of the year have reached 196 permits with a valuation of $375,944. Although records of the number of permits and valuations will not reach the first year until the middle of the present month, it is shown that there have been issued from April 18 last year to March 31 this year, 734 building permits with a total valuation of $1,168,748.

REDONDO BEACH.—Building permits here for the month of March reached a total of $183,335, almost twice the amount issued for March of last year. Practically all of the permits taken out were for homes and apartment buildings.

TULARE COUNTY.—March was a low building month in Tulare county, owing to the foot-and-mouth epidemic. Tulare led with $19,705 as against $15,925 for February, with a total of $63,309 for the first three months of the year. Visalia reports $13,000, divided into six dwellings, totaling $15,150, the balance being small buildings and repairs. The permit for a $12,000 Christian church is expected in April as wrecking of the old structure is well under way. Lindsay had seven permits totaling $16,119, of which remodeling of the Southern Pacific depot amounted to $12,644. Small houses and repairs made the balance. Exeter had small residences, etc., totaling $3500; Dinuba, one house and repairs amounting to $1070. Porterville continued construction on previous permits, issuing nothing new except for shacks.



An Appalling Shortage of Homes Is Today Threatening East Los Angeles

$8,000,000 Worth of Factories Have Purchased Sites and the Rush Has Just Started!

For every factory here 20 more will come!

The 1000-acre Union Pacific industrial program is for $100,000,000 worth of industries.

The Central Manufacturing district program is for $50,000,000 worth of industries! Over $7,000,000 have actually been expended in this district to date.

In the Bandini Industrial district there is room for at least $50,000,000 worth of factories, and sites for $8,000,000 worth have already been purchased by the following big concerns: The Los Angeles Cotton Oil Company, Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, St. Louis Brass Foundry Company, Lily Foundry Company, Los Angeles Foundry Company and Hilgartner Marble Company. Two are building now.

Just These 6 Factories Will Bring Over 6000 Persons to the District—Think of Their Purchasing Power!

They will purchase $250,000 worth of merchandise per month—$3,000,000 per year! That's enough business to support at least 300 flourishing retail stores. Roger Babson, statistical expert of world renown, declares that workers spend 70% of their earnings within one mile of their homes.

These 6000 persons call for 1300 dwellings in homes, bungalow courts or apartments. They must have at least 700 hotel rooms.

These are the requirements of the 6 industries that already have bought sites here. Multiply these requirements by 20 or 25 and you get some idea of the needs which will develop in this district as its combined $200,000,000 program is carried out.

That Homes Will Be Built In Time— We Are Prepared To Help You Finance Construction!

To take care of the children which these industries will bring here the school board has ordered a $55,000 school constructed this summer in the heart of Bandini subdivision. Bandini subdivision, entirely surrounded by these huge industrial districts, is the only convenient place for their thousands of workers to live. Men and corporations worth many millions have started these industrial districts because they know that they are necessary and the time is ripe.

As sure as day follows night these industries will continue to come and their employees will want to live in the most convenient place—Bandini.

We are particularly interested in investors who will build, because these thousands of men must have homes and they must be built at once. We are prepared to help you finance construction.

Improvements Going in Now

They include macadam streets, concrete curbs and sidewalks, electricity, gas and water. Crews are working 7 days out of the week.

PORTERVILLE FIRMS NOW IN NEW QUARTERS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

PORTERVILLE, April 5.—During the last week several changes were made in Porterville office and business locations. A. Nernoff moved his tailoring establishment into rooms on Main street, just vacated by the Porterville Chamber of Commerce. The office of that organization is now located at 526 Main street in quarters formerly occupied by the office of the Valley Transit Company. E. M. Hammond, photographer, moved into the building vacated by Nernoff.

The Porterville Electric Company has purchased the lease on the building formerly occupied by the Kirk Millinery Store. Both concerns have been housed in the same building, a partition separating the two. This will be removed and the electric store enlarged. J. F. Canty of this city owns the building occupied by these two concerns and reports that a number of applications were made for the lease, indicative of demand for store space in Porterville.

History of Sister Municipalities Brings to Light Important Developments Accomplished During Past Score Years in Many Activities

BY HELEN STARR

In the verdant valley between Chino and Corona, all signs of the pueblo and branding iron have disappeared, and in its place the mesa of today is cultivated with fields of alfalfa and orchards heavily laden with golden oranges and lemons which hold more charm for the newcomer than the unadorned plains of half a century ago.

Corona is widely known as "The Circle City." When it was decided to place the South Riverside section on the market, H. C. Kellogg of Anaheim in 1886 drove a stake at the intersection of Sixth and Main streets and extended a line in a large circle around the territory he proposed to include within the confines of Corona. This circle is now a wonderful 100-foot wide macadamized boulevard bordered by beautiful pepper trees, orange and lemon groves. Auto racing drivers have come from all parts of the world to race on this three-mile circular boulevard, and it was on this track that "Wild Bob" Burman went to his death.

Corona is fifty miles from Los Angeles on the inland route to San Diego. The town lies at a 1000-foot altitude on the slope of the Santa Ana Mountains where there is an abundance of cool mountain water and air that is dry and healthful. The town is served by the Santa Fe and Pacific Electric railways and by three motor-bus lines. In 1920 the town had a population of 4000 and, according to a census recently completed, the figures show 5680.

LEMON CENTER

Corona is the largest lemon shipping center in the United States. Citrus crop returns last year amounted to $2,775,000, two-thirds of this coming from lemons. Some 3500 acres of lemons and 2500 acres of oranges lie in the immediate vicinity of Corona. California's lemon shipments averaged 9000 cars for five years prior to 1923, in 1921 the high mark of 11,800 being reached. The country's total consumption of lemons has not passed 13,000 cars per annum and the yearly increase, though steady, is not large enough to insure an outlet for the coming record-breaking crops.

Lemon presses have a capacity of 200 tons a day and additional crushing rolls are being installed to keep the oil yield high. Storage tanks with a capacity of more than 200,000 gallons of juice are ready for service while equipment changes now under way will permit processing of juice from more than 175 tons of lemons daily. In the acid-finishing plant, steady runs over long periods have been found economical and as a result the capacity has been set at a point corresponding to about 150 tons of lemons a day.

LARGEST PLANTS

Corona has two of the largest lemon by-products plants in the country representing an investment of $350,000. The Exchange By-Products Company, with ninety-five employees, has an output of 105 tons of citric acid a month, seven tons of lemon oil and is now in position to produce twenty tons of pectin each month. The United Chemical Company, with twenty-three employees, has an output of thirty-four tons of citric acid each month. Corona has eight packinghouses employing nearly 1000 persons. Some 3500 acres of deciduous fruits including peaches, pears, apples and apricots produce $210,000 annual income.

Soil in the Corona district is very deep and fertile, being made up of decomposed granite mixed with alluvial deposits washed from the mountains and the humus of decayed vegetation on the floor of the mesa. This character of soil absorbs and retains moisture, even in the driest seasons, and a mellow subsoil provides germinating qualities. Trees root and thrive rapidly, yielding crop after crop with less occasion for fertilizing than is usually employed in other sections.

Real estate subdivisions around Los Angeles and the discovery of oil have already encroached upon agricultural lands. Two agricultural industries affected by this movement include dairies and poultry ranchers. The Corona district is benefited by this new migration, with more than 1200 dairy cows at Corona, bringing in an annual income of $1,650,000. A short time ago cattle on these plains were commonly referred to as "long horns," but today the cattle are being reared and improved under scientific methods in a climate ideal for pastoral purposes.

Situated near Los Angeles on excellent roads, it is possible for Corona to bring milk and eggs to market quickly. Due to co-operative efforts, one of the successful producers' marketing associations of poultry products in the United States operates in Southern California with a membership of more than 700 producers. This co-operative organization has the largest plant for the exclusive handling of eggs in the world. The success of this association makes the world the market for Southern California eggs. A modern egg-packing establishment operated by the Whitehead Brothers of Riverside is serving eggs to a hundred cities and towns in three different States.

EGG PRODUCTION

Corona's investment of $116,733 in 42,000 hens produces an income of $170,000 annually. In addition to primary profits desired from hens through eggs, another tremendous gain is realized by the territory through added fertility of the soil. Fertilizer from chicken pens is declared to be the best for all kinds of fruit, vegetables and other foodstuffs grown in the soil. Citrus groves can be made to double in production with the proper and continuous application of this fertilizer. Vineyards, deciduous orchards and even alfalfa fields are made vastly more productive by a distribution of this plant food in concentrated form.

Corona has the largest rock-crushing plant in the State, representing an investment of $650,000. This company, the Blue Diamond Company, has 138 employees, and boasts an output of 110,000 tons of building and road crushed rock every thirty days. A $100,000 granite-crushing plant is used exclusively for roofing materials. In the hills near Corona are extensive clay beds used for the production of bricks and pottery. The Master Automatic Heater Company's plant in Corona has an output of 150 domestic heaters a week.

BUILDING RECORD

Building permits for 1922 in Corona were $83,605, while in 1923 they were $343,159, a gain of more than 300 per cent. Some eighty-seven new homes were erected during the last year, including two fine business blocks. Corona has two large grammar schools and a junior high school. A new high school has recently been completed on a fifteen-acre site on West Sixth street.

Five miles of new street paving in Corona and three miles of ornamental lighting, or 285 lights, have been ordered for Main and Sixth streets. These lights are similar to those installed at Riverside.

Corona has three banks, First National, Corona National and Citizens' Bank for Savings. Although market conditions for citrus fruits have not been favorable this year, there has been an increase of 15 per cent in number of bank deposits and an increase of 20 per cent in savings deposits. January, 1924, showed a 10 per cent increase in business over January, 1923.

CIVIC STRUCTURES

Corona has a $25,000 Public Library, a $30,000 City Hall and fire station and a $12,000 Woman's clubhouse. A splendid new country club has been organized with clubhouse and links a short distance from the city. Corona has a daily newspaper, the Daily Independent, and a weekly paper, the Corona Courier.

The Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Lions' clubs are active organizations, while most of the leading fraternal organizations are represented in the town. One of the finest parks in Southern California is situated in Corona, and boasts a baseball diamond, fireplaces for picnic parties, a wading pool for children and other features.

Corona hopes for the completion of Newport Harbor, which will mean deep-water transportation for Corona's soil products. Plans are already under way to join Corona at the north by 8000 acres of fertile land untouched by the plowshare. Further development of Corona's rock quarries is also planned and as Corona is situated only twenty miles from productive Brea oil wells, the town hopes for oil possibilities soon.

CHINO

Chino has a romantic history interwoven with the activities at the famous old Chino ranch house. Many persons, later prominent in the history of California, used to stop at the Chino ranch house on their overland journeys. Some 300,000 head of cattle and 8000 horses used to range on the original ranch and over the present townsite of Chino. Richard Gird, a New Yorker who discovered and developed the mines at Tombstone, Ariz., bought the big Chino ranch of 48,000 acres in 1881. He later divided it and sold part of the big estate to the Chino Land and Water Company.

At present, the Davidson Investment Company of Long Beach is subdividing the acreage around the old ranch house, the latter being remodeled for a smart country club. The valley from Pasadena to San Bernardino is generally known as San Gabriel except for the smooth, green slopes of the old ranch, known as Chino Valley.

Chino is known as the place where everything grows. Local dairymen predict that their section is going to be the milkhouse of Los Angeles. The number of dairies in this section has increased more than 100 per cent in the last year, this being due, it is said, to the fact that lands are cheaper than in the San Fernando Valley. Hines, formerly known as a dairying center, is also losing this industry due to the active subdividing of lands between that town and Long Beach.

LARGE SUPPLY

Twelve trucks travel twice a day between Chino and Los Angeles transporting 15,000 gallons of milk a day. Chino, alone, supplies one-tenth of all the milk used in the city of Los Angeles. The producer gets $100 a can a month. This means that Chino receives $120,000 a month for her milk or practically one and a half million a year.

There are several large tracts in the Chino section to be subdivided. As soon as this is done and the houses and barns built, the production will be largely increased and the growing population of Southern California will maintain a constant demand for this product. The Bost-Johnson Ranch is one of the largest and most modern near Chino. In a distance of five or six miles about Chino there are a large number of dairies milking from 100 to 200 cows a day. Chino is soon to have a large stock sales yard for buyers of stock.

The rich Chino Valley, lying as it does at the foot of the mountains, is one of the finest artesian belts known and has an abundance of water for irrigation supplied by wells from 200 to 400 feet in depth. Chino justly claims the distinction of being the finest alfalfa producing section of the State. Here the farmer cuts six or more times annually, some of the cuts averaging as high as two tons per acre. Some 8000 acres are planted in alfalfa in this district.

BEST ALFALFA

In a national alfalfa contest held in 1919, N. W. Miller, a local rancher, won $1000 cash and a gold medal for growing the most alfalfa on five acres of land without irrigation. Chino has 7500 acres planted annually in grain, much of this acreage producing a second crop, the Egyptian corn, beans or Indian corn following the small grain. This grain and grain hay find an ever ready market.

The growing of walnuts is becoming of great importance in the Chino district. From the local walnut-packinghouse, 600 tons of walnuts were shipped last year while an increase of 25 per cent to 50 per cent is expected this year. The Chino Land and Water Company, looking to the future is planting 640 acres in young walnut trees which will yield in about seven years.

The larger growers of bulbs in California, the Briggs Floral Company, are located at Chino. This concern has twenty acres of gladiola bulbs and has recently installed a sprinkling system at a cost of $5000 which furnishes an inch of rain every week. The Chino Valley Apple Growers' Association produces apples and apple cider which is rated in the prize-winning class at all fairs.

RAPID EXPANSION

The town of Chino itself is growing at a pace which is comparable with the growth of other towns in Southern California. The population for the city is now estimated at 2500 and 5000 for the Chino district. More than $315,000 in building permits were issued last year, $204,000 of this amount being issued the first three months alone. Two splendid grammar schools were erected in Chino last year at a cost of $203,000, while an auditorium was added to the high school group. The town has a library which is a branch of the San Bernardino library and contains 2500 volumes. There are six churches of different denomination, an active Chamber of Commerce with 300 members, a Business Men's Club, Masons, Odd Fellows and other fraternal organizations.

A large canning plant owned by Libby, McNeill & Libby is one of the principal industries in Chino. About 600 persons are employed at this plant during the summer months when apricots, peaches, tomatoes, pimentoes and other fruits and vegetables are in season. The Chino Apple Growers' Association own a packinghouse in which 800 boxes are packed daily. This plant also has a daily manufacturing capacity of 100 gallons of cider; 1000 gallons of vinegar and 2000 gallons of lime sulphur solution.

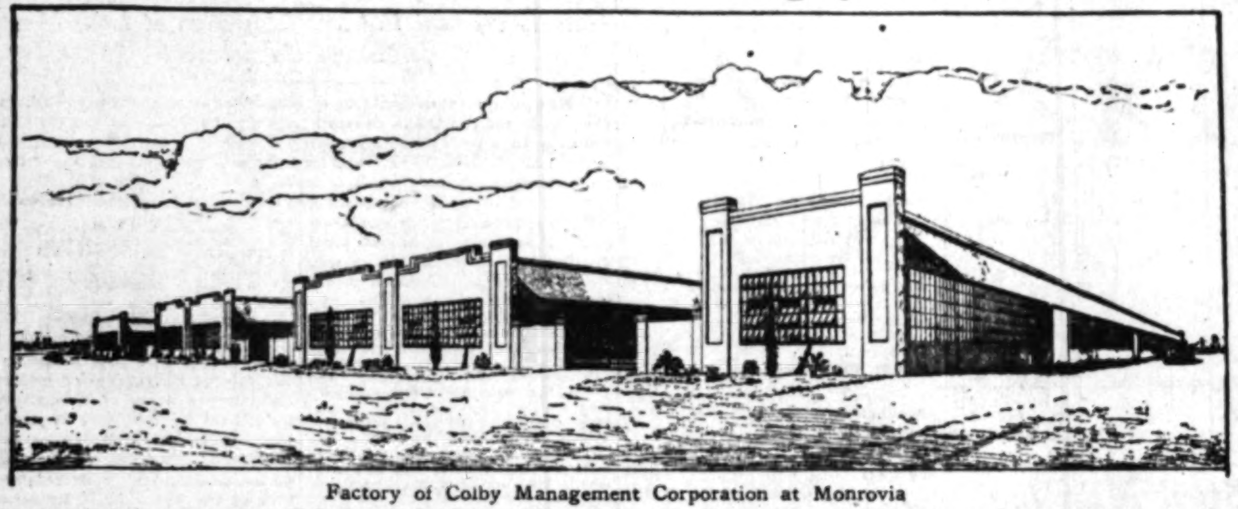
Westype Steel Industrial Buildings for New Plant



Factory of Colby Management Corporation at Monrovia

Five manufacturing companies will be housed in the new plant of the Colby Management Corporation to be constructed at once in Monrovia. The contracts have been let to the industrial department of the Union Iron Works and Westype steel industrial buildings, designed and built by the industrial department of the Union Iron Works are specified.

LOS ANGELES SEEKING LATIN-AMERICAN TRADE

Delegation From Local Chamber to Tour Southern Nations and Make Survey

Los Angeles is to have its due share of Latin-American business if the newly organized trade extension committee of the Chamber of Commerce can accomplish it.

Within a few weeks the Chamber of Commerce will start an emissary down the West Coast of Mexico and Central America under the direction of its trade excursion department, to make a survey of business opportunities in those regions, with special reference to the interest of Los Angeles in them.

In the meantime, however, the trade extension department will make a survey of Southern California business houses to ascertain what firms are, or should be, interested in doing business with the West Coast of Mexico and Central America, what commodities Los Angeles desires to market in those countries and what information about the trade is most desired.

LATIN SURVEY

The man selected to make the Latin-American survey will be one who has covered the territory numerous times and who has the qualifications to obtain the information desired and put it into proper shape.

"We propose to cover practically all of the leading towns from Ensenada to Costa Rica," said Clarence H. Matson, manager of the trade extension department of the Chamber of Commerce. "This will include Ensenada and La Paz in Baja Colifarnia, and possibly Santa Rosalia; Guaymas, Hermosillo, and Navajoa, in Sonora; Culiacan and Mazatlan in Sinaloa, and possibly some of the more important secondary regions, like Mochis, where there is a large American colony and important sugar interests; Tepic, capital of the State of Nayarit, which State is attracting attention because of colonization projects; Manzanillo, gateway to the great interior of Mexico, and from which port the important city of Guadalajara will be reached, with a stop at Colima en route; Acapulco, seaport of the rich State of Guerrero, recently released from rebel domination, and Chilpancingo, capital of the State; and Salina Cruz, Pacific terminus of the Tehuantepec Railway.

SOUTHERN NATIONS

"In Central America, Guatemala City and Quetzaltenango in Guatemala will be covered; Santa Ana San Salvador, and other cities in the rich little republic of Salvador; Tegucigalpa in Honduras; and possibly a number of cities in Nicaragua, and San Jose in Costa Rica."

That there is a large amount of trade to be obtained in this territory if it is properly cultivated, is asserted by those familiar with the West Coast regions.

F. W. Taylor, who has been an active member of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, is home for a few weeks from Salvador where he went several months ago at the request of the government of the Republic of Salvadore to install a number of agricultural experiment stations. More recently, Mr. Taylor has been appointed director-general of agriculture in Salvador and will return to that country within the next sixty days.

MILLION PEOPLE

"That little country of Salvador contains a population of a million people in a territory about the size of Connecticut," said Mr. Taylor.

"It is rich in agricultural resources and exports large quantities of coffee and sugar. There is a large amount of business there for Los Angeles if the business men here will go after it."

Mr. Taylor is advocating an excursion of Los Angeles representatives to Central America, and this may be undertaken next fall, if the survey soon to be undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce arouses due interest.

Mexico, however, probably offers the greatest field for Los Angeles trade now that President Obregon has successfully put an end to the rebellion that has troubled the southern republic for a number of months.

Heretofore railroad and steamship rates have been such as to give practically all the trade of the rich Central Mexican plateau to New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and San Antonio.

TRADE EXTENSION

Instances of how this works were recently cited to the trade extension department of the Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Fred V. Burn, a freight forwarder of Tampico, who is now in Los Angeles and who proposes to open offices here because of the future which he sees for Los Angeles in Mexican trade.

"Butter can be shipped from California through the Panama Canal to New York, and then reshipped to Tampico and sent on to Mexico City for a less freight rate than it can be shipped direct through El Paso or Manzanillo to Mexico City," said Mr. Burns.

"Zinc dust has been frequently shipped from San Francisco through the Panama Canal to Tampico and then by rail to the smelters at Zacatecas cheaper than it can be shipped in any other way.

"This is bound to be changed, however, and within a short time, I believe, it will be possible for Los Angeles to more than meet New York competition all through Central Mexico, and it ought to get the lion's share of Guadalajara trade."

RATE ADJUSTMENTS

This will be brought about by an equalization of rail rates on the Mexican National Railways whereby merchandise can be shipped into Mexico through the port of Manzanillo and thence to practically all the great central region of Mexico in competition with merchandise from eastern and northern cities. It is stated that these new rates will become effective May 1, but will apply only on lines subsidized by the Mexican government.

Another move that is under way is to obtain a steamship rate from Los Angeles to Manzanillo at least 20 per cent less than that from San Francisco.

At the present time Los Angeles has to pay the same freight rates to Manzanillo as does San Francisco, although the distance from Los Angeles to Manzanillo is only 960 miles, compared with 1360 miles from San Francisco to Manzanillo. It is therefore contended that the Los Angeles rate should be 20 or 25 per cent less than the San Francisco rate.

During the year ended June 30, 1923, Los Angeles sold merchandise to Mexico to the value of $4,341,024, but of this amount $1,874,415 was for crude oil that went to Tampico for refining. The other $2,300,000 included practically every kind of merchandise imaginable. Most of this trade, however, was confined to the West Coast.

LIST OF SHIPMENTS

The shipments from Texas and the Middle West by rail may be judged by the following report of carload shipments showing number of cars that went through the gateways of Laredo, Eagle Pass and El Paso in the month of February, this report having been received in the last few days by the trade-extention department of the Chamber of Commerce from the Mexican National Railways:

Aeroplanes, 2; ammunition, 13; arsenic, 1; automobiles, 15; agricultural implements, 2; acid, nitric, 1; acid, muriatic, 1; ash, soda, 7; barrels, empty, 3; benzol, 3; bottles, 4; bridles, 1; box shooks, 7; bags, jute, 1; brick, common, 2; brick, fine, 39; borax, 1; cotton, 53; coffee, 6; cereals, 2; carbide, 2; coal, 17; cardboard, 1; cottonseed cake, 3; copper, ingot, 1; cyanide, 16; crucibles, 1; cattle, 8; coke, 1; clay pipe, 5; cottonseed, 2; clay, fine, 4; dynamite, 6; drums, steel, 1; fruits, 17; flour, 40; furniture, 3; fish, cod, 4; glass, 1.

MANY ARTICLES

Gasoline, 8; grease, soap, 3; grease, lubricating, 2; glucose, 1; groceries, 13; hops, 1; household goods, 2; horses, 3; leather, 3; lard, 62; locomotive, 1; lumber, 73; mules, 2; macaroni, 1; malt, 5; machinery, 39; miscellaneous, 10; meats, refrigerated, 1; nails, 1; oil, fuel, 34; oil, lubricating, 10; oil, vegetable, 10; onions, 1; plumbing goods, 4; pipe, steel, 7; potatoes, 12; paper, 5; paraffin, 13; pianos, 1; propa, mine, 18; rice, 7; rails, 1; shingles, 1; sand, 4; shrimp, 1; steel, construction, 20; sugar, 81; stearine, 1; soap, 2; steel sheets, 4; saddles, 5; salt, 4; ties, railroad, 7; tires, rubber, 2; tobacco, 1; tanks, empty, 3; wheat, 162; wheel, railroad car, 12; zinc, 2.

EL PASO GATEWAY

Of the total of 913 cars, 122 were shipped into Mexico through the El Paso-Juarez gateway, 223 cars through Eagle Pass, and 568 cars through Laredo.

Multiply these figures by twelve and one has an idea of the shipments going across the Rio Grande in a year.

Still greater shipments go in through the ports of Vera Cruz and Tampico from the Atlantic Coast and Europe, and from New Orleans.

This is the business that will be opened of Los Angeles—to a great extent, at least—by the readjustment of rail rates in Mexico and by lower steamship rates down the west coast.

TO WIDEN WILSHIRE

At a meeting last Monday night of the Board of Trustees of Beverly Hills an ordinance was passed providing for the widening of Wilshire Boulevard in Beverly Hills to 150 feet. The majority sentiment in Beverly Hills was for a 200-foot boulevard, but the unwillingness of subdividers on the east and west to promise the dedication of 200 feet caused the trustees to establish that width.

SILK MILLS UNDER WAY AT HERMOSA

Rapid Construction Progress Reported by Head of New Corporation

Construction work on the Golden State Silk Mills, Inc., is making rapid progress at Hermosa Beach. According to E. J. Young, president, with offices in the Story Building; the four buildings now under way will be finished by June 1, and the manufacture of silk will be started by July 15.

The dimensions of the two largest units, twin buildings which will hold the weaving and throwing rooms, are 320x66 feet. The dyeing unit is 60x168 feet. The office building will be three stories in height and will contain the concrete and steel vaults for the safekeeping of the raw silk. The latter's dimensions are 30x48 feet. The total floor space of the buildings now nearing completion is 57,000 square feet. The construction of several other units will be started shortly, and will include machine shops, rest rooms, a cafeteria and other auxiliary buildings. Additional ground for these has been purchased.

The Golden State Silk Mills, Inc., will be the first silk manufacturing plant on the Pacific Coast and will start operations with 200 looms.

CAHUENGA PROPERTY IS SOLD TO COMPANY

Announcement was made by the L. D. Owens Company, realty brokers, of the sale of property at 1633 Cahuenga avenue.

The Hollywood Mortgage and Finance Corporation purchased the property from Marion L. Cooper of San Francisco and are planning the erection of a Class A height-limit office building upon the expiration of the present leases.

The property, the largest holding on Cahuenga avenue between Hollywood Boulevard and Selma avenue, has a frontage of sixty-five feet and a depth of 168 feet.

ARGENTINE COTTON

The Argentine Minister of Agriculture continues active in his efforts to develop the raising of cotton in Argentina, and it is expected that the cotton crop this year will attain 40,000 metric tons, Ambassador J. W. Riddle reports from Buenos Aires.

BURTON NOW LARGE FIRM IN INSURANCE

Realty Concern Develops Business in Industrial and Mercantile Lines

An enviable record is that of Burton & Co., realty men at Tenth street and Western avenue, according to a report submitted by J. A. Negley, manager of the firm's insurance department.

Although the department has been in operation only since last June its volume of business has increased so steadily and rapidly that it now ranks among the first ten, all insurance companies inclusive, in Los Angeles.

In his report Mr. Negley states that by the end of the third year of the department's operation, he expects to have developed a $500,000 annual business. At the present rate of growth, he states, this figure will be reached, if not surpassed.

Because of the company's location in the Burton Building, Tenth and Western, it would be expected that they would deal principally, if not entirely, in home fire insurance for residential property. As a matter of fact, Mr. Negley states, Burton & Co. deal principally in mercantile, manufacturing and automobile lines, in competition with the largest agencies. The firm handles fire, casualty, automobile and accident insurance.

AUTO FIRM TO BUILD

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE COVE, April 5.—A sale has been closed in which the Sierra Machine Company, local automobile and pump dealers, acquired lots on Park Boulevard and Sixth street. These lots, 150 by 140 in size, will be used as site for a new sales and service building, to be constructed during the coming few months. Plans for the building are as yet incomplete and no definite date for start of construction has been set. Mr. Noyes, a member of the firm, states that the architects will shortly submit plans for consideration.

AMERICAN COTTON

A very large business is done throughout Malaya in cotton piece-goods of all descriptions. English manufacturers at present hold a partial monopoly in this trade, but are slowly giving away to the ever-increasing demand for American products, Vice-Consul Richard Ford, Penang, Straits Settlements, reports.

FLOUR FIRM WAREHOUSE

Alco Company Planning New Structure to Be Built in Central Manufacturing District

Another new industry to locate in the Central Manufacturing District of Los Angeles is the Alco Flour Company, which will immediately construct a warehouse and distribution plant on Forty-ninth street near Loma Vista.

The building will be a modern one-story mill constructed warehouse, with approximately 16,000 square feet of floor space, brick exterior, standard type steel sash and trusses and monitor type roof.

As is the case with all industries locating in the Central Manufacturing District, this company will be on tracks of the Los Angeles Junction Railway. This facilitates shipments in and out of the plant and gives service from all trunk lines entering the city without additional switching charges. The business of Alco Flour Company requires a good deal of shipping of products as they represent a large number of milling companies throughout the West and one of their reasons for choosing this site was the exceptional railroad and transportation facilities offered by the Central Manufacturing District.

MILLING COMPANIES

Alco Flour Company represents a large number of milling companies on the Pacific Coast and throughout the Rocky Mountain and Middle West States. They handle a complete line of flours and bakers' supplies, selling direct to bakers, cracker manufacturers, the macaroni trade, restaurants and hotels.

In addition to the new Los Angeles warehouse and distribution plant, they will maintain an office in San Francisco from which the trade in the northern section will be served. Their move into the Central Manufacturing District means they will increase their sales force and expand generally.

L. H. Allen, general manager of the Alco Flour Company, was the founder of the Allen Flour Company of Los Angeles, the largest flour distributing plant west of Chicago. He sold his interest in this business a short time ago to become an official in this new company.

I. V. Pearne, sales manager, has been associated with Crombie & Co. for many years as manager and his extensive acquaintance with the trade will be of great value to the new organization.

OTHER OFFICIALS

Other officers of the Alco Flour Company are F. W. Allen, vice-president; Leonard Chenery, treasurer; Alyssee L. Allen, secretary; L. P. Collette, assistant manager. The H. F. Allen Estate Company of San Francisco, dealing exclusively in securities, is back of this project.

Plans and specifications for the new Alco Flour Company warehouse were handled by Frank D. Chase, Inc., with offices in the Title Insurance Building. Construction work will be started at once and will be in charge of the Frank D. Chase Company.

Negotiations for Alco Flour Company were handled by L. H. Allen, general manager, while F. L. S. Harman, vice-president, and John R. Boyd, sales manager, acted for the Central Manufacturing District.

RED CEDAR CANTS HERE

One-half million feet of red cedar in the form of cants has just arrived at the harbor plant of the Los Angeles Lumber Products Company, it has been announced by Hal Baly, in charge of production for the lumber company.

This is the first shipment of red cedar cants ever to arrive at the harbor, according to Mr. Baly, who explains that in the past redwood shipments have always been in the form of finished lumber. The harbor plant is now prepared to cut red cedar in dimensions suitable and desired by the local trade.

Red cedar, as explained by Mr. Baly, is especially desirable for usage where a lumber capable of withstanding water and dry rot from underground use is demanded. The longevity of red cedar is said to be exceptional in this respect. For general usage red cedar is declared to be similar to that of redwood. It is used extensively for posts, foundation, casket and other similar work.

The shipment was transported from the Northwest aboard one of the company's steel lumber schooners.

HUGE TANKS TO PREVENT FIRE BUILT

Two Vernon Industries Install System Made by Local Firm

Designed to store water for fire prevention sprinkler systems in accordance with the demands of the fire underwriters of the Pacific Coast, two Vernon industrial plants are installing giant water tanks.

In both instances the tanks are of the hemispherical bottom type mounted on high structural towers and were fabricated and are being installed by the Baker Iron Works. The tank of the California Cotton Oil Company, which is being erected this week, is of 50,000-gallon capacity erected on an eighty-foot steel tower, while the steel for the tank for the California Dressed Beef Company already has been fabricated. Erection has been postponed until favorable conditions exist. It is believed the work will be under way within a week.

This second tank also is of 50,000-gallon capacity, but will be elevated on a 100-foot tower. Both tanks are similar in construction to that of the Standard Packing Company, located in the Vernon district, which also was built by the Baker Iron Works and erected two years ago. A similar style tank was recently erected at the Odd Fellows' cemetery and is used for storage of irrigation water.

Officials of the local iron works declare the hemispherical bottom-type of steel storage tanks is becoming more popular in Southern California than the older type of tanks. Increased efficiency and a greater longevity are given as the cause for the increased popularity.

REALTY BOARD HEARS ASSOCIATION SPEAKER

Principal speaker at last Monday night's meeting of the Southwest Realty Board was Glenn D. Willaman, secretary of the California Real Estate Association, who spoke about increased business in Los Angeles.

He stated that during the month of February, 1924, real estate transactions in Los Angeles amounted to more than $136,000,000, which was as large as the amount involved in the sale of automobiles in the United States for the same period.

He also told about the benefits of the new State license law, stating that the trained real estate broker is rapidly becoming a credit to the profession.

IMPROVE FOR PARK

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

TERRA BELLA, April 5.—The property of the Terra Bella Irrigation District, at the corner of Second street and Terra Bella Boulevard, is being beautified and will be converted into a small park, according to Supt. I. H. Althouse. A fine tile-concrete office building was recently constructed at this corner by the district. The lot will be graded and improved with a grove of Balm of Gilead trees in the rear and with lawn and shrubs in front. This improvement will add greatly to attraction of the section.

RAW MATERIALS HERE SUBJECT OF SURVEY

Analyst of Local Institution Studies Underlying Factors in City's Growth of Industry

BY A. T. ANDERSON,

Department of Research and Service, Security Trust and Savings Bank

The industrial development of Los Angeles and Southern California is dependent upon (1) the availability of basic raw materials, (2) a plentiful supply of fuel, water and power at a low cost, (3) an adequate labor supply, and (4) well defined markets and adequate transportation. Such basic raw materials as petroleum, iron ore, copper, lumber, cotton, wool, rubber, silk and sugar, are either readily avaliable within Southern California or can be shipped here in a dependable and economical supply.

At the present time the entire Pacific Coast relies upon the eastern United States for its supply of iron and steel with exception of a small tonnage of open hearth steel produced from scrap metal.

Despite this fact, Southern California affords unusual possibilities for the manufacture of iron and steel because it has directly tributary to it all of the necessary raw materials. For the manufacture of pig iron there is required iron ore, coking coal and limestone. Iron ore deposits are found in Southern California, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Lower California. The principal deposit in Southern California is that found at Eagle Mountain in Riverside county. In addition there are several other deposits of iron ore within a radius of 235 miles of Los Angeles. It has been estimated that there are 200,000,000 tons of high-grade iron ore, and twice that amount of probable ore, in Southern California.

The ore itself is of a high grade containing a large percentage of metallic iron and a small percentage of phosphorus. Analysis shows that the percentage of iron oxide in the ore ranges from 89.3 to 96.1, giving a corresponding metallic iron content of 62.5 to 67.2 per cent. Rarely samples may run as low as 54 per cent and as high as 68.6 per cent. For comparison it may be noted that the ore mined in the Lake Superior district averages about 53 per cent metallic iron.

COKING COAL DEPOSITS

Southern California has accessible to it deposits of coking coal which are reported to be superior to the coking coals used in eastern open-hearth furnaces. The supply is available both on tidewater and in the interior sections of the western States. The principal deposits are located in Utah, Washington, British Columbia and Alaska.

Southern California is abundantly supplied with limestone for its present and future needs. It has been said that enough limestone can be quarried annually in Southern California to supply half the United States with lime. The principal deposits are found in San Bernardino, Riverside and Kern counties.

Copper is the chief metal of the nonferrous group and is one of the basic metals of commerce. Los Angeles has a distinct industrial advantage over most other large cities in having a bulk of the country's supply of this metal concentrated only a few hundred miles away. Located in this area are five of the country's six leading copper producing States, namely Arizona, Montana, Utah, Nevada and California. Arizona, the principal copper producing State of the country, is prepared to furnish 1,000,000,000 pounds of copper a year which would be nearly sufficient to care for the copper requirements of the entire country at the present rate of consumption. In the period of official recorded production, the five copper producing States named above have produced 20,724,576,833 pounds or 69 per cent of the total national production of copper. The figures follow:

PRODUCTION, [illegible]

|  | Pounds. | P'ctge of total. |
|---|---|---|
| Arizona | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Montana | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Utah | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Nevada | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| California | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Total of above States | 20,724,576,833 | 69 |
| Remainder of United States | [illegible] | [illegible] |
| Total United States | [illegible] | 100 |

About one-half of the copper refined by the world is used for electrical apparatus and half of the remainder forms one of the raw materials for brass. Since both copper and brass are essential to our economic welfare the wealth in copper in such close proximity to the city constitutes a distince advantage.

CLOSE TO TIMBER SUPPLY

Los Angeles and Southern California hold a decided advantage over Eastern cities and territories in being relatively close to the only remaining large sources of supply of lumber in the country, namely, the Pacific Coast States. The original stand of virgin timber in the United Staes, according to the United States Forest Service, was approximately 5540 billion feet. Only 40 per cent of this (2215 billion feet) now remains, and of this amount 1141 billion feet are located in California, Oregon and Washington. Figures showing the distribution of the virgin stand of timber in Oregon, Washington and California and the rest of the country follow:

PRESENT STAND OF VIRGIN TIMBER

|  | Billion feet. |
|---|---|
| Oregon | [illegible] |
| Washington | [illegible] |
| California | [illegible] |
| Total Pacific Coast | 1,141.9 |
| Total remainder of United States | 1,073.0 |
| Total United States | 2,214.9 |

From the above figures it will be

HALF MILLION FOR NEW PLANT

Glass Factory Will be Built Within Year

Work is Started on Large Warehouse

Concern Established Here for Several Years

A half-million-dollar glass factory, with the most modern automatic equipment and able to compete in manufacturing costs with the oldest glass factories in the United States, and as fast as equitable freight rates are secured to the distributors of Los Angeles, to extend its market to all points west of the Rockies, is now under rapid construction in this city, and will be completed within the next twelve months, according to W. J. Latchford, president of the Southern Glass Company.

Last week the Austin Company of California, construction engineers, began work on the erection of a $50,000 unit of this great plant, in the shape of a two-story warehouse, 80x160 feet, and which is to be extended to 300 feet in length. This building is of steel and concrete, with steel window sash and concrete floors, rendering it fireproof in conformity with the entire group of buildings which is to be erected as fast as business operations and exigencies will permit.

NEW WAREHOUSE

This new warehouse construction, with storage capacity for eight carloads a day of completed glass wares, is following fast upon the completion of a factory building unit, in which has been installed a battery of five of the latest automatic bottle machines in connection with the improved glass furnaces. This is also a steel building, 60x180 feet, and is to have a second unit of the same size immediately built alongside. In this latter building another battery of five of the automatic machines will be installed, making a total of ten machines—the first automatic glass machines in Los Angeles.

Steel tanks to the number of seven, crowning a series of concrete storage bins, are to be built this year for the storage of raw materials, in addition to 6000 tons storage capacity at the harbor. A powerhouse, machine shop and foundry, and also a two-story office building are included in the plans for this year's construction, rounding out a complete plant, which for expeditious and efficient handling of a large volume of production will compare favorably with the largest plants in the East, is the statement of the officers.

IS ESTABLISHED

The Southern Glass Company has been in operation for a number of years in a small way, and has been building up a business in the manufacture of glass containers for the local makers of beverages and canners of fruits. The growth of these lines of food and beverage manufacture in Southern California opened the way for larger production of glass containers, and after a thorough survey of the local and western markets by W. H. Daum and staff, this firm of industrial experts underwrote the recapitalization of the Southern Glass Company on the basis of $500,000 in all common stock, without preferences or bonds, and furnished the money with which the present building plans are being carried out.

Additional property was secured adjacent to the factory on East Twenty-sixth street, making a total of two and one-half acres, extending through from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-fifth street, and 300 feet south from Minerva. Plans for the new buildings embrace the entire plat of two and one-half acres in a compact group, with direct rail connection with all the railroads entering and serving the city.

COMPANY OFFICERS

The officers of the Southern Glass Company are W. J. Latchford, president and general manager; Baird Marble, vice-president, and Faye G. Bennison, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Latchford declares that with the allowance of commodity rates to Los Angeles shippers on the part of the railroads, giving this city equal advantages with other centers, the glass-manufacturing industry of Los Angeles, and other industries as well, will become shippers throughout the entire West. While confining operation of the plant for the present to the manufacture of everything in the way of glass containers of all kinds, it is expected in the future to include the manufacture of other forms of glasswares, and to take full advantage of Los Angeles' resources in the creation of a large and diversified glass industry here.

STRATHMORE TO HAVE OLIVE PACKING PLANT

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

STRATHMORE, April 5.—Strathmore is practically assured of an olive packing-house. Directors of the California Olive Growers, Inc., have decided to locate their first packing-house here and have announced that they will build one, if sufficient acreage is signed up here by the association.

Proponents of the plan to bring a packing-house to this district declare there is enough unsigned acreage in the district to meet requirements of the association and men are in the field to obtain contracts for the additional acreage. According to officials of the association, the Strathmore packing-house will be one of the finest in the State.

INCREASING OIL

TORONTO—The increase in fuel-oil sales for domestic heating purposes was the subject of special mention at the annual meeting of the British American Oil Companies, Ltd. It was indicated that the amount of business in this department has increased about 50 per cent during the past year. The installation of oil-burning furnaces in residences has given refiners an opportunity to dispose of a greater proportion of their products direct to consumers. The development of this portion of the oil business has made it desirable to store very considerable quantities of fuel oil during the summer months to provide for the heavy demand of domestic users during the winter. This expansion in domestic consumption is opening up a wider market for fuel oil.

INDUSTRY IN CANADA

Current Information Supplied by Natural Resources Service of Canadian Government

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OTTAWA, April 5.—The largest and most powerful radio station in Canada, to be operated by the Canadian National Railway, has been established here, in the Jackson Building, a ten-story structure. A novel arrangement in connection with the station, to insure clearness of reception by listeners-in, is the distance between the studio and the operating-room, the studio being located on the first floor and the operating-room on the roof. The new station will be known as CKCH and will go on the air with a wave length of 435 meters. Arrangements have been made to relay the programs through other stations in Canada.

ALBERTA HIGHWAYS

EDMONTAN (Alta.)—The Alberta Legislature has under consideration the proposal of the Minister of Public Works, for the raising of approximately $3,500,000 for the development of the main highways of the province. The amount suggested will be borrowed on fifteen-year debentures, to be retired by a division of the automobile revenues. The expenditure will cover about 2500 miles of main highway, of which 1975 miles are already built.

DEMAND FOR FARM HELP

TORONTO — Ontario farmers, whose labor is supplied through the government employment service, are commencing to place their requirements, and the demand for experienced farm help is greater than the supply. Wages range from $35 per month. The opening up of spring will bring a flood of requests for help, and the prospects are that there will be a great shortage of farm labor in Canada this year.

ALBERTA COAL

EDMONTON (Alta.)—The Seattle market has been opened up to Alberta coal. Shipments have already gone forward to the Washington city, and if satisfactory rates can be secured a steady market may be the result for the product of the mines west of this city. Alberta is reaching out for new markets for her coal, of which she has enormous supplies, and it is evident that results are being secured.

LEADING GRAIN PORT

OTTAWA — Leading American grain shipping ports for the last three years in the amount of graind handled. Montreal last year shipped 120,031,938 bushels, as compared with 87,130,000 bushels shipped from New York, 41,083,000 bushels from Baltimore, 32,107,000 bushels from Philadelphia, 23,793,804 bushels from New Orleans, 22,563,731 bushels from Vancouver, B. C., and 17,710,371 bushels from St. John, N. B.

During the past year a very considerable increase in the amount of grain shipped from Vancouver has taken place, and additional elevator accommodation now being provided will enable the port to take care of a larger proportion of the western grain. Montreal is an interior port and closed for five months of the year. In the seven months, however, it handles approximately 50 per cent more grain than New York does in the twelve months.

FOREST PRODUCTS

TORONTO.—The almost innumerable industries in which wood in some form enters as raw material is making a heavy demand upon the forests of Ontario. During the present lumbering season it is estimated that 408,000,000 feet of timber, 2,176,000 railroad ties and 649,700 cords of pulpwood will be taken out from crown lands in this province alone. There are about 30,000 men and 10,000 horses engaged in the work of getting out forest products in Ontario. Large areas of hardwood timber await the coming of new industries where this material may be utilized, and much of this harwood timber is ready for cutting.

MINERAL PRODUCTION

MONTREAL. — With the exception of 1919 and 1920 the mineral output of Quebec province last year was the largest ever attained, amounting to $20,336,985. The lower values of the present are almost entirely responsible for the fact that last year's output did not hold first place.

One of the principal minerals of the province, and one in which Quebec holds largely a monopoly, is asbestos. The year 1923 was a record year as to the quantity of asbestos shipped. It amounted to 216,804 tons, as compared with 179,881 tons in 1920 the previous record production. Owing to a fall in the prices, the value is considerably less for 1923 than for 1920; but even then the average price for 1923 was $33.97 a ton, as compared with $27.52 for 1912 and $28.04 for 1913, the two years preceding the war period. Moreover, it is to be noted that the lower qualities were more in demand than the long fibre grades, the latter having had to be stored as stocks on hand. Had all the asbestos been marketed at the ruling prices the average price per ton would have been $42. It is interesting to note that a new method of extracting asbestos rock is being developed by a company Selective Treatment, Ltd. on the principle of separating the fibre from the crushed rock by water, instead of the old method by a suction current of air induced by fans. The results of the new method are said to be very satisfactory.

INCREASES COAL OUTPUT

HALIFAX (N. S.)—In his report to the Legislature the Provincial Minister of Mines states that the total output of the coal mines of that Province for 1923 was 6,179,690 tons, an increase of over 1,500,000 from the previous year. But for the interruption of production owing to a strike the output would have been much larger. Considerable headway is being made in the forwarding of coal to St. Lawrence ports, and last year this trade increased by 500,000 tons. Extensions are being made to coking plants, with the object in view of supplying a rapidly growing market for coke as a substitute for anthracite. Plans are being suggested for the establishment of coking plants in interior cities for making use of Nova Scotia coal. The prospects of a large development seem exceedingly bright.

CANADA FLOUR

VANCOUVER (B. C.) The Norway-Pacific motorship Theodore Roosevelt will arrive here late in March to load a full cargo of wheat for Norway. On the 30th inst. the motorship Borgaa, of the same line, is expected to load 3700 tons of flour and complete with wheat, all for Norway delivery. This adds another proof of expansion of the Western Canada flour markets throughout the world. England, Scotland, Japan, Ireland, China, the South Seas, France, Belgium and now Norway buy the finished product of the western grain fields.

ELECTRIC BONDS

VANCOUVER (B. C.) — The large oversubscription of the recent issue of bonds by the British Columbia Electric Railway Company in England tends to show the confidence of British investors in the public utilities of British Columbia. The issue was for £770,000 and applications for the bonds amounted to over twenty-two times the issue. Applications from the company's own shareholders took the entire issue.

N. A. Leist, representative of the Steel Fabricating Corporation of Michigan City, Ind., is in Los Angeles, in connection with a number of Stefco ready-built steel buildings this firm is furnishing for the Western Refining Company. Mr. Leist is a guest of Spencer B. Lane, president of the Steel Service Corporation with offices in the Citizens' National Bank Building. The Steel Service Corporation is the local representative for Stefco buildings in California and adjoining States.

Mr. Leist who is much impressed with this city, and its industrial possibilities, said "from what I have seen since my coming a few days ago, perhaps only half has been told about Los Angeles and its future, not only as an industrial center for the great Southwest and Pacific domain, but also with reference to the Far East. You have a wonderful harbor, and I can seen no reason why Los Angeles should not become the principal port on the Pacific for the Far East, which we all know, has marvelous possibilities in trade and commerce."

Anaheim to be Represented at Planning Meet

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ANAHEIM, April 5.—The annual National City Planning Conference, which is to open in Los Angeles on the 7th inst., will be attended by several members of the local board of trustees and an exhibit of views of the Anaheim City Park and swimming pool, together with maps and plans, will be displayed, according to an announcement made today.

Declared to be one of the most beautiful municipally owned city parks in the Southland, the views of the local playground are expected to attract wide attention, since the two principal features of the park, the swimming pool and lily ponds, are excellently shown.

Photographs of the swimming pool, taken on the day of the official opening, will be displayed together with plans followed in the construction of the plunge. O. E. Steward, City Manager, and Howard Gates, "dady" of the city park, will be among the delegates to the planning meet.

HOLLYWOOD RESIDENCE SOLD FOR HUGE SUM

Considerable interest was created last week in the sale of the residence of Walter L. Dodge at 950 King's Road. The property was purchased by T. M. McKenna, through the Hollywood office of the Frank Meline Company. Sale of the property is considered one of the largest and most important transactions of its kind in Hollywood since the transfer of the Bernheimer residence six months ago.

Mr. Dodge, the original owner, built on the property nine years ago. The reason for his choice of this location was the unusual view of the mountains and ocean possible from the house. Though the surrounding property has built up considerably since this house was erected, the view has remained undisturbed and is still one of the finest in Hollywood.

The house, which comprises fourteen rooms, servants' quarters, laundry and garage, is of Aztec design, and is of hollow tile, concrete and steel construction. The exterior is of white plaster and is pierced by large windows designed to take advantage of the view.

P. J. Dillon of the realty company handled the negotiations for both parties in the deal.

Holsum Bakery Erects New Plant on Beverly

Architect's Sketch of Establishment

The new Holsum building is of Spanish renaissance type, designed especially in harmony with the artistic environment of the community in which it is located. It is a French gray, pebble dash with red tile trim. The bakery will have a capacity of 150,000 loaves daily. Bread will be baked in an 80-foot gas-fired traveling oven, with an hourly capacity of 6500 loaves. It is expected that operations in the new plant will commence June 1, and immediately thereafter the company will begin the construction of a new half-million-dollar plant at the corner of Washington and Hooper, just south of its present structure.

Plans Formed for Anaheim Industry Meet

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ANAHEIM, April 5.—Plans for the forthcoming industrial land conference to be held in Anaheim under the direction of the California Real Estate Association were virtually completed yesterday in Los Angeles by the board of directors of the association who met with three representatives of the local realty board who will have charge of the Anaheim arrangements on May 17, the opening day of the conference.

Tentative plans call for a conference at the Elks' clubhouse where more than 300 industrial and realty men from all parts of Southern California will make their headquarters for the event. This will be followed by the balance of the day at the California Valencia Orange Show when the Chamber of Commerce will take an active part in the entertainment of the guests.

JAPANESE SILK GOODS

The exports of Japanese silk goods from Kobe in the calendar year, 1923, are reported by Japanese press dispatches to have included 560,000 pounds of habutae, valued at 16,626,000 yen; 9,700,000 yards of Shantung silks, worth 12,437,000 yen, and 1,577,000 yards of crepe de chine and silk crepe with a value of 2,893,000 yens.

INGLEWOOD PLANT STARTS

New Equipment Put Into Operation at Lath Manufacturing Establishment

New equipment designed by officers of the company this week began production for the Hicks Dovetail Lath Company, one of the big additions to Inglewood's rapidly growing industrial district on Redondo Boulevard. This concern, with its kilns and yards, covers more than an acre of its two-acre property there.

The product is a composition lath, for both exterior and interior construction, fashioned from gypsum and sawdust and as well as fire retardent chemicals whose secret is the property of the company. The product competes with both wooden and metal lath, meeting building restrictions requiring the latter.

The company installing the plant has recently been reorganized and all the additional capital concentrated in the new equipment, which is declared by production engineers to mark an epoch in lath making, due to the improvements that effect a marked economy in production and overhead costs. This equipment has been evolved by Leo Calkins, secretary and treasurer of the company, and his brother, A. B. Calkins. Henry Zilligitt is president of the company, and L. O. Calkins, president of the Inglewood Mercantile company, the largest mercantile establishment in the community, is the vice-president. Other directors include W. W. Hodgkins, president of the Inglewood Manufacturing Company, and Henry Anderson, vice-president of the Inglewood Savings Bank.

Factory to Make Pavements Is Completed

ASPHALT PLANT IS COMPLETED

to Manufacture Pavement Here

Occupies Twelve Acres in Glendale

Establishment Operated by Electricity

Charles and George K. Thompson, engineering contractors and members of the Southern California Contractors of America, yesterday announced the completion of their asphalt pavement manufacturing plant, one of the largest capacity outfits in Southern California, located at Glendale.

The plant was designed by T. Gerow, designing engineer of National Pavement Corporation of America, and was built at a cost of approximately $65,000. It is of the most modern type and was planned and built to manufacture any kind of asphaltic base and surfacing material.

TWELVE-ACRE PLANT

The plant is located upon twelve acres of property owned by Charles and George K. Thompson and their associates, Charles U. Heuser and O. Packard. The actual plant and its offices occupy but a very small portion of this land, but the property was purchased so that the soil used in the manufacture of paving material might be excavated upon the premises of the plant.

The operation of the plant is of a very simple character. The soil, plowed up by teams, is dumped in a large bin and from there carried by means of a belt elevator to a bunker. From the latter the soil passes through a screen and enters a long revolving circular "dryer" which relieves it of all moisture. The "dryer" is heated by means of a powerful oil flame and the soil, after being thoroughly dried, emerges from it at a temperature of approximately 300 deg. It is then carried from the "dryer" by a conveyor system to the top of the plant where it enters bins and is separated by a revolving screen into various sizes. After the latter process it is weighed, mixed with the proper amount of asphalt and then dumped into trucks which carry it, still hot, to the site of the paving activity.

ELECTRIC OPERATION

The entire plant is electrically driven, separate motors being used for each unit. It was constructed with a view of providing the best possible working conditions for the plant employees and as a result it is equipped with a very complete air system for catching the dust which is created while the soil is passing through the "dryer." What is known as a "dust house" has been constructed and into this all dust is forced and there, coming in contact with steam, is reduced to mud which passes off into a canal.

The plant is now engaged in supplying the base and surface materials for a large paving job in Glendale, the contract for which involves approximately $600,000. Officials of the Charles and George K. Thompson organization announced yesterday that the plant, which has a capacity of turning out 400 to 500 tons of material in an eight-hour shift, will increase its operations from a one-shift basis to a two-shift basis next week.

RAW MATERIAL SURVEY MADE

seen that Los Angeles is within relatively easy access to more than 50 per cent of the remaining stand of virgin timber in the country.

Los Angeles is doubly fortunate in being able to bring in its lumber supply by means of cheap water transportation. The low transportation costs have been the chief contributing factor to low prices of lumber in Los Angeles, compared with prices of lumber in other sections of the United States. In the large consuming centers of the East, prices of lumber have been increasing in direct ratio with the increasing scarcity of timber, because of the necessity to charge higher freight rates with each shift of the timber cutting industry to more distant points as successive stands are cut out. The freight rates on lumber shipped from the Pacific-Northwest to Los Angeles is about $7 per 1000 board feet, whereas the rate on timber from the main producing centers to the main consuming centers of the East is about $15 per 1000 board feet. At the present rate of annual timber cutting, Los Angeles and Southern California will find an adequate timber supply in the Pacific Coast states for the next 100 years.

That Southern California has not been slow to take advantage of her advantageous supply of timber is shown by the following figures of the total receipts of lumber at the various Southern California ports since 1918 (San Pedro, Long Beach, Redondo, Santa Barbara, Hueneme, Ventura and San Diego):

| | Board feet. |
|---|---|
| 1918 | 436,284,000 |
| 1919 | 623,443,000 |
| 1920 | 815,344,000 |

The unprecedented shipments of lumber to the Los Angeles Harbor (San Pedro) during the past year have made Los Angeles the greatest lumber port in the world.

COTTON FIELDS NEAR

Los Angeles is singularly fortunate in being in close proximity to large areas where cotton flourishes and is remarkably free from the blight and boll weevil which each year damage the cotton crop of the South. Climatic conditions in California, Arizona and Lower California are unusually favorable for cotton growing and this has resulted in good yields of the highest quality cotton. On account of its fine quality the percentage of waste in carding is very low. Another advantage that this section possesses is that most of the cotton grown is of the long-staple varity used for the manufacture of thread, automobile tires and high-grade textiles.

That among the factors which will make for the great industrial development of Los Angeles will be increased production of cotton in the territory tributary to the city, and the establishment in it of additional compresses and textile mills, is the belief of many industrial experts. The production of cotton in this section is small as yet in comparison with the United States production. Estimates have been made, however, that within a few years California, Arizona and Lower California will be producing 1,000,000 bales per year which, on a basis of the present price levels, will mean the creation of $160,000,000 of new wealth annually.

The cotton available to Los Angeles industries comes principally from California, Arizona and Lower California. In California the principal producing sections are in the Imperial, Palo Verde, Coachella and San Joaquin valleys. In Arizona the large part of the production is in the Salt River Valley in Maricopa county, the Gila River Valley in Pinal county and the Valley of the Colorado in Yuma county.

Although cotton growing in California, Arizona and Lower California is a comparatively new industry, its development has been very rapid. This is shown by the fact that production in 1912 was only 10,000 bales, whereas production in 1923 is estimated at 250,000 bales. Production in California and Arizona, excluding Lower California, during 1923 is placed at 124,000 bales, compared with 70,000 bales in 1922. These figures represent an increase of approximately 77 per cent during the year.

LOGICAL WOOL CENTER

Wool is another of the world's primary raw materials. More than half of the wool supply of the country originates in the territory west of the Rocky Mountains. The eight largest wool producing States in the country (Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, New Mexico, Utah, California, Oregon and Texas) are within a radius of 1000 miles from Los Angeles, while they are within a radius of 2500 miles from Boston, the center of the woolen industry. The supply of wool from Australia and New Zealand, the largest wool producing countries in the world, is 3000 miles closer to Los Angeles than it is to the New England woolen mills. Thus it is evident that Los Angeles is nearer to the bulk of the wool supply of the country than are other large cities of the United States.

BELFAST FLAX

Consul Henry P. Starret, Belfast, Ireland, reports that conditions in the Belfast linen trade showed a distinct improvement during 1923, compared with the situation in 1922, but not as great as the outlook seemed to indicate at the beginning of the year. However, in view of the political and economic situation it would appear that the linen industry has fared better than most trades.

The acreage under flax in Northern Ireland increased from 29,117 to 45,107 acres in 1923, but is still more than 50 per cent under the total acreage in 1920. The 1923 production of flax was about 16,000,000 pounds.

CAMPBELL CLOSES LEASES

The sweet tooth of Southern California has developed to such large proportions that it was necessary for the Standard Candy Company to lease through the W. Ross Campbell Company, business property brokers, the northwest corner of Third and San Pedro streets, where larger quarters could be had to carry on the manufacture of candy. The building on this location is a four-story and basement of the Class C type. The entire building will be devoted to the manufacture of sweet stuffs.

The building covers a ground space of 49x150 feet. With the basement this gives the lessees a toal floor space of 30,000 square feet. Mr. H. S Beeks of the W. Ross Campbell Company who consumated the lease stated that the expansion of the Standard Candy Company was only additional proof that Southern California was supporting home industries. Mr. S. Goldberg represented the Standard Candy Company in the transaction.

With the sale of the property located at 1127 San Julian street by the W. Ross Campbell organization to the Jensen Salsbery Laboratories of Kansas City comes the announcement that that concern of chemists, prominent in Kansas City will extend their efforts to the Southern California territory.

The property which is 50x150 to a paved alley is vacant at present but the Jensen Salsbery Laboratories will erect a two-story building on the premises immediately. The entire building will be devoted to the various chemical departments which comprise the Jensen organization.

Messrs. D. A. Holbrook and L. S. Steel of the W. Ross Campbell Company looked after the interests of Mrs Marie Stengel who was the former owner of the property and Dr. H. Jensen who represented the firm as the lessee.

AMERICAN INTERESTS

HALIFAX (N. S.)—A company known as the Great Bras d'Or Gypsum Company, composed of American interests, has taken over a property at Little Narrows formerly owned by the Eastern Gypsum Company, and is developing the property with the intention of exporting gypsum.

A contract which will probably amount to about $100,000 has been let to William Rundell & Son of Boston, Mass., to construct two miles of railroad, shipping piers and the other equipment which will be necessary in order to carry on the work. Several cars of machinery, including steam shovels, mining machinery, etc., have been shipped in to the scene of operations, and the contractor has already erected several shacks on the ground.

It is the intention of the company to export from 200,000 to 300,000 tons of gypsum per year. The shipping will likely be done by water, the principal markets being New York and Boston.

JAPANESE YARN

Warehoused stocks of raw cotton in Japan have increased during January, and the production of cotton yarn declined. This decrease in connection with the slump in exports and the increase in warehoused stocks indicates a falling off in the prosperous condition which has characterized the industry since the earthquake. The New Year holidays account for a considerable portion of the decline in production, and also undoubtedly affected exports and domestic consumption. Acting Commercial Attache E. G. Babbitt, Tokyo, reports to the Commerce Department.

Litchi trees, which bear delicious sugary fruit, will not grow in cool climates.

LARGER QUARTERS NEEDED

New Building for Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce Proposed; Plan Leguna Beach Hotel

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA ANA, April 5.—Santa Ana will erect a Chamber of Commerce building if a committee appointed this week to investigate the feasibility of such a project reports favorably, Secretary J. C. Metzgar declared today.

Addition recently of an industrial department made the present quarters of the chamber in the City Hall entirely inadequate, Metzgar stated, in adding that under the present arrangement farm and other products on exhibit in the suite would have to be removed.

The committee investigating locations, financing and type of construction consists of D. N. Kelly, chairman; W. B. Martin, H. Newton Thornton, Mac O. Robbins and Guy J. Gilbert.

When it was appointed by President Charles D. Spices, the committee was instructed to recommend suitable quarters for the chamber rooms in case it was decided against building in the immediate future.

NEW PLANS ANNOUNCED

Developing from an $80 to a $1,000,000 concern in thirty years, Taylor's, Inc., local fruit-canning concern, announced plans to operate the year around, instead of nine months, as at present.

The Santa Ana company employs 200 men and women. Fred H. Taylor, the founder, used a single stove and his annual sales totaled $80 when the enterprise was launched in the '90s, he said.

Prospect of extending the coast highway through Laguna Beach within the year is the basis of plans to erect a fifty-room hotel at that resort city, at a cost of $150,000, E. R. Cooper announced here today.

The lease for the Hotel Cooper here was sold this week to E. Busby, veteran hotel man of Santa Barbara. Mr. Cooper declared he had in mind the building of the new enterprise at Laguna when he sold his interest in Santa Ana.

Two sites are being negotiated for at the beach city, Cooper declared, one being the present site of the Yoch Hotel, which overlooks the ocean.

With dining and dancing facilities to be available, Cooper stated his patronage would come from Los Angeles and San Diego.

As proof that the population of Santa Ana is on a rapid increase, Miss Jeannette McFadden, city librarian, announced today that the circulation of the library during March was the largest in the history of the institution. February of this year previously held the record.

SAFETY VALVES INSTALLED

Baker Iron Works Perfects System for Preventing Explosion of Gas Trucks

As a result of a recently enacted city ordinance whereby all tank trucks and trailers carrying explosive and inflammable petroleum products through the industrial sections of Los Angeles must be equipped with inside emergency valves, the engineering and mechanical departments of the Baker Iron Works have just completed this past week a tank truck which will comply with the new ordinance.

The vehicle is now being thoroughly tested by a local petroleum products company and is said to be functioning excellently. The ordinance provides that within a year following the enactment of the bill, all petroleum-carrying vehicles be equipped with the improvement, so it is expected that the next few months will witness a general mobilization of tank trucks at the local iron works for reconditioning in accordance with the new city law.

NEW SAFETY TANK

The tank truck just completed by the Baker Iron Works is of 700 gallons capacity, the tank being divided into seven compartments, each compartment being equipped with an emergency quick opening and closing valve, which may be operated from the driver's seat or from the top, rear end of the tank.

The value of the emergency valve, it is explained, rests in the ability of the flow of gasoline, or whatever the products being transported may be, to be shut off after the draw valve at the rear end of the tank has been put out of commission, either by accident or any numerous unexpected conditions that may arise, such as fire.

It is explained that the new valve will be of especial advantage in an emergency such as where the ordinary draw valve has been knocked off the tank by an automobile or truck in a street collision. With th eold type of valve control, the driver was helpless under such a condition and the entire cargo of highly inflammable gasoline or distillate was rapidly emptied on the highway.

DANGEROUS FLUID

This dangerous stream of inflammable material pouring back over the course of approaching machines has been known on numerous occasions to ignite with disastrous and expensive results. With the new emergency valve, it is shown, such a dangerous mishap cannot occur. For immediately the draw valve is dislodged or broken, the driver can immediately close every section of the tank.

Again in the case of fire, the flow of the tank content can be closed even though the vicinity of the draw valve be enveloped in flames, thereby cutting off the fire supply and eliminating a serious fire hazard.

Officials of the Baker Iron Works believe the innovation one of the most important of recent years in the manufacture of vehicles for the transportation of petroleum products.

CHAIR FACTORY EXPANDS

Inglewood Manufacturing Company Completes Construction of New Fireproof Warehouse

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, April 5.—Beginning a $50,000 program of expansion, the Inglewood Manufacturing Company has just completed its new fireproof warehouse, adding 12,000 square feet of storage space to the plant on Redondo Boulevard in Inglewood's rapidly expanding industrial district. This addition has a capacity of 16,000 chairs, according to W. W. Hodgkins, president of the company, whose increase in sales necessitated the expansion program. More than $200,000 business has been done over that of the previous year, this year being well over the $500,000-mark. Recent additions have brought the total floor space of the plant up to 140 by 400 feet.

With close to 200 employees and a pay roll of more than $260,000 a year, the plant, which has a capacity of 1200 chairs a day, of eighteen different patterns, has grown to be Inglewood's greatest industry. More than 1,500,000 feet of lumber is used annually in this plant, which is the only one in Southern California manufacturing chairs exclusively.

Casper Wilhelm, superintendent, has recently invented what is known as a double-chucking machine, used in the equipment which, according to experts, accomplishes this operation eight times more rapidly than any other. The sanding machines are the only ones of the kind east of the Mississippi, but even these improved machines use no less than $45 a day of sandpaper, the sandpaper bill of the concern running approximately $13,500 a year.

One of the recent big orders was one of 1400 chairs for use at Catalina Island resorts.

FIGURES ON FURS

Approximate figures in regard to the number of the various kinds of furs accumulated in Harbin during 1922-23 trapping season, and sold and shipped from Harbin during the summer of 1923, Consul C. S. Hanson reports, are as follows: Squirrel, 700,000; ermine, 30,000; kolinsky, 2000; red fox, 4000; white fox, 20,000; gray fox, 500; silver fox, 30; sable, 400; hare, 100,000. These furs were for the most part shipped up the Lena River and overland to Irkutsk, thence by train to Moscow, where practically all of them are reported to be sold to London buyers and comparatively few to American purchasers.

OIL DRILLING

CALGARY (Alta.)—British Petroleums, Ltd., is making preparations for aggressive work in the Wainwright field the coming season. Large quantities of machinery, piping and supplies are being brought in. Thirty-eight thousand feet of six-inch pipe is on the ground and the company is building two tanks of 1000 barrels each and it is expected the railway will build a special spur to the pipe line, which will be about seven miles in length. It is the intention of the company to put down six wells the coming season, and two rotary drills are on the ground for that purpose.

That water could be heated by stirring it was discovered by James P. Joule in 1843.

LUMBER FOR IRELAND

VANCOUVER (B. C.)—Ireland has begun to purchase British Columbia timber direct from this province. It is expected that one of the next Canadian government merchant marine, limited, steamers to the United Kingdom will carry the timber for the Belfast dock, which has just been ordered here. This is for approximately 1,250,000 feet. In addition to the Ulster order there are orders from Cardiff, the British Admiralty, British railroads and considerable parcels of clear British Columbia fir for private orders.

The Welsh order is for 1,000,000 feet, the British Admiralty order is for 8,500,000 feet. The British railroads have ordered 2,000,000 feet of crossing (switch) ties. The clear lumber orders total 3,500,000 feet, for delivery at English and Scotch destinations.

H. R. McMillan Export Company is also keeping the market in India and Egypt open to British Columbia products. This company introduced British Columbia creosoted ties to India several years ago and they proved so satisfactory in resisting weather and the destructive ants of the country that an order has gone forward every season. This spring the company will load the steamer Heathfield, commencing about March 15, with 1,300,000 feet for India and 3,000,000 feet for Egypt.

NEW CONCENTRATOR

ANYOX (B. C.)—The new concentrator of the Granby Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company is now in operation, handling 1500 tons of ore daily. The concentrator has been erected at a cost of about $750,000 and is designed to handle the low-grade tonnage of the Hidden Creek mine before it is treated and the copper content extracted by the smelter. The estimated tonnage to be concentrated is from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons and the low copper values run from .85 to 1 per cent copper to the ton.

BUYS TWELVE FLATS

S. Morton Cohn yesterday purchased, through the T. J. Lawrence Company, an English stucco twelve-flat building at 821-831 South Normandie avenue, for approximately $110,000. Mr. Cohn recently closed a deal involving more than $1,000,000 in the sale of the Engstrum Apartments and other Los Angeles real estate holdings.

WORLD TEXTILE NEWS IN BRIEF

Large Potential Market for Hosiery

South Germany Seeking Many Local Products

Czecho-Slovak Textile Mart is Good

There is a very large potential market for American hosiery and cloth clippings in Southern Germany, according to Vice-Counsul Erik W. Magnuson, Stuttgart. Local business men estimate that 80 to 90 per cent of the clothing manufactured in Wuerttemburg is made from reworked cotton and wool. Many dealers report an actual shortage of supplies of raw materials for these waste yarns. Raw cotton, hosiery, and cloth clippings are not only allowed free entry into Germany, but this class of goods is also totally exempt from customs duties. Further details including a list of Stuttgart importers may be obtained from the textile division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

TEXTILE SITUATION

The different branches of the Czecho-Slovak textile industry report conditions good, says Acting Commercial Attache H. Lawrence Groves, Prague, in a report to the Department of Commerce. Cotton and wool spinning mills continue a close to normal production, the carded yarn mills being especially well occupied. Prices for both cotton and wool yarns and finished wools are said to be somewhat below the levels justified by current raw materials costs, and new business, now coming in, is reported booked at somewhat higher prices. Further improvement is taking place in the local linen, silk, and jute mills. Exports of linens to the near-by succession States, particularly Austria and Jugo-Slavia, as well as to England and the United States, are increasing. In the silk branch, orders from Germany, England and the United States are being received, especially for necktie materials.

FUR AUCTIONS

Bidding was brisk, and prices very firm at the Winnipeg fur auction held the last week of February, Consul-General H. I. Brittain, reports. The amount of the offerings and the average prices realized were as follows: 4000 wold skins sold at an average of 14; 600 lynx skins brought prices ranging from $14 to $25; 180 Fisher skins sold at $54, $67, $70 and $81 in lots. Otter skins averaged $20-$21; red fox, $14; silver fox, from $50 to $320; cross fox, $10-$110; weasel, $1.20 each; bear skins, $9; skunk, $1.65-$2.05.

FRENCH SILK

The production of cocoons in France during 1923 showed an encouraging increase over that of the two preceding years, the yield of fresh cocoons totaling 3,129,547 kilos, as compared with 2,584,546 kilos in 1922. Exports of silk fabrics during 1923 were considerably higher, Commercial Attache Chester Lloyd Jones informs the Department of Commerce. For the first nine months of 1923 exports amounted to 5,801,000 kilos, valued at 1,647,342,000 francs as compared with 4,778,700 kilos worth 1,246,644,000 francs during the same period of the preceding year.

MARKET FOR JUTE BAGS

There is a steady demand for jute bags in Bulgaria principally for the closeweave kind used for flour. Approximately 25,000 140-pound sacks are used annually in that country for exporting flour, and there is a large demand for them for domestic use. Second-hand bags are used to a large extent, imported chiefly from Turkey, England, France and Germany, with the major portion coming from Constantinople and consisting of second-hand sacks originating in the United States.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY

The condition of the textile market in Hungary is uncertain. The textile interests vigorously demand a change in the entire import system, and claim that they are unable to fix prices as they do not know on what basis to make their calculations. Owing to the withholding of import permits, the shortage is growing, and the privileged outsiders are selling at prices 50 per cent higher than the quotations of foreign manufacturers. Therefore the legitimate trade refuses even to quote prices Consul-General George Horton, Budapest, reports.

INDIAN TEXTILE

Trading in India has shown a falling off in demand, with the result that prices are slightly lower and indicate a sign of weakness in the market. The country markets again operated on a small scale and prospects of further fresh business are not bright. Dealers have shown a certain amount of hesitation in making fresh bids, Assistant Trade Commissioner Charles B. Spofford, Calcutta, informs the Department of Commerce.

POLISH TEXTILES

Textile manufacturing throughout Poland is generally on a two-day-per-week basis, and more than half of the plants are closed entirely. The slackening of activity in Poland's chief export market, Rumania, due to increasing Czecho-Slovak and British competition, is at this time a serious blow to the industry, says Acting Commercial Attache Leighton W. Rogers, Warsaw, in a report to the Department of Commerce.

PULLING UP SOCKS

During the first eleven months of 1923, Egypt imported more than $153,000 worth of elastic goods, of which a good proportion consisted of men's garters. Three English brands which sell at approximately 2s for a cotton elastic fabric, are on the market, but American made garters are the most popular, although they sell at slightly higher prices, according to Vice-Consul Raymond F. Geist, Port Said. It is believed the market would respond to vigorous American salesmanship with a considerable increase of business.

A "Guaranteed" Neighborhood

Where your future home surroundings are forever assured against business encroachment

Outline diagram of a portion of the Lunada Bay District.

BLACK—Strictly business areas.

GREY—Hotel, apartment and court sites.

WHITE—Residence sites, with one acre in every four set aside for parks, playgrounds, etc.

"A Guaranteed Neighborhood"

This diagram suggests Palos Verdes Protective Restrictions—probably the most perfect and comprehensive ever drawn up for any community. Careful zoning definitely locates the necessary areas for business, hotels, apartments, etc., at convenient intervals.

Over 90% of the total number of lots in Palos Verdes is restricted to single family dwellings.

Palos Verdes restrictions are in force till 1960, with automatic extension thereafter, on a two-thirds majority vote of property owners.

Every home builder in Palos Verdes is assured of the attractiveness of his neighbor's home.

No industries, asylums or public nuisance businesses are permitted, and race restrictions are to be rigidly observed. There will also be proper conservation of trees, parkings and mountain reservations.

Upkeep of parks, etc., will be by small annual levy, but all taxes and assessments are limited to never exceed the rate of the old city of Los Angeles.

Telephone or write for copy of booklet—
"Protective Restrictions of Palos Verdes"

PALOS VERDES can never be a hodge-podge community. The beauty of the residential areas is permanently guaranteed, and will never suffer by business encroachment.

The New City is officially zoned (see outline diagram map) to allow for so much commercial expansion, and no more. The general plan of development makes ample provision for every possible kind of business activity—three Plazas are already designed—certain areas restricted to shops, public markets and theatres—but never will Palos Verdes residence sites have to be sacrificed to commercial interests.

Your homesite in the New City is an investment in stability and permanence, such as never before has been possible in any community adjacent to a metropolitan area.

In selecting your lot you know beforehand the exact relation of your homesite to the business district, or the hotel and apartment section. There will be a school not more than one-half mile distant—here a park and there a playground—in fact, you get the equivalent of a written guarantee that your home surroundings are to be permanent for all time. Never can you lose the "outlook" which decided you to purchase.

Your neighbors too, will be congenial—an important point for the home builder's consideration. Not alone are Palos Verdes homesites free from the possibility of commercial encroachment, but even the personnel of the whole community is assured, because of the similarity of tastes and interests of the people who live there.

Already there are over 2500 men and women—all lovers of the beautiful and the artistic—who have chosen their future home surroundings in Palos Verdes. So you are assured of desirable neighbors, whose ideas of life and recreation will coincide with your own.

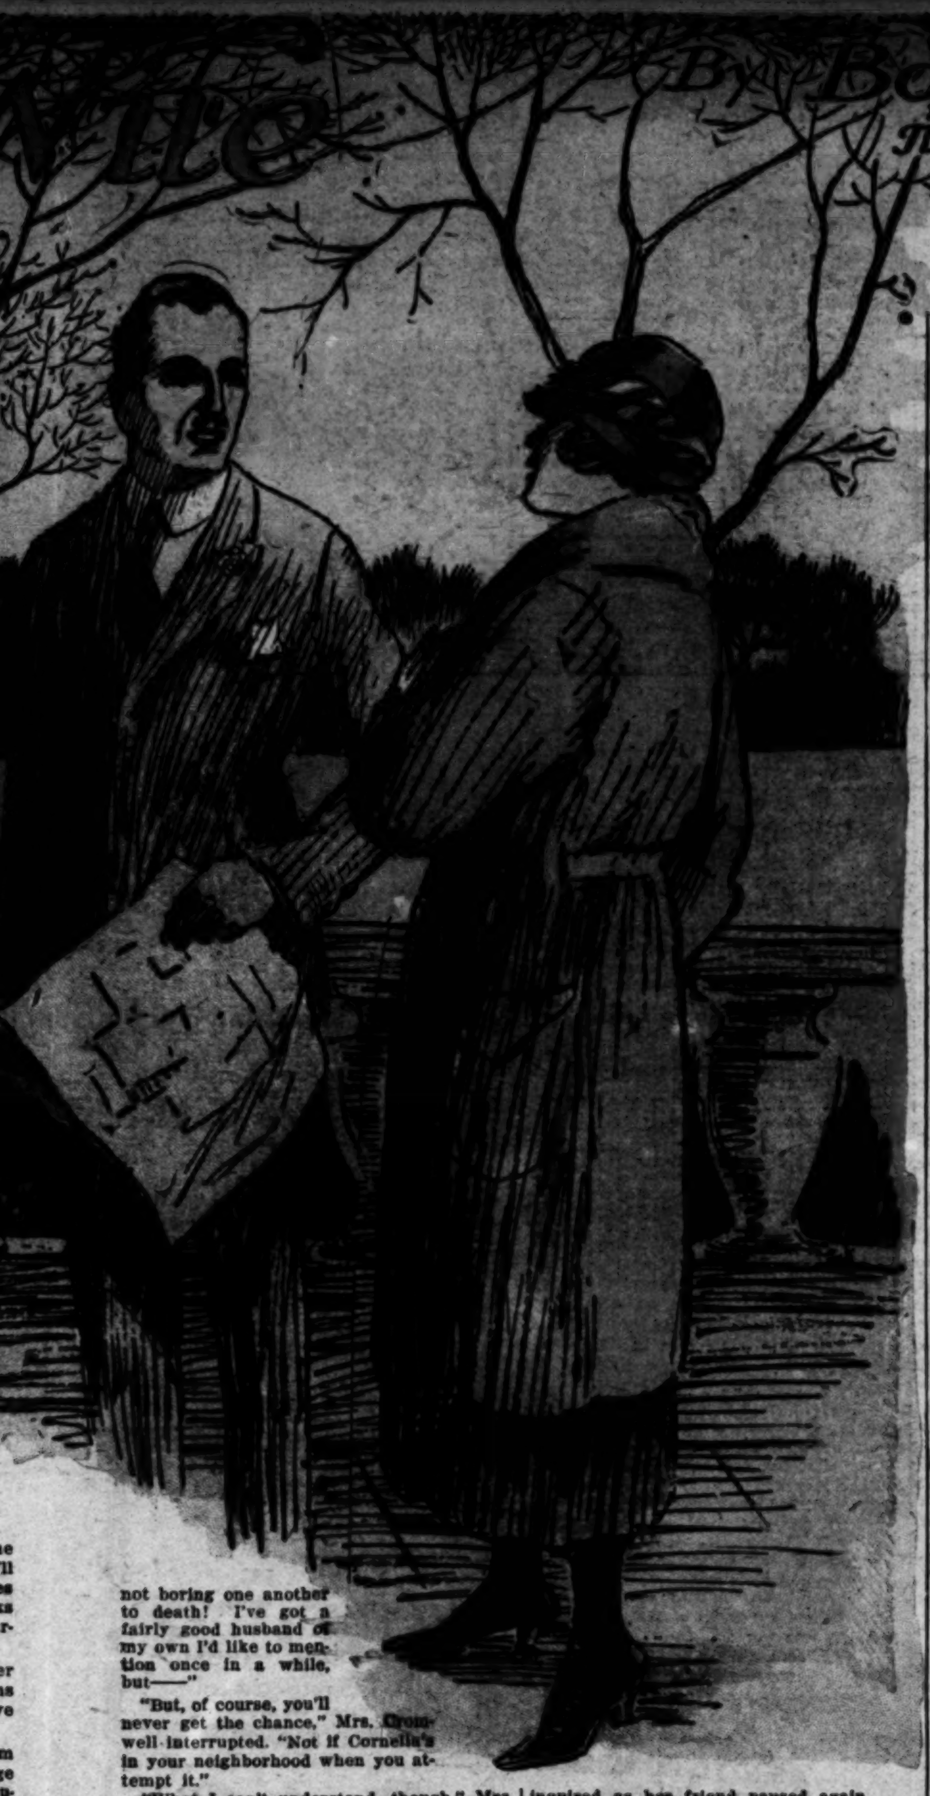
Having Built Herself a Paradise, Cornelia Wisely Learned to Keep Her Eyes Upon the Stars



not boring one another to death! I've got a fairly good husband of my own I'd like to mention once in a while, but——"

"But, of course, you'll never get the chance," Mrs. Cromwell interrupted. "Not if Cornelia's in your neighborhood when you attempt it."

"What I can't understand, though," Mrs. Dodge went on; "it's her never having the slightest suspicion what a nuisance it is. I should think the man himself would stop her."

"But Mrs. Cromwell laughed and shook her head. "In the first place, of course, he agrees with her. He thinks Cornelia's just stating facts—facts that ought to be known. In the second, don't you suppose he understands how useful her press-agenting is to him?"

"But it isn't. It makes us all sick of him."

"Oh, it may have that effect on you and me, Lydia, but I really wonder—" Mrs. Cromwell paused, frowning seriously, then continued. "Of course, he'd never take such a view of it. He instinctively knows it's useful, but he'd never take the view of it that——"

"The view of it that what?" Mrs. Dodge inquired as her friend paused again.

"Why, that it may be actually the principal reason for his success. When he left the firm that employed him as a designer and started out for himself, with not a thing coming in for him to do, don't you remember that even then everybody had the impression, somehow, that he was a genius and going to do wonders when the chance came? How do you suppose that got to be the general impression except through Cornelia's touting it about? And then when he did put up a few little houses, don't you remember hearing it said they represented the first real Architecture with a capital 'A' ever seen in the whole city? Now, almost nobody really knows anything about architecture, though we all talk about it as glibly as if we did, and pretty soon—don't you remember?—we were all raving over those little houses of Roderick Brooks Battle's. What do you suppose made us rave? We must have been wrong, because Cornelia says now that Battle thinks those first houses of his were 'rather bad'—he's 'grown so tremendously in his art.' Well, since they were bad, what except Cornelia made us think then that they were superb? And look at what's happened to Battle these last few years. In spite of Cornelia's boring us to death about him, isn't it true that there's somehow a wide impression that he's a great man? Of course, there is!"

"And yet," Mrs. Dodge interposed, "he's not done anything to prove it. Battle's a good architect, certainly, but there are others as good, and he's not a bit better as an architect than Mr. Cromwell is as a lawyer or than my husband is as a consulting engineer."

"Not a bit," Mrs. Cromwell echoed, carrying on the thought she had been following. "But Mr. Dodge and Mr. Cromwell haven't had anybody to go about, day after day for years, proclaiming them and building up a legend about them. Nobody has any idea that they're great men, poor things! Don't you see where that puts you and me, Lydia?"

"No, I don't."

"My dear!" Mrs. Cromwell exclaimed. "Why, even Battle himself didn't know that he was a great man until he married Cornelia and she believed he was—and told him he was—and started her long career of going about making everybody else sort of believe it, too."

"I think it's simply her own form of egoism," said the emphatic Mrs. Dodge. "She'd have done exactly the same whoever she married."

"Precisely! It's Cornelia's way of being in love—she's a born idolizer. But you didn't answer me when I asked you where that puts us?"

"You and me?" Mrs. Dodge inquired, frowning.

"Don't you see, if she'd married my husband, for instance, instead of Battle, everybody'd be having the impression by this time that Mr. Cromwell is a great man? He'd have felt that way himself, too, and I'm afraid it would give him a great deal of pleasure. Haven't we failed as wives when we see what Cornelia's done for her husband?"

"What an idea!" The two ladies had been walking slowly as they talked; now they came to a halt at their parting place, before Mrs. Cromwell's house, which was an important, even imposing, structure of the type called Georgian, and in handsome conventional solidity not unlike the lady who lived in it. Across the broad street was a newer house, one just finished, a pinkish stucco in interpretation of Mediterranean gayety, and so fresh of color that it seemed rather a showpiece, not yet actually inhabited though glamoured with brocaded curtains and transplanted arbor vitae into the theatrical semblance of a dwelling in use. Mrs. Dodge glanced across at it yith an expression of disfavor. "I call the whole thing perfectly disgusting!" she said.

Mrs. Cromwell also looked at the new house; then she shook her head. "It's painful, rather," she said, and evidently referred to something more than the house itself.

"Outright disgusting!" her friend insisted. "I suppose he's there as much as ever?"

'Oh, yes. Rather more."

'Well, I'll say one thing," Mrs. Dodge declared; "Cornelia Battle won't get any sympathy from me!"

"Sympathy? My dear, you don't suppose she dreams she needs sympathy! Doesn't she show the rest of us every day how she pities us because we're not married to Roderick Brooks Battle?"

"Yes, and that's what makes me so furious. But she will need sympathy," Mrs. Dodge persisted, with a dark glance at the new house across the street. "She will when she knows about that!"

"But maybe she'll never know."

"What!" Mrs. Dodge laughed scornfully. "My dear, when a woman builds a man into a god, he's going to assume the privileges of a god."

"And behave like a devil?"

"Just that," Mrs. Dodge returned grimly. "Especially when his idolator has burnt up her youth on his altar and her friends begin to notice she's getting a skimpy look. What chance has a skimpy looking slave against a glittering widow rich enough to build a new house every time she wants to have tete-a-tetes with a godlike architect?"

"But she's only "built one!" Mrs. Cromwell cried, protesting.

"So far!" her pessimistic companion said; then laughed at her own extravagance, and became serious again. "I think Cornelia ought to know."

"Oh, no!"

"Yes, she ought," Mrs. Dodge insisted. "In the first place she ought to be saved from making herself so horribly ridiculous. Of course, she's always been ridiculous, the way she's raved about her husband, but to go 'round still raving about him when he's raving about another woman—why, it's too ridiculous! In the second place, if she knew something about the Mrs. Sylvester affair now it might help her to bear a terrific jolt later."

"What terrific jolt, Lydia?" '

"If he leaves her," Mrs. Dodge said gravely. "If Mrs. Sylvester decides to make him a permanent fixture. Men do these things nowadays, you know."

"Yes, I know they do." Mrs. Crowmell looked as serious as her friend did, though her seriousness was more sympathetically a troubled one than Mrs. Dodge's. "Poor Cornelia! To wear her youth out making a man into such a brilliant figure that a woman of the Sylvester type might consider him worth while taking away from——"

"Look!" Mrs. Dodge interrupted, in a thrilled voice.

A balustrated stone terrace crossed the facade of the new house and two people now emerged from a green door and appeared upon the terrace. One was a man whose youthful figure made a pleasing accompaniment to a fine and scholarly head: he produced, moreover, an impression of success and distinction obvious to the first glance of a stranger, though what was most of all obvious about him at the present moment was his devoted, even tender, attention to the woman at his side. She was a tall and graceful laughing creature, so sparkling pretty as to approach the contours and colors of a beauty. Her rippling hair glimmered with a Venetian ruddiness, and the blue of her twinkling eyes was so vivid that a little flash of it shot clear across the street and was perceptible to the two observant women as brightest azure.

Upon her lovely head she had a little black hat, and, over a dress of which only

A Great Man's W

WE LEARNED in childhood that appearances are deceitful, and our subsequent scrambling about upon this whirling globe has convinced many of us that the most deceptive of all appearances are those of peace. The gentlest looking liquor upon the laboratory shelves was what removed the east wing of the chemical corporation's building on Christmas morning; it was the stillest Sunday noon of a drowsy August when, without even the courtesy of a little introductory sputtering, the gas works blew up; and both of these disturbances were thought to be peculiarly outrageous because of the previous sweet aspects that prevented any one from expecting trouble. Yet those aspects, like the flat calm of the summer of 1914, should have warned people of experience that outbreaks were impending.

What could offer to mortal eye a picture of more secure placidity than three smiling ladies walking homeward together after a club meeting? That particular three in mind were, moreover, in a visibly prosperous condition of life; for, although the afternoon was brightly cold, their furs afforded proof of expenditure with which any moderate woman would be satisfied, and their walk led them into the most luxurious stretch of the long thoroughfare that was called the handsome suburb's finest street. The three addressed one another in the caressively amiable tones that so strikingly characterize the elite of their sex in converse; and their topic, which had been that of the club paper, was impersonal; in fact, it was more than impersonal, it was celestial. "Sweetness and Light. Essay. Mrs. Roderick Brooks Battle;" these were the words printed in the club's year book beneath the date of that meeting, and Mrs. Roderick Brooks Battle was the youngest of the three placid ladies.

"You're all so sweet to say such lovely things about it," she said, as they walked slowly along. "I only wish I deserved them, but, of course, as every one must have guessed, it was all Mr. Battle. I don't suppose I could write a single connected paragraph without his telling me how, and if he hadn't kept helping me I just wouldn't have been ready with any paper at all. Never in the world!"

"Oh, yes, you would, Cornelia," the elder of the two other ladies assured her. "For instance, dear, that beautiful thought about the 'bravery of silence'—about how much nobler it is never to answer an attack—I thought it was the finest thought in the whole paper, and I'm sure that was your own and not your husband's, Cornelia."

"Ah, no, Mrs. Cromwell," Mrs. Battle returned; and although her manner was sweetly deferential to the older woman, she seemed to be gently shocked; her voice became a little protesting. "I could never in the world have experienced a thought like that just by myself. It was every bit Mr. Battle's. In fact, he almost as much as dictated that whole paragraph to me, word for word. It seemed a shame for me to sit up there and appear to take the credit for it; but I know, of course, that everybody who knows us the least bit intimately would understand I could never write anything and it was all Mr. Battle."

"My dear, you'll never persuade us of it," the third lady said. "There were thoughts in your paper so characteristically feminine that no one but a woman could possibly—"

"Oh, but he could!" Mrs. Battle interrupted with an eagerness that was more than audible, for it showed itself vividly in her brightened eyes and the sudden glow of pink beneath them. "That's one of the most wonderful things about Mr. Battle: his intellect is just as feminine as it is masculine, Mrs. Dodge. He is absolutely—well, the only way I can express it is in his own words. Mr. Battle says no one can be great who isn't universal in his thinking. And you see that's where he excels so immensely; Mr. Battle is just absolutely universal in his thinking. It seems to me it's one of the great causes of Mr. Battle's success: he not only has the most powerful reasoning faculties I ever knew in any man but he's absolutely gifted with a woman's intuition." She paused to utter a little murmur of fond laughter, as if she herself had so long and helplessly marveled over Mr. Battle that she tolerantly found other people's incredulous amazement at his prodigiousness natural but amusing. "You see an intellect like Mr. Battle's can't be comprehended from knowing other men, Mrs. Dodge," she added. "Other men look at things simply in a masculine way, of course. Mr. Battle says that's only seeing half. Mr. Battle says women live on one hemisphere of a globe and men on the other, and neither can look round the circle, but from the stars the whole globe is seen—so that's why we should keep our eyes among the stars! I wanted to work that thought into my paper, too. Isn't it beautiful, the idea of keeping our eyes among the stars? But he said there wasn't a logical opening for it, so I didn't. Mr. Battle says we should never use a thought that doesn't find its own logical place—that is, not in writing, he says. But don't you think it's wonderful—that idea of the globe and the two hemispheres and all?"

"Lovely," Mrs. Dodge agreed. "Yet I don't see how it proves Mr. Battle has a feminine mind."

"Oh, but I don't mean just that alone," Mrs. Battle returned eagerly. "It's the thousand and one things in my daily contact with him that prove it. Of course, I know how hard it must be for other women to understand. I suppose no one could hope to realize what Mr. Battle's mind is like at all without the great privilege of being married to him."

"And that," Mrs. Cromwell remarked, "has been denied to so many of us, my dear!"

Mrs. Dodge laughed a little brusquely, but the consort of the marvelous Battle was herself so marvelous that she merely looked preoccupied. "I know," she said gravely, while Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Cromwell stared with widening eyes, first at her and then at each other. "How often I've thought of it!" she went on, her own eyes fixed earnestly upon the distance where, in perspective, the two curbs of the long, straight street appeared to meet. "It grows stranger and stranger to me how such a miracle could have happened to a commonplace little woman like me! I never shall understand why I should have been the one selected."

Thereupon, being arrived at her own gate, it was with this thought that she left them. From the gate a path of mottled flagstones led through a smooth and snowy lawn to a house upon which the architect had chastely indulged his Latin pleasure in stucco and wrought iron; and as Mrs. Battle took her way over the flagstones she received from her two friends renewed congratulations upon her essay as well as expressions of parting endearment; and she replied to these cheerfully; but all the while the glowing, serious eyes of the eager little brown haired woman remained preoccupied by the miracle she had mentioned.

Mrs. Cromwell and Mrs. Dodge went on their way with some solemnity, and were silent until the closing door of the stucco house let them know they were out of earshot.

Then Mrs. Cromwell, using a hushed voice, inquired: "Do you suppose she ever had a painting made of the Annunciation?"

"The Annunciation?" Mrs. Dodge did not follow her.

"Yes. When the miracle was announced to her that she should be the wife of Roderick Brooks Battle. Of course, she must have been forewarned by an angel that she was 'the one selected.' If Battle had just walked in and proposed to her, it would have been too much."

"I know one thing," Mrs. Dodge said emphatically. "I've stood just about as much of her everlasting 'Mr. Battle says' as I intend to! You can't go anywhere and get away from it; you can hear it over all the chatter at a dinner; you can hear it over fifty women gabbing at a tea—'Mr. Battle says this,' 'Mr. Battle says that,' 'Mr. Battle says this and that!' When Belloni was singing at the Fortnightly Afternoon Music last week you could hear her 'Mr. Battle says' to all women around her even during that loud Puccini suite, and she treed Belloni on his way out, after the concert, to tell him Mr. Battle's theory of music. She hadn't listened to a note the man sang, and Belloni understands about two words of English, but Cornelia kept right on Mr. Battle says-ing him for half an hour! For my part, I've had all I can stand of it and I'm about ready to do something about it!"

"I don't see just what one could do," Mrs. Cromwell said, laughing vaguely.

"I do!" her companion returned. Then both were silent for a few thoughtful moments, and wore the air of people who have introduced a subject upon which they are not yet quite warm enough to speak plainly.

Mrs. Cromwell evidently decided to slide away from it, for the time being at least. "I don't think Cornelia's looking well," she said. "She's rather lost her looks these last few years, I'm afraid. She seems pretty worn and thin to me; she's getting a kind of skimpy look."

"What else could you expect? She's made herself the man's slave ever since they were married. She was his valet, his cook, and his washerwoman night and day for years. I wonder how many times actually and literally she's blacked his boots for him! How could you expect her not to get worn out and skimpy looking?"

"Oh, I know," Mrs. Cromwell admitted. "But all that was in their struggling days, and she certainly doesn't need to do such things now. I hear he has twenty or thirty houses to build this year and just lately an immense contract for two new office buildings. Besides, he's generous with her; she dresses well enough nowadays."

"Yes," Mrs. Dodge said grimly. "They'd both see to that for his credit, but if he comes in with wet feet you needn't tell me she doesn't get down on her knees before him and take off his shoes herself. I know her! Yes, and I know him, too! Rich or poor, she'd be his valet and errand girl just the same as she always was."

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Crowell. "But it seems to me her most important office for him is the one she's just been filling."

"Press agent? I should say so! She may stop blacking his boots, but she'll never stop that. It's just why she makes me so confounded tired, too! She thinks she's the only woman that ever got married!"

"Cornelia is rather that way," the other said musingly. "She certainly never seems to realize that any of the rest of us have husbands of our own."

"'Mr. Battle can't be comprehended from knowing other men!'" Here Mrs. Dodge somewhat bitterly mimicked the unfortunate Cornelia's eager voice. "'Other men look at things in simply a masculine way!' 'I know how hard it must be for other women to understand—I suppose they couldn't be expected to understand a god like my husband just from knowing their own poor little imitation husbands!'"

"Oh, no," Mrs. Cromwell protested. "She didn't quite say that."

"But isn't it what she means? Isn't it exactly what she felt?"

"Well—perhaps."

"It does make me tired!" Mrs. Dodge said vigorously, and with the repetition she began to be more than vigorous. Under the spell of that rancor which increases in people when they mull over their injuries, she began to be indignant. "For one thing, outside of the shamelessness of it, some of the rest of us could just possibly find a few enthusiastic things to say of our husbands if we didn't have some regard for

Jury Asleep

ELIHU ROOT, the famous lawyer, tells many anecdotes of the law courts.

"Don't be long-winded," he said at a lawyers' banquet in New York. "I once fought a case against a long-winded man named Blank. Blank, in his closing speech, spouted for three hours, and then began repeating himself. Finally, on toward the end of the fourth hour, the judge interrupted him.

"'Really, you know, Mr. Blank,' he protested, 'you've said all that before.'

"'Have I, your honor?' said Blank. 'I beg your pardon. I'd forgotten.'

"'I can readily forgive you, Mr. Blank,' said the judge, 'for forgetting. It was such a long time ago, wasn't it?'"

His Deserts

LIKE all places where tourists congregate Los Angeles has to stand for a lot of those fellows who try to show how much smarter they are than the local talent, so it was quite the usual thing when a bediamoned guest at the Ambassador tried to bedevil one of the bell-hops.

After sending the lad on several fool errands he finally said: "Son, if I were bitten by a squirrel, would I go nutty?"

"You don't need any squirrel bite," retorted the boy promptly and added "and if frog bites meant anything, I'd sick one onto you, so you'd croak."

The Peace Plan

SENATOR BORAH was talking about the different peace plans which have been advanced and finally said with a smile:

"If the nations of the world really wanted peace, we could have it without all this argument. The fact of the matter is, that the controlling element in most of the countries wants war because that's the way they make money.

"A large portion of the world is as willing to accept peace as Mr. Bundy, the grouch.

"'Robert,' said his wife, 'it says here in this magazine that good humor makes the ideal home.'

"That's all right,' said Mr. Bundy, 'but doesn't it also say that good dinners are the basis of good humor?'

"And right there the war started all over again."

EVERYBODY got a real good laugh at a recent charity event at the Pasadena Maryland, when two little children rambled into the exclusive function looking for their mother.

Not spying her at once, Little Freddie timidly approached a kindly-looking lady, but before he could speak his little sister piped up in a shrill voice:

JOHN O'GRADY, one of the leaders of the United Mine Workers, said at a banquet in Wheeling:

"An operator declared the other day that he worked harder than any man in his employ. That declaration, gentlemen, made me laugh.

"It reminded me of Pat. Pat was a coal miner. He lay on his back on the rough rock, and hammered and tugged at a seam of coal above his head all day long. No sinecure, eh, gentlemen?

"But one hot August evening when Pat came home supper wasn't ready. He complained mildly. But his wife Bridget, her eyes flashing fire, screamed at him:

"'Shure, it's a foine man to complain y'are? Me slavin' all day like a Turk over the red-hot stove, an' you on the broad o' yer back in the nice cool mine!'"

NOW that he is safely back in England, Lloyd George is telling what he really thinks of us, and though the joke is at our expense, one can forgive him for the laughs they bring.

"In going from New York to Chicago," says the ex-Premier, "I observed a pretty little girl chewing gum. Not only did she chew it, but she insisted in pulling it out in long strings, and then letting it fall back into her mouth again.

"Finally, when the thing was beginning to get on my nerves, the child's mother leaned over and in a very audible whisper said:

"'Marcella, don't do that! Sit up and chew your gum like a little lady.'"

Golf and Other Troubles

By Barrie Payne

From the Diary of Golfer Griffin McGoof, of Florida

Jan. 1.—My motto is "To keep life from growing monotonous, each day do one thing you never did before. And, when possible, do something that nobody ever did before." I like golf, but I hate to play it in the orthodox manner. I like to do original things. Today I shot the whole course with my putter. My score was 212. "That's not a score; that's a telephone number," you will say. But anyhow, it was great sport.

Jan. 5.—I made all my shots with my eyes closed today, and my score was about as good as usual. It was an interesting experiment. Perhaps that's the correct way to play the game, despite what the Pro says. Perhaps the "blind" system has failed in the past because no one has ever given it a fair trial. At any rate it's easier to concentrate on the correct swing, easier to "come back in the same circle," when your mind and eyes are not on the ball.

Jan. 8.—I made all my shots with one hand today. I actually believe I could play better that way, with a little practice. For one thing it's almost impossible to "press" and swing too hard. Also you eliminate the old problem of two wrists working against each other.

Jan. 12.—I tried a new experiment today. The usual method is to play the whole course, if possible, without getting off the fairway. Today I tried to play around without getting on the fairway. "Nothing new in that," the cynic will say. Nevertheless—try and do it. It's not so easy. Unless you're a skillful golfer you'll accidentally hook or slice onto the fairway occasionally, in spite of yourself.

Jan. 18.—I'm tired of furnishing amusement for my caddy, so I got some revenge today. I carried the bag and made the caddy play the golf game for me. I razzed him all the way around. It was great sport. I rattled the clubs or coughed every time he made a shot. Business of dosing him with his own medicine. His game, by the way, is not so terribly much better than mine—about a stroke a hole, that's all.

Jan. 25.—I shot the course with a billiard cue today, just to see if it could be done. It took me six hours to play nine holes and my score was 940, which is only 906 strokes over par. My putting was better than usual, however. Some day I intend to shoot the course with a croquet mallet. I'm confident that radical improvements in the method of playing golf will some day be introduced as the result of my experiments. My fellow members insist that there's something wrong with my head. The same penalty that Columbus paid for thinking ahead of his fellows. But the name of Columbus lives, while the names of his critics are forgotten.

Feb. 2.—The game of golf was invented in the fifteenth century, but the correct method of putting was not discovered until today. I discovered it myself. I tried the plan of standing with my back to the hole, the ball between my feet, and putting directly backward between my legs. This brings the hole, the ball and the player's eyes into the same vertical plane, and the club swings vertically in this plane, like a pendulum. This method requires a little practice to bring it to perfection, but I'm convinced that it's the proper way. I explained my discovery to the Pro. He shook his head sadly and walked away. You can't tell that baby anything. He knows it all.

Feb. 8.—I played the course backward today, from green to tee. The chief difficulty I encountered was in driving from the bottom of the cup. It was rather hard on the greens, but I got away with it.

Feb. 15.—The club adopted my slogan today: "Each day do one thing you never did before." The club handed itself my resignation.

Golden Hours

The hours are passing, flying, dying,
Are they filled with useless sighing?
They are precious if we share
All the treasures that are there.

Do we waste our time in grieving
Over trifles, or conceiving
Shadows of some distant fears?
'Tis seldom that a ghost appears!

To live each day and drain the cup
Of fullest life, to look out—up,
And find the sweetness everywhere
Even when our lot is hard to bear,

To look about and ever find
The things worth while, and leave behind
The dross;—'t is so we grow
Life's golden hours and days to know.

Life is not made of joy complete,
Nor races won lest we compete;
Joy, sorrow, hope, grief, love, despair,
Of all of them we have some share.

These golden hours are ours to use,
Rich are they if we rightly choose,
For they are filled with rarest treasure;
What of their wealth shall be our measure?

Let Everybody Have a Chance

A Riverview family was soon to have two guests, one a charming widow and the other a business woman who is a spinster. The widow was to come first, and the lady of the house planned some dinner parties for her. Her high-school son came into the room and looked over the list of guests.

"Now, mother, you aren't fair," he protested. "Widows don't need any encouragement. You're giving this one all the parties, and then when the old maid comes you'll take her to suffrage lectures and such things. People always make this difference."

And the father of the home, who overheard the conversation, wagered that the son would be a popular young man.—[Indianapolis News.

The Wild Owl's Cry

Through the ghostly light of infant morn,
  In somber tones bedight,
The wild owl's voice was clearly borne
  On wings of fading night.

In echoes caught from hills around,
  Rebuffed by quarters four,
An eerie and unearthly sound,
  It came from mystery's shore.

But still, of nature did it speak,
  Upon the pale-lit air,
As if it would a foothold seek,
  Nor float in vain despair.

For in the hollow of these tones
  Were whispers of the trees,
And rugged songs of caves and stones,
  Within the beating breeze.

They told of many flights, far-flung,
  Of mountain crags and falls,
Of dizzy heights on pinions hung,
  And lofty granite walls—

Of darkness lightened to the eyes
  That see in deepest shade,
Unfolding things of rare surprise
  O'er dusky hill and glade.

And yet, unearthly seemed the strain
  Running through this cry,
Though earth and air may firmly chain
  This mystery of the sky.

An Outline of Golf—Chapter 2

1560. First chairman of house committee at St. Andrews elected, March 2. First chairman of house committee publicly lynched, March 3.

1570. A caddy finds the right ball and is knighted by the King.

1573. The Pro and members of the greens committee decide that the course isn't hard enough and build fifty more bunkers.

1574. The Pro and members of the greens committee decide that the course isn't hard enough and build an artificial lake.

1575. The Pro and members of the greens committee decide that the course isn't hard enough and build an artificial ocean. 659,090 more rules are written and passed.

1576. The Pro and members of the greens committee decide that the ten feet of fairway still remaining makes the course too easy and build three more sand traps.

1580. Sandy Campbell, while playing a full round, breaks the course record by using only 64 "Damns"—7 under par.

1581. First "Please Replace Pivots" signs set up, April 2. A player named McGregor places one, September 10, and is awarded a silver loving cup.

1585. The joke about the woman who said "I don't know much about golf. I wouldn't even know how to hold my caddy" is invented. In 1924 this wheeze is still going strong.

1590. A golfer named McAndrews leaves the course early and reaches his home in time for dinner. The shock kills his wife and seven children.

1591. Joe Livingstone loses a game and startles the world by saying "I have no alibi. I had a fair share of the breaks and can't complain about my luck. My opponent is simply a better golfer than I am—and that's all there is to it."

1593. Picture of Jawn D. Lockefeller, Scotch financier, made "on the links at St. Andrews," is published in the Sunday newspapers, and every week thereafter, for fifty-seven years.

1595. All members of a certain foursome reached the course exactly at the appointed time and the game is started without a moment's delay. See "The Miracle of St. Andrews" in any good encyclopedia.

1597. The Pro, while giving a lesson, tells a dub, "Bring the club back like this—" and the dub does.

1598. A player holes a badly-topped mashie shot and astonishes his companions by saying "That was just luck." 167 new bales of golf rules are written and passed.

1600. A visiting college professor plays around the course and arouses the envy of the members by swearing in seventeen different languages. The club hires him as Assistant Pro—to give lessons in plain and fancy swearing, with a course in Advanced Profanity for the sailor members.

1602. The Pro and members of the greens committee decide that the course isn't hard enough. Accordingly all the traps are made twenty feet deeper.

1603. The P. and ms. of the g. c. decide that "This course is too easy. A blind man could shoot it with a billiard cue and go 'round in par." So a perpendicular stone wall 400 feet high is built immediately in front of the first tee.

1605. A player named Joe McPherson takes an unfair advantage of his opponent and breaks one of the time-honored traditions of the royal and ancient game by remaining sober throughout a whole round. He is expelled from the club "for conduct unbecoming a member."

Echo Park

A misty march of trees that bend and blow,
A symphony of leaves that stir and grow,
Willow fronds that touch the water's face
And send long rootlets into unknown space.

A tropic palm that rears its tousled head
From out a well-trimmed fragrant pansy bed
Like some sleek beast, that gazes up from bars
And sees beyond the flaming tropic stars.

I hear the call of wild things nestling there,
The flit of wings upon the mist-filled air,
A peacock screams a night-call to his mate,
Twilight lingers, night time seems to wait.

A GREAT MAN'S WIFE

"Outright disgusting!" her friend insisted. "I suppose he's there as much as ever?"

a bit of lace and silk could be glimpsed at throat and ankle, she wore a sable coat of the kind and demensions staggering to moderate millionaires. She had the happy and triumphant look of a woman confident through experience that no slightest wish of hers would ever be denied by anybody, herself distinctly included; and, in all, she was dazzling, spoiled, charming, and fearless.

Certainly she had no fear of the two observant women, neither of their opinion nor of what she might give them cause to tell; that sparkle of azure she sent across the intervening street was so carelessly amused it was derisive, like the half nod to them with which she accompanied it. She and her companion walked closely together, absorbed in what they were saying, her hand upon his arm; and when they came to the terrace steps, where a closed foreign car waited, with a handsome young chauffeur at the wheel and a twin of him at attention beside the door, she did a thing that Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Cromwell took to be final and decisive.

Her companion had evidently offered some light pleasantry of witticism at which she took humorous offense for she removed her white gloved hand from his arm and struck him several times playfully upon the shoulder—but with the last blow allowed her hand to remain where it was, and, although she might have implied that it was to aid her movement into the car, the white fingers could still be seen remaining upon the shoulder of the man's brown overcoat as he, moving instantly after her, took his seat beside her in the gray velvet interior. Thus, what appeared to be a playful gesture protracted itself into a caress, and a caress of no great novelty to the participants.

At least, it was so interpreted across the street, where Mrs. Dodge gave utterance to a sound vocal but incoherent, and Mrs. Cromwell said "Oh, my!" in a husky whisper. The French car glided by them, passing them as they openly stared at it, or indeed glared at it, and a moment later it was far down the street, leaving them to turn their glares upon each other.

"That settles it," Mrs. Dodge gasped. "It ought to have been a gondola."

"A gondola?"

"A doge's wife carrying on with a fool poet or something; she always has that air to me. What a comedy!"

Mrs. Cromwell shook her head; her expression was of grief and shock. "It's tragedy, Lydia."

"Just as you choose to look at it. The practical point of view is that it's going to happen to Cornelia, and pretty soon, too! Some day before long that man's going to walk in and tell her she's got to step aside and let him marry somebody else. Doesn't what we just saw prove it? That woman did it deliberately in our faces, and she knows we're friends of his wife's. She deliberately showed us she didn't care what we saw. And as for him——"

"He didn't see us, I think," Mrs. Cromwell murmured.

"See us? He wouldn't have seen Cornelia herself if she'd been with us—and she might have been. That's why I say she ought to know."

"Oh, I don't think I'd like to——"

"Somebody ought to," Mrs. Dodge said firmly. "Somebody ought to tell her, and right away, at that!"

"Oh, but——"

"Oughtn't she to be given the chance to prepare herself for what's coming to her?" Mrs. Dodge asked testily. "She's made that man think he's Napoleon and so she's going to get what Napoleon's wife got! I think she ought to be warned at once, and a true friend would see to it."

In genuine distress, Mrs. Cromwell shrank from the idea. "Oh, but I could never——"

"Somebody's got to," Mrs. Dodge insisted implacably. "If you won't, then somebody else."

"Oh, but you—you wouldn't take such a responsibility, would you? You—you would'nt, would you, Lydia?"

The severe matron, Lydia Dodge, thus flatteringly questioned, looked more severe than ever. "I shouldn't care to take such a burden on my shoulders," she said. "Looking after my own is quite enough for me, and it's time I was on my way to them." She moved in departure, but when she had gone a little way, spoke over her shoulder. "Somebody's got to, though. Good-by."

Mrs. Cromwell, murmuring a response, entered her own domain and walked slowly up the wide brick path; then halted, turned irresolutely, and glanced to where her friend marched northward upon the pavement. To Mrs. Cromwell the outlines of Mrs. Dodge, thus firmly moving on, expressed something formidable and imminent. "But Lydia—" the hesitant lady said impulsively, though she knew that Lydia was already too distant to hear her. Mrs. Cromwell took an uncertain step or two, as if to follow and remonstrate, but paused, turned again, and went slowly into her house. A kind-hearted soul, and in a state of sympathetic distress for Cornelia Battle, she was beset by compassion and perplexity during what remained of the afternoon; and her husband and daughters found her so preoccupied at the dinner table that they accused her of concealing a headache. But by this time what she concealed was an acute anxiety; she feared that Lydia's sense of duty might lead to action, and that the action might be precipitate and destructive. For Mrs. Cromwell knew well enough that Cornelia's slavery was Cornelia's paradise—the only paradise Cornelia knew how to build for herself—and paradises are of all structures the most perilously fragile.

Mrs. Cromwell was the more fearful because, being a woman, she understood that more than a sense of duty would impel Lydia to action: Lydia herself might interpret her action as the prompting of duty, but the vital incentive was likely to be something much more human; for within the race is a profound willingness to see a proud head lowered, particularly if that head be one that has displayed its pride. Cornelia had displayed hers too long and too gallingly for Lydia's patience; Lydia had "really meant it," Mrs. Cromwell thought, recalling the fierceness of Mrs. Dodge's "I've had all I can stand of it!" that afternoon. A sense of duty with gall behind it is indeed to be feared; and the end of Mrs. Cromwell's anxieties was the conclusion that Cornelia's paradise of slavery was more imminently threatened by the virtuous Lydia than by that gorgeous pagan, Mrs. Sylvester.

The troubled lady began to wish devoutly that the sight of Mrs. Sylvester caressing Mr. Battle had not shocked her into a fluttering and indecisive state of mind; she should have discussed the event more calmly with Lydia; should have argued against anything precipitate; and so, as soon as she could after her preoccupied dinner, she went to the telephone and gave Mrs. Dodge's number.

Mr. and Mrs. Dodge were dining in town, she was informed; they were going to the theater afterward and were not expected to return until midnight. This blank wall at once increased Mrs. Cromwell's inward disturbance, for she was a woman readily tortured by her imagination; and in her mind she began to design terrible pictures of what might now be happening in the house of the Battles. Until she went to the telephone she thought it unlikely that Lydia had acted with such promptness; but after receiving through the instrument the information that no information was to be had for the present, Mrs. Cromwell became certain that Mrs. Dodge had already destroyed Cornelia's paradise.

She went away from the telephone, then came back to it and again sat before the little table that bore it; but she did not at once put its miraculous powers into operation. Instead, she sat staring at it, afraid to employ it, while the pictures in her mind became more piteous and more horrifying. Cornelia had no talk except "Mr. Battle says;" she had no thought except "Mr. Battle thinks;" she had no life at all except as part of her husband's life; and if that were taken away from her, what was left? She had made no existence whatever of her own and for herself, and if brought to believe that she had lost him, she was annihilated.

If the great Battle merely died, Cornelia could live on, as widows of the illustrious sometimes do, to be his monument continually reinscribed with mourning tributes; but if a Venetian beauty carried him off in a gondola, Cornelia would be so extinct that the act of self-destruction might well be thought gratuitous; and yet Mrs. Cromwell's imagination pictured Cornelia in the grisly details of its commisson by all the usual processes. She saw Cornelia drown herself variously; saw her with a razor, with a pistol, with a rope, with poison, with an ice pick.

Naturally, it became impossible to endure such pictures, and Mrs. Cromwell tremulously picked up the telephone, paused before releasing the curved nickel prong, but did release it, and when a woman's voice addressed her, "what number, please?" she returned the breathless inquiry: "Is that you, Cornelia?" Then she apologized, pronounced a number, and was presently greeted by the response: "Mr. Roderick Battle's residence. Who is it, please?"

"Mrs. Cromwell. May I speak to Mrs. Battle."

"I think so, ma'am."

In the interval of silence Mrs. Cromwell muttered. "I think so" to herself. The maid wasn't certain; that was bad, for it might indicate a state of prostration.

"Yes?" said the little voice in the telephone. "Is it Mrs. Cromwell?"

Mrs. Cromwell with a great effort assumed her most smiling and reassuring expression. "Cornelia? Is it you, Cornelia?"

"Yes."

"I just wanted to tell you again what a lovely impression your essay made on me, dear. I've been thinking of it ever since, and I felt you might like to know it."

"Thank you, Mrs. Cromwell."

"Lydia Dodge and I kept on talking about it after you left us this afternoon," Mrs. Cromwell continued, beaming fondly upon the air above the telephone. "We both said we thought it was the best paper ever read at the club. I—I just wondered if—if Lydia called you up to tell you so, too. Did she?"

"No. No, she didn't call me up."

"Oh, didn't she? I just thought she might have because she was so enthusiastic."

"No. She didn't."

Mrs. Cromwell listened intently, "No, Mrs. Dodge didn't call me up," she said again.

Mrs. Cromwell offered some manifestations of mirth, though she intended them to express a tender cordiality rather than amusement; and the facial sweetness with which she was favoring the air before her became less strained; a strong sense of relief was easing her. "Well, I just thought Lydia might, you know," she said, continuing to ripple her gentle laughter into the mouthpiece. "She was so enthusiastic, I just thought——"

"No, she didn't call me up," the small voice in the telephone interrupted.

"Well, I'm gl—" But Mrs. Cromwell checked herself sharply, having begun to impulsively. "I hope I'm not keeping you from anything you were doing," she said hastily, to change the subject.

"No; I'm all alone. Mr. Battle is spending the evening with Mrs. Sylvester."

"What!" Mrs. Cromwell exclaimed, and her almost convivial expression disappeared instantly; her face became a sculpture of features only. "He is?"

"Yes. He's finishing the interior of her new house. With important clients like that he always interprets them into their houses, you know. He makes a study of their personalities."

"I see," Mrs. Cromwell said. Then, recovering herself, she was able to nod pleasantly and beam again, though now her beaming was rather rigidly automatic. "Well, I mustn't keep you. I just wanted to tell you again how immensely we all admired your beautiful essay, and I thought possibly Lydia might have called you up to say so, too, because she fairly raved over it when we were——"

"No." The metallic small voice said; and it informed her for the third time: "She didn't call me up." Then it added, to Mrs. Cromwell's staggering dismay: "She came here."

"No!" Mrs. Cromwell cried.

"Yes. She came here," the voice in the instrument repeated.

"She did?"

"Yes. Just before dinner. She came to see me."

"Oh, my!" Mrs. Cromwell murmured. "What did she say?"

"She was in great trouble about Mr. Dodge."

"What?"

"She was in a tragic state," the imper-

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

A Lost Key Forces Their Midnight Intrusion as Self-Invited Guests

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of "Helen and Warren" Characters

"COULDN'T wake her with a cannon!" Warren, pounding on the door with one hand, punched the bell with the other.

"She sleeps with the covers over her head, that's why. I've told her it was unhealthy. What will we do if we can't get in?" anguished Helen.

"Plenty of hotels," now stabbing the bell to make sharp staccato peals.

"In evening dress—without any baggage? We couldn't go to a hotel."

"Can't stand here all night. Pretty chill for a park bench," again beating on the door.

Yesterday Helen had lost her key. That morning she had borrowed Warren's to have another made. In the rush of getting off for the Dalton's theater party, she had left, in her street bag, both his key and the new one.

Now home at half-past 11, they found they were keyless and were vainly trying to arouse their sound-sleeping maid.

"Dear, let's go down and phone up to the Reynolds. They've a spare room."

"Nothing doing," grimly. "If we're chumps enough to get locked out—we'll not sponge on our friends."

"But, Warren, we can't go to a hotel! They'll say they've no rooms. That time we went to Philadelphia for the day and stayed over night—you know how embarrassing it was to get a room without baggage. And now in evening dress——"

"We'll go to the Belmont. Know one of the clerks there. No, by George, he's a day clerk—won't be on. Well, we'll get in somewhere."

"Dear, we've done a lot for the Reynolds. She's always borrowing and I've never asked a thing of her. She's got my vacuum now. She'll be glad to——"

"Now, we're going to a hotel, I tell you. Hereafter, tie your key around your neck. You're always losing it."

"I never lost a key but once before, and then it wasn't my fault. Don't you remember when you——"

"Bet she's snoring loud enough to wake Old Tut," now resting his hand by punching the bell with his cane. "Come on, no use wasting any more time."

"You can't make her hear, sir?" The night elevator boy was duly solicitous as he brought them down. "Ain't no way you can get in?"

"No, we're up against it. Next time that superintendent goes out, you make him leave the pass keys. Ought to stay on his job, anyway."

Stepping from the car, they confronted the Reynolds, waiting to be taken up.

"Not starting out this time of night?" was Mrs. Reynolds' greeting.

"We're locked out! We can't wake Susie and the superintendent's away for the night. We're going to a hotel. I wanted to phone up to you, but Warren wouldn't let me," ignoring his restraining scowl.

"Why, yes—of course. We can put you up, somehow," but without the enthusiasm Helen expected. "If you don't mind being uncomfortable——"

"We'll not butt in on you this time of night," interrupted Warren.

"No trouble at all. Come on," insisted Mr. Reynolds. "We'll fix you up."

Conscious of Warren's grim disapproval as they turned back into the elevator, Helen nervously explained her dread of going to a hotel without baggage.

"I'm afraid you won't be very comfortable," apologized Mrs. Reynolds when she ushered her into a tiny cluttered room. "We've been using this as a storeroom."

"Yes there're so few closets in these apartments." Helen was helping her clear the bed. "No, don't bother to take anything out—we can pile them here on the floor. I'm sorry we're making you all this trouble."

"Not at all," politely. "We haven't used this for so long, I don't keep it made," uncovering the mattress. "I'll get the linen."

While they were making the bed, Warren, who had gone into the living-room for a smoke with Mr. Reynolds, came to the door.

"This's an imposition, Mrs. Reynolds. We should've gone to a hotel."

"You'd have been more comfortable, but we're glad to have you," perfunctorily. "Here's a nightgown and a suit of Mr. Reynolds' pajamas. Now do you think you'll be all right? Can I get you anything else?"

"Not a thing. I'm sure we'll be most comfortable. And don't think of us in the morning—we'll slip out before you're awake. Susie's always up early—her one virtue," laughed Helen.

"Then good-night," shoving a protruding bandbox under the bed. "I hope you sleep well."

"Sore as the devil, and I don't blame her," muttered Warren, when they were alone. 'Pretty nervy—parking ourselves on her this time of night."

"Why, dear, she doesn't mind at all—you just imagine that."

"Well she was mighty cool about it," looking for a place to hang his coat.

"No, don't put it on that box—it's dusty. There's no place to hang it. Fold it wrong side out and lay it here."

"Hello, a Dumb Dora! How about that? Slick, eh?" draping his coat on a dressmaker's form in the corner.

The soiled corset on the figure showed grotesquely between the black satin lapels.

"You'd think she'd wash that corset," Helen was getting out of her evening gown. "And look at all those old shoes and that old fur coat. You talk about me hoarding things—I'm not as bad as that."

"You're not, eh? Got our hall closet crammed full of junk."

"She might've given us a chair. Everything's covered with dust. We can't lay a thing down. I'll have to hang my clothes over the foot of the bed."

"'What the well-dressed woman will wear,'" encircling the dummy's neck with his collar and tie.

"She didn't give us a bathrobe. How can we get to the bathroom?"

"Right across the hall. Put on my overcoat."

In the bathroom Mrs. Reynolds had made no provision for her midnight guests. There were no fresh towels on the racks.

"She hasn't even given us a towel!" when Helen returned from her scant ablutions.

"Huh, you've got a nerve to put up a kick after horning in here this late. Think what a howl you'd make if anyone wished themselves on us at 1 a.m. Hope I don't bust these pajamas," cautiously wiggling his shoulders.

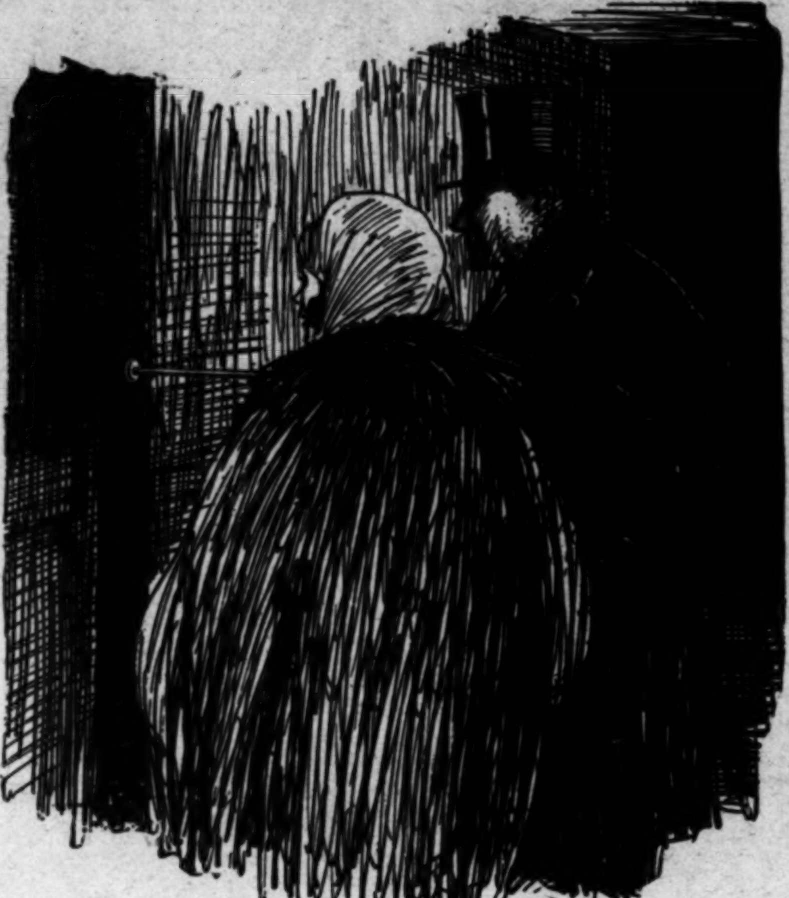
"You wouldn't think Mr. Reynolds was so much smaller. Your legs! Dear, you look too funny for words."

"Sort of parky 'round the stumps," grinning down at his gaunt ankles beneath the too-short pajamas. "Not built for a perfect thirty-eight. There, that's better," unbuttoning the coat at the neck.

"The next button, too. You'll tear it across the chest. And mine's miles too big. Flannelette! I didn't know anybody wore that now."

"Lot more sensible than those lace and ribbon flimsies you wear," stalking out to the bathroom, his coat over his abbreviated pajamas.

When he came back, Helen was struggling with the one window by the bed.



They found they were keyless and were vainly trying to arouse their sound-sleeping maid.

"See if you can get this down from the top—so it won't blow right on our heads. And we're not going to have enough covers."

"How about this?" Ripping off his overcoat, he flung it across the bed.

"Won't reach over us both. Dear, we'll have to ask for another blanket."

"We'll do nothing of the sort. Not going to put her to any more trouble."

"My rings!" holding up her hand. "I left them in the bathroom. Dear, you get them, won't you? You've got your shoes on."

Grumblingly Warren jerked his coat from the bed, threw it over his shoulders, and with elephantine caution tiptoed down the hall.

"What'll you forget next?" when he came back with her rings. "Better tie 'em around your neck with your key."

"I know, I'm all flustered tonight," depreciatingly. "You get in now, I'll cover you up with your coat."

She was spreading over the bed his coat and her evening wrap, when someone knocked on the door.

"I'm sorry I didn't give you enough covers," Mrs. Reynolds handed in a rose-plaid blanket.

"She heard!" whispered Helen. Closing the door she leaned against it in panicky dismay. "Oh, did she—did she hear everything I said?"

"If she got what you said about the covers, she got the rest," in a grim undertone. "And you were hammering everything about the place."

"Oh, no, it would be too awful!" in an anguished whisper. "You don't think she heard what I said about the towels—the nightgown—and that soiled corset?"

"Serves you right, if she did! You blow in here at this hour and start panning the works."

"I didn't mean to! It sounded so much worse than I meant it," almost in tears. "Dear, you know I don't criticise—not in a hateful way."

"Well if that wasn't knocking—what d'you call it? You weren't handing her any bouquets. Here, put out that light. No use stewing over it now."

In bed, Helen lay staring at the unfamiliar shadows in abject remorse over her thoughtless ingratitude.

"Lie still," growled Warren, shouldering the covers. "How d'you expect me to sleep with you flopping around? This bed's none too wide, anyway."

"Dear, how could I have said those horrid, cattish things? Tell me when I say things like that? Don't let that habit grow on me," tremulously.

"Oh, well, save your heroics: I oughtn't to tell you, but if I don't, you'll toss around here all night. She didn't hear you."

"She didn't hear me?" clutching his arm. "She didn't—then how did she know we wanted more cover?"

"Met her as I went to the bathroom for your rings. I asked for a blanket. But it wasn't your fault she didn't hear you. You're always shooting off your trap. Never stop to think how anything sounds. Now turn over there! Stop thrashing around and let me get some sleep."

small voice replied with perfect distinctness. "She was in a tragic state about her husband."

"About John Dodge?" Mrs. Cromwell cried.

"Yes. She was hurried and didn't have time to tell me any details because they had a dinner engagement in town, and he kept telephoning her they'd be disgraced if she didn't come home and dress, but that's what she came to see me about. It seems he's been misbehaving himself over some fascinating and unscrupulous woman, and Mrs. Dodge thinks he probably intends to ask for a divorce and abandon her. She was in a most upset state over it, of course."

"Cornelia!" Mrs. Cromwell shouted the name at the mouthpiece.

"Yes. Isn't it distressing?" was the response. "Of course, I won't mention it to anybody but you. I supposed you knew all about it since you're her most intimate friend."

Mrs. Cromwell made an effort to speak coherently. "Let me try to understand you," she said. "You say that Lydia Dodge came to you this afternoon——"

"It was really evening," the small voice interrupted, in correction. "About 7. And their engagement was in town at half past. That's why he kept calling her up so excitedly."

"And she told you," Mrs. Cromwell continued, "Lydia Dodge told you that her husband, John Dodge, was philandering with another?"

"There was no doubt about it whatever," the voice interrupted. "Some friends of hers had seen an actual caress exchanged between Mr. Dodge and the other woman."

"What!"

"Yes. That's what she told me."

"Wait!" Mrs. Cromwell begged. "Lydia Dodge told you that John Dodge——"

"Yes," the voice of Cornelia Battle replied colorlessly in the telephone. "It seems too tragic, and it was such a shock to me—I never dreamed that people of 40 or 50 had troubles like that—but it was what she came here to tell me. Of course, she didn't have time to tell me much, because she was so upset and Mr. Dodge was in such a hurry for her to come home. I never dreamed there was anything but peace and happiness between them, did you?"

"No, I didn't," gasped Mrs. Cromwell. "But Cornelia——"

"That's all I know about it, I'm afraid."

"Cornelia——"

"Probably she'll talk about it to you pretty soon," Cornelia said, at the other end of the wire. "I'm surprised she didn't tell you before she did me; you really know her so much better than I do. I'm afraid I'll have to go now. One of Mr. Battle's assistants has just come in and I'm doing some work with him. It was lovely of you to call me up about the little essay, but of course that was all Mr. Battle. Good-night."

Mrs. Cromwell sat staring at the empty bit of mechanism in her hand until it rattled indignantly, warning her to replace it upon its prong.

She had a restless night, for she repeatedly woke up with a start, her eyes opening widely in the darkness of her bedroom; and each time that this happened she made the same muffled and incomplete exclamation: "Well, of all—!" Her condition was still as exclamatory as it was anxiously expectant when, just after her 9 o'clock breakfast the next morning, she went to her Georgian drawing-room window and beheld the sterling figure of Mrs. Dodge in the act of hurrying from the sidewalk to the Georgian doorway. Mrs. Cromwell ran to admit her; brought her quickly into the drawing-room. "Lydia!" she cried. "What on earth happened?" For if telephones had never been invented, the early caller's expression would have made it plain that there had been a happening.

"I'd have called you up last night," the perturbed Lydia began; "but we didn't get back till 1 o'clock and it was too late. In all my life I never had such an experience!"

"You don't mean at the theater or——"

"No! Mrs. Dodge returned indignantly. "I mean with that woman."

"With Cornelia?"

"With Cornelia Battle."

"But tell me," Mrs. Cromwell implored. "My dear, I've been in such of perplexity——"

"Perplexity!" her friend echoed scornfully and demanded: "What sort of state do you think I've been in? My dear, I went to her."

"To Cornelia?"

"To Cornelia Battle," Mrs. Dodge said. "I went straight home after I left you yesterday, but I kept thinking about what we'd seen——"

"You mean—" Mrs. Cromwell paused, and glanced nervously through the glass of the broad paned window beside which she and her guest had seated themselves. Her troubled eyes came to rest upon the pinkish Italian villa across the street. "You mean what we saw—over there?"

"I mean what was virtually an embrace between Roderick Brooks Battle and Mrs. Sylvester under our eyes." Mrs. Dodge said angrily. "And she looked us square in the face just before she did it! I also mean that both of them showed by their manner that such caresses were absolutely familiar and habitual—and that was all I needed to prove that the talk about them was only too well founded. So, when I'd thought it over and over—oh, I didn't act in haste—I decided it was somebody's absolute duty to prepare Cornelia for what I plainly saw was coming to her. Did you ever see anything show more proprietorship than Mrs. Sylvester's fondling of that man's shoulder? So, as you had declared you wouldn't go, and although it was late and Mr. Dodge and I had an important dinner engagement, I made up my mind it had to be done immediately and I went."

"But what did you tell her?" Mrs. Cromwell implored.

"Never," said Mrs. Dodge, "never in my life have I had such an experience! I tried to begin tactfully; I didn't want to give her a shock, and so I tried to begin and lead up to it; but it was difficult to begin at all, because I'd scarcely sat down before she told me my husband had got home and had telephoned to see if I'd reached her house, and he'd left word for me to come straight back home because he was afraid we'd be late for the dinner—and all the time I was trying to talk to her, her maid kept coming in to say he was calling up again, and I'd have to go and beseech him to let me alone for a minute—but he wouldn't——"

Mrs. Cromwell was unable to wait in patience through these preliminaries. "Lydia! What did you tell her?"

"I'm trying to explain it as well as I can, please," her guest returned irritably. "If I didn't explain how crazily my husband kept behaving you couldn't possibly understand. He'd got it into his head that we had to be at this dinner on time, because it was with some people who have large mining interests and——"

"Lydia, what did you——"

"I told you I tried to be tactful," said Mrs. Dodge. "I tried to lead up to it, and I'll tell you exactly what I said, though with that awful telephone interrupting every minute it was hard to say anything connectedly! First, I told her what a deep regard both of us had for her."

"Both of you? You mean you and your husband, Lydia?"

"No, you and me. It was necessary to mention you, of course, because of what we saw yesterday."

"Oh," said Mrs. Cromwell. "Well, go on."

"I told her," Mrs. Dodge continued, complying. "I said nobody could have her interests more at heart than you and I did, and that was why I had come. She thanked me, but I noticed a change in her manner right there. I thought she looked at me in a kind of bright-eyed way, as if she were on her guard and suspicious. I thought she looked like that, and now I'm sure she did. I said, 'Cornelia, I want to put a little problem to you, just to see if you think I've done right in coming.' She said 'Yes, Mrs. Dodge,' and asked me what the problem was."

"And what was it, Lydia?"

"My dear, will you let me tell you? I said, in the kindest way I said, 'Cornelia, just for a moment let us suppose that my husband were not true to me; suppose he might even be planning to set me aside so that he could marry another woman; and suppose that two women friends of mine, who had my interests dearly at heart, had seen him with this other woman, and suppose her to be a fascinating woman, and that my friends saw with their own eyes that my husband felt her fascination so deeply that anybody could tell in an instant he was actually in love with her; and, more than that,' I said, 'suppose that these friends of mine saw my husband actually exchanging a caress with this woman, and saw them go off driving with her, with her hand on his shoulder and he showing that he liked it there and was used to having it there; Cornelia,' I said, 'Cornelia, what would you think about the question of duty for those two friends of mine who had seen such a thing? Cornelia,' I said, 'wouldn't you think it was the true duty of one or the other of them to come and tell me and warn me and give me time to prepare myself?' That's what I said to her."

"And what did she——"

"She jumped right up and came and threw her arms around me," said Mrs. Dodge in a strained voice. "I never had such an experience in my life!"

"But what did she say?"

"She said 'You poor thing!'" Mrs. Dodge explained irascibly. "She didn't 'say' it, either; she shouted it, and she kept on shouting it over and over. 'You poor thing!' And when she wasn't saying that she was saying she'd never dreamed Mr. Dodge was that sort of a man, and she made such a commotion I was afraid the neighbors would hear her!"

"But why didn't you——"

"I did!" Mrs. Dodge returned passionately. "I told her a hundred times I didn't mean Mr. Dodge, but she never gave me a chance to finish a word I began; she just kept talking on about what a terrible thing it must be for me, and how dreadful it was to think of Mr. Dodge misbehaving like that—I tell you I never in my life had such an experience!"

"But why didn't you make her listen, at least long enough to——"

Mrs. Dodge's look was that of a person badgered to desperation. "I couldn't! Every time I opened my mouth she shouted louder than I did! She'd say 'You poor thing!' again, or some more about Mr. Dodge, or she'd want to know if I didn't need ammonia or camphor, or she'd offer to make beef tea for me! And every minute my husband was making an idot of himself ringing the Battles' telephone again. You don't seem to understand what sort of an experience it was at all! I tell you when I finally had to leave the house she was standing on their front steps shouting after me that she'd never tell anybody a thing about Mr. Dodge unless I wanted her to!"

"It's so queer!" Mrs. Cromwell said, bewildered more than ever. "If I'd been in your place I know I'd never have come away without making her understand I meant her husband, not mine!"

"'Making her understand?'" Mrs. Dodge repeated, mocking her friend's voice, so considerable was her bitterness. "You goose! You don't suppose she didn't understand that, do you?"

"You don't think——"

"Absolutely! She had been expecting it to happen."

"What to happen?"

"Somebody's coming to warn her about Mrs. Sylvester. She did the whole thing deliberately. Absolutely! She understood I was talking about Battle as well as you do now. Of course," said Mrs. Dodge, "of course she understood!"

Then both ladies seemed to ponder, and for a time uttered various sounds of marvelling; but suddenly Mrs. Cromwell, whose glance had wandered to the window, straightened herself to an attentive rigidity. Her guest's glance followed hers, and instantly became fixed, but neither lady spoke, for a sharply outlined coincidence was before them, casting a spell upon them and holding them fascinated.

Across the street a French car entered the driveway of the stucco house and a Venetian beauty of ruddy hair descended, wrapped in ermine too glorious for the time and occasion. Out of the green door of the house eagerly came upon the balustraded terrace a dark man, poetic and scholarly in appearance, dressed scrupulously and with a gardenia, like a bridegroom's flower, in his coat. In his hand he held an architect's blue print, but for him and for the azure-eyed lady in ermine this blue print seemed (to the watchers) not more important, nor less, than that book in which the two lovers of Rimini read no more that day. They glanced but absently at the blue print; then the man let it dangle from his hand while he looked into the lady's eyes and she into his; and they talked with ineffable gentleness together.

Here was an Italian episode most romantic in its elements; a Renaissance terrace for the trysting place of a Renaissance widow and a great man, two who met and made love under the spying eyes of female-sbirri lurking in a window opposite; and it was Cornelia Battle who made the romantic episode into a realistic coincidence. In a vehicle needful of cleaning and polish she appeared from down the long street, sitting in the attentive attitude necessary for the proper guidance of what bore her, and wearing (as Mrs. Cromwell hoarsely informed Mrs. Dodge) "her market clothes." That she was returning from a market there could be no doubt; Cornelia had herself this touch of the Renaissance, but a Renaissance late, northern and robust. Both of the rear windows of her diligent vehicle framed still life studies to lure the brush of sixteenth and seventeenth century lowland painters: the green tops of sheaved celery nodded there; fat turnips reposed in baskets; purple ragged plumes of beets pressed softly against the glass; jugs that suggested buttermilk and cider, perhaps both, snugly neighbored the hearty vegetables, and made plain to all that the good wife in the forward seat had a providing heart for her man and her household.

The ladies in the Georgian window were truly among those who cared to look. "Oh, my!" Mrs. Cromwell whispered.

Cornelia stopped her market machine and jumped out, in her market clothes, at the foot of the driveway, where stood Mrs. Sylvester's French car in the care of its two magnificent young men. There was an amiable briskness, cheerful and friendly, in the air with which Cornelia trotted up the terrace steps and joined the romantic couple who stood beside the balustrade. The three entered into converse.

Mrs. Cromwell and Mrs. Dodge became even more breathless; and then, with amazement, and perhaps a little natural disappointment, they saw that the conversation was not acrimonious—at least not outwardly so. They marked that Cornelia, smiling, took the lead in it, and that she at once set her hand upon her husband's arm—and in a manner of ownership so masterful and complete that the proprietorship assumed by Mrs. Sylvester in the same gesture, the preceding day, seemed in comparison the temporary claim of a mere borrower. And Mrs. Cromwell marked also a kind of feebleness in the attitude of the Venetian beauty; Mrs. Sylvester was smiling politely, but there was a disturbed petulance in her smile. Suddenly Mrs. Cromwell preceived that beside Cornelia, for all Cornelia's skimpiness, Mrs. Sylvester looked ineffective. With that, glancing at the sturdy figure of Lydia Dodge, Mrs. Cromwell came to the conclusion that since Cornelia had been too much for Lydia, Cornelia would certainly be too much for Mrs. Sylvester.

"Look!" said Lydia.

Cornelia and her husband were leaving the terrace together. Battle walked to the sedan with her, and held the door open for her; she climbed to the driver's seat and semed to wait, with assurance, for him to do more than hold the door. And at this moment the seriousness of his expression was so emphasized that it was easily visible to the Georgian window, though only his profile was given to its view as he looked back, over his shoulder, at the fixed and glazing smile of the lady upon the terrace. He seemed to waver, hesitating; and then, somewhat bleakly, but with an air strongly expressive of finality, he climbed into the sedan beside his wife.

"Open it!" Mrs. Dodge was struggling with a catch of the Georgian window.

"What for?"

"She's shouting again! I've got to hear her!" Mrs. Dodge panted; and the window yielded to her exertions.

Cornelia's attitude showed that she was encouraging her machine to begin operations, while at the same time she was calling parting words to Mrs. Sylvester. "Good-by!" Cornelia shouted. "Mr. Battle says he's been so inspired by your sympathy in his work! Mr. Battle says that's so necessary to an architect! Mr. Battle says no artist can ever even hope to do anything great without it. Mr. Battle says——"

But here, under the urging of her foot, the engine burst into a shattering uproar; ague seized the car with a bitter grip; convulsive impulses of the apparatus to leap at random were succeeded by more decorous ideas, and then the sedan moved mildly forward; the vegetables nodded affably in the windows, and the Battles were borne from sight.

"I see," said Lydia Dodge, moving back to her chair. "I understand now."

"You understand what?" her hostess inquired brusquely as she closed the Georgian window.

"I understand what I just saw. I can't tell you exactly how or why, but it was plainly there—in Roderick Brooks Battle's look, in his slightest gesture. We were absolutely mistaken to think it possible. He'll his battalion in France, and that in June, 1917 he was already in the trenches. Half a dozen of his letters were quoted—gay whimsical letters, rich in anecdotes of life in the trenches and in billets behind the lines. The telegram, announcing briefly to the mother that her son had been killed in action, was also quoted and was followed by several letters from brother officers, condoling, and attesting to the young man's worth.

THE VOICE IN THE HALL

All the foregoing was by way of introduction. It was the material that followed which had gained for the strange volume so many thousand readers, such ponderous indorsements from scientific men noted for their belief in spiritism, and so much space in a press congested with news of the Rhine occupation and the budding Peace Conference at Paris.

The nature of the book was indicated in its title: "Letters from Beyond the Front." Mrs. Ballantine told how, two months after Francis's "going over," she had come upon a poem she liked, the first of which was:

"Mother Earth, are the heroes dead?" and had sat down at her desk to copy it. But when she put pencil to paper she did not write the lines she had intended. Instead, some force outside her own volition caused her to form the word "No."

For a moment she was at a loss to understand this. Then it occurred to her that the word "No" was like an answer to the interrogation of the poem, and while she was thinking thus her hand, without conscious effort on her part, had written, "Yes" as though in reply to her unspoken thought.

"Is this a message from the Beyond?" she had asked.

Again, "Yes."

"Who is writing?"

In answer came the initials "F. K. B."

"Is it you, Francis?"

"Yes, mother."

With a little practice, Mrs. Ballantine went on to say, she developed great facility in communicating, by means of this automatic writing, with her son, whom she now mentioned as being "nominally dead;" and it was with messages received from him that the larger portion of the book was taken up.

At first, Francis declared, he had been a little bit confused. The arrival in the Beyond was a strange experience. But he had been helped by friends already there, chief among them his grandfather Knox, who, he said, occupied a most important position. He himself was doing work which interested him, but which it was difficult to describe. It was difficult, too, to describe most phases of the Life Beyond, because the worldly vocabulary was so limited. It was like trying to describe wireless to a South Sea Islander in his own tongue.

His present existence was on what, as nearly as he could find words to describe it, might be called an Etheric Plane. Every article in the world, it was stated, gave off what might, for want of a better name, be termed Etheric Magnetism, which, floating up to the Etheric Plane, acquired substance. Etheric Magnetism was something like a perfume, and each race of people, as well as each individual and object, had a distinct perfume which declared the exact quality of that race, person or object.

There was constant growth. People changed, but in a way that could not easily be explained. They grew finer, bigger, stronger, but you recognized them just as you would on earth. Of course those who had been strongest and first on earth were here correspondingly advanced. He had searched for those he knew. He had not as yet seen his father, though he knew that he was there, but he had his grandfather Knox many times.

If there could be said to exist in the Beyond such a thing as sadness, it comes from the fact that while, under certain immutable laws and conditions, the inhabitants of that place could revisit the Earth Plane, it was almost impossible to make those on earth aware of their presence. Just as a wireless receiver must be tuned to catch messages coming from the void, so the human consciousness, or subconsciousness, must be tuned to catch communications from the Beyond.

There were very few receivers—very few persons on the Earth Plane capable of attuning themselves to the proper pitch. Such persons were psychically very advanced. Mrs. Ballantine was one of them. The close bond of sympathy which had always existed between herself and him not only made communication easier, but was susceptible of great development. He elaborated upon the beautiful qualities of their relationship, telling what a considerate and helpful mother she had always been; and Mrs. Ballantine added in a footnote that, whereas she would have preferred to omit a reference so personal, she had refrained from making alterations or elisions, in order that the record should be complete. Automatic writing was but the beginning, Francis assured her. Later he would try to speak to her and appear visibly before her. Not until Mary had read nearly to the end of the book did she discover the passage she had been seeking.

> On this side of the veil, mother, we see things which were hidden from our earthly eyes. We can look back and laugh—for there is laughter here—at things which, on the Earth Plane, seemed to us of vital consequence.
> Your earthly wisdom was far greater than mine. As you know, I permitted what I then regarded as serious disappointment to govern my impetuous action in leaving home. You knew best. You tried to guide me. It was useless. But now, mother, it is ridiculously apparent that you were right about M.
> But here, as you well understand, regrets and grudges do not exist. Therefore, if you should see M., it would be the part of kindness to make it understood that on this side there is only happiness, and that no troubled soul on earth need be concerned about the question of forgiveness from those who have passed on.

A footnote by Mrs. Ballantine here referred to the disappointment mentioned in the second chapter, and added that "M" was the person who had occasioned it.

So this was the vaunted "confirmation" of that false and cruel charge!

With her clenched fist Mary smote the page.

"He never wrote it!" she cried aloud. "He never wrote it!"

There was a glitter in her blue eyes as she closed the book. Rising, she hastened to the closet, snatched a coat, hat, and furs, and put them on. The book and Presh's letter lay on the window seat. Seizing them, she started to insert the letter between the pages, but suddenly desisted.

"No!" she exclaimed, slipping the missive into her bag. "This one shan't go in there, Presh! This one is real!"

The brightness was beginning to fade from the short winter afternoon as Mary ascended the brown-stone steps of Mrs. Ballantine's wide, well-kept, but austere-looking house. She rang, and stepped to the spotless marble floor of the vestibule. Presently a shadow showed faintly against the ornamental ground-glass panel of one of the inner doors; then the door swung slowly open, revealing in the aperture a middle-aged butler with a silver card tray hanging ready in one hand.

"How do you do, Reeves? Is Mrs. Ballantine at home?"

Reeves had opened the heavy walnut door in his best manner but at the sight of her he unbent so far as to smile.

"Yes, Miss Mary." And he added: "It's been a long while since we've seen you."

Entering, she nodded an amiable acknowledgment of this. It had indeed been a long time since she had come to this house—nearly a year. Her last call had been made a few days after the news of Presh's death had come, and it was because of the frigid manner in which her condolences had on that occasion been received by Mrs. Ballantine that she had not returned.

"Mrs. Ballantine is in her sitting room," said Reeves.

She knew that because of her old familiarity with the house and its family, he meant to suggest her going directly to the sitting-room.

"I think you had better announce me," she said.

"Very good, Miss Mary." He held back the heavy portieres, letting them fall again when she had passed into the drawing-room.

Mary well remembered that room. It was long, spacious, formal with the ugly and stupid formality of the 'sixties. At the rear, folding doors, now closed, led to the dining-room; at the front two vast, plate-glass windows, heavily curtained with stiff lace and velvet, admitted a dim light. Even when the house was overheated there was here always the suggestion of a chill. The furniture, dark and solid, showed in its every line the bedevilling touch of the carvers and upholsterers of two or three generations ago. There were two curio cabinets, with glass doors and silk-covered shelves littered with small, useless souvenirs of foreign travel—china, ivory, tortoise shell and silver—and on the walls a number of Victorian paintings, drab in tone, most conspicuous among them a portrait of Mrs. Ballantine's father, which hung above a marble mantelpiece ornamented with meaningless carving. The portrait showed Mr. Knox in middle life, at the period when his financial-looking side whiskers were beginning to turn gray. The head was massive, the eyes glared, and the figure, encased in a frock coat, sat rigidly erect upon a tufted armchair beside a table on which lay a large book. One finger was inserted in the book, as though to mark a place. Mary noticed that the table cover of red plush, on which the book lay, remained the brightest spot of color in the room, time-bedimmed though the pigment was.

Eighteen years or so ago, when as a little girl she had begun to notice and remember houses, there had been in New York many rooms of this type; but though, as she reflected unregretfully, such rooms had of late years been disappearing, giving place to modern, cheerful furnishing and decoration, she somehow felt that this solid mansion built by old Ira Knox and inhabited by his daughter, would never, never change.

As she was reflecting thus, Reeves returned to announce that Mrs. Ballantine was coming down, and Mary well knew that this descending was intended by the lady as a preliminary snub, since it was her custom to receive those whom she treated as intimates in her sitting-room upon the floor above.

A moment later Reeves again parted the heavy portieres, letting them drop into place of their own weight after Mrs. Ballantine had entered.

"How do you do, Mary," said the lady, without a note of interrogation, and without offering her hand, as she rustled majestically to a fringed and tufted chair. Seating herself, she indicated with a gesture to Mary, who had risen, a chair fully two yards from her own. "How is your aunt, Miss Banks?"

"Quite well, thank you," answered Mary, taking the proffered chair and placing Mrs. Ballantine's book conspicuously in her lap.

"I understood that you were working at Red Cross headquarters. Have you dropped that?" Her tone implied a criticism.

"I have not, Mrs. Ballantine."

"Ah! It was my understanding that the headquarters staff worked full time daily."

"We did until about a month ago—just after the armistice. But work is lighter now. This is my day off." Then, without waiting for an answer, she plunged in. "I have just read your book, so I came to see you."

"My book?" Mrs. Ballantine glanced at the volume in the girl's lap. "You are in error in calling it mine. Of course I was the medium through which the letters came, but it is really my son's."

In answer Mary held the book up and pointed to Mrs. Ballantine's full name in capital letters on the cover.

The other jerked her head impatiently. "The publishers' choice—not mine. If you will take the trouble to glance at the title-page you will see that my name is preceded by the words, 'Transmitted through.' "

"In any case, you are responsible for the book, are you not?"

"For the book, yes. For the contents, no. If you've read it—and you say you have—you must be aware that it consists almost entirely of communications to me from my son, published at his expressed wish."

"I am aware that such a statement is made," Mary replied, controlling her voice and envying Mrs. Ballantine her poise, "but does not the source of these—these messages, seem to you at least debatable?"

"Had I thought so," returned the other crisply, "I should have said so in the introduction."

"But is there any proof?"

"Of what?"

"That the letters are actually from your son."

"Do you question my good faith?"

"No, Mrs. Ballantine. But sometimes one's subconscious mind can——"

"The letters," declared the elder woman with finality, "are from Francis."

Mary had a momentary feeling of being overcome by the sheer weight and force of blind asseveration. "She's trying to ride me down!" she thought, and in her reac-

young French girl whose face betrayed a constant furtive anxiety and apprehensions, approached her timidly after she had lunched, and spoke in French.

"Pardon, your highness, I would not interrupt you, but I am frantic with worry. Are you sure that all is well with Henri?"

The woman who chose to call herself "Mme. Harding" smiled ever so slightly.

"You may set your mind at peace, Francine; I have had a wire from Desprez. He sends you his love."

The girl heaved a tragic sigh, and with a murmured word of thanks retired to her mistress's bedroom, where she continued her task of unpacking.

At 3 o'clock, of that same afternoon, John Littleton was served with the greatest surprise of his life. It was his own confidential man, Emery, who brought him the tidings.

The clerk burst unannounced into his chief's private sanctum, where Littleton was engaged with Herman Friedman, the head of the Stuyvesant Trust.

His face was dead white; his eyes stared glassily. At sight of Friedman he stopped stock-still. Then he exclaimed in a dry, cracked vaice:

"Something dreadful has happened, Mr. Littleton!"

He looked confusedly from Friedman to the financier like a man in a nightmare.

"It's—it's about the gold to cover the Stuyvesant Trust notes," he blurted desperately. "There isn't any gold at all. The bullion boxes are filled with stones and gravel!"

There was an appreciable silence, then Friedman sprang to his feet with an exclamation of horror. "What do you mean? You must be crazy."

"It's only too true," replied the clerk in a shaking voice. "The boxes were brought here from the ship in the care of M. Desprez and myself. We unlocked them together—he had the keys—and there's nothing in them except what I told you—stones and gravel."

Littleton interposed calmly.

"Where are the bullion boxes?"

"In my room, sir. The van outside is waiting to convey them to the vaults. What are we to do?"

The question was unanswerable. Fifty million dollars in gold! Enough to depreciate the world's money market; enough to ruin the strongest institution, to bankrupt or save a nation!

Gone—but where? It was incredible. The code cables from Littleton's agents in Paris had assured him that the bullion was on its way. The man Desprez was above suspicion.

The thing could not be! Yet, even as he tried to reassure himself, Littleton felt his supreme courage failing. But neither Friedman nor Emery suspected this—they thought him marvelous.

The former, trembling in every limb, and the panic-stricken confidential man followed the financier. When they were in Emery's room Littleton turned and locked the door.

Seven massive mahogany boxes occupied most of the available space in the small office. One after another, as Emery, with trembling fingers fitted a key into the lock of each and raised the lid, they were found to contain just what he had said—a mixture of small stones and gravel.

"This is incredible!" exclaimed Littleton, his lips ashen. "Where is Desprez?"

"Waiting outside, Mr. Littleton. I have acquainted him with the facts; he is on the verge of collapse!"

"Humph! Well, before he collapses send him to me."

As he spoke there was a tap at the door, which Emery answered. He handed a cream-white envelope, addressed in square, almost masculine writing, to his employer. On the flap there was a crest in gold and beneath that a cipher.

John Littleton's face contracted spasmodically as his eye lit upon the familiar crest and handwriting; he tore open the envelope with shaking fingers. The inclosure began without any prefix:

> "By this time you have learned the worst. Come to see me immediately. I am at the St. Fustian. Ask for Mme. Harding. SOPHIA."

Littleton's firm, almost cruel mouth settled into grim lines; his face became as impassive as ever. He turned to the two men who were waiting for him.

"Emery, lock those boxes," he said, "and don't let the key out of your possession. Friedman, you will have to excuse me now. I have an important appointment. Keep your courage up, man. We need not publish our plight for another twenty-four hours or so. I suppose I can find you at the trust offices, if I need you. I need not caution you as to secrecy—and, you, Emery, get hold of Desprez and don't let him out of your sight a minute."

III

Littleton hastened from the room. Five minutes later he was bowling swiftly up Broadway, and ten minutes after that he presented his card at the office of the St. Fustian and inquired for Mme. Harding.

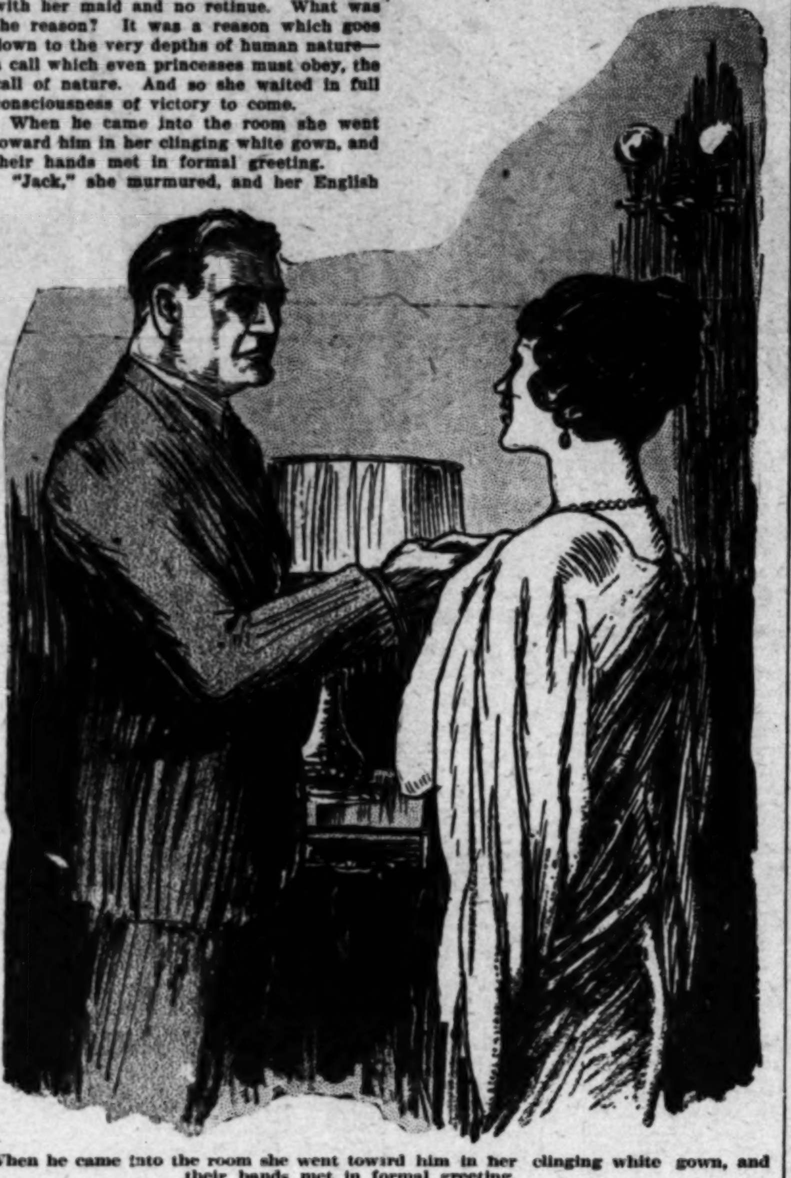
In her gold-and-white sitting-room, littered by a profusion of yellow roses the woman whom Lenbach had so aptly portrayed as La Sorciere waited for Littleton's coming. She had no doubt that he would answer her summons. She held a trump card and she was immutable.

It was not for nothing that her real title was that of Princess of the House of Rhapsbourg. She was the most wonderful woman of her age, and could have, if she had chosen, been a queen.

Sophia Cecilia Maria Antoinette Annunciata, Archduchess of Rumania, princess by birth, exile by choice, traveling to America with her maid and no retinue. What was the reason? It was a reason which goes down to the very depths of human nature—a call which even princesses must obey, the call of nature. And so she waited in full consciousness of victory to come.

When he came into the room she went toward him in her clinging white gown, and their hands met in formal greeting.

"Jack," she murmured, and her English was perfect. "At last we meet again—after twenty years!"



When he came into the room she went toward him in her clinging white gown, and their hands met in formal greeting.

She herself was so little altered from when he had last seen her that John Littleton was momentarily taken aback.

"Please sit down," said Mme. Harding.

"Sophy!" he said hoarsely, ignoring her invitation. "What did you mean by that note? Why are you here—in New York of all places! I thought it was understood——"

She smiled enigmatically.

"Please sit down," she repeated. "Do; we can be more comfortable and chat at our ease."

There was not in her own demeanor any suggestion of fondness for him, she was as cold and implacable and smiling as La Sorciere.

"I shan't mince matters," she said sweetly. "We might as well come straight to the point. You are a great man now, Jack, a much greater man than you were when you married me, but that's twenty years ago—a much greater man than when you separated from me, for if you had had an atom of comon sense, you wouldn't have done that. I'm sure you would have been much happier with me than you are with your present wife. I suppose she knows nothing?"

The financier's face overspread with a waxy pallor.

"Nothing," he said naturally. "Why should I have told her?"

"Why, indeed? I suppose she knows nothing, too, of our daughter—yours and mine. Where is Cecile, by the way?"

"In school at Greenwich, Ct. She finishes this term."

"And then? What are you going to do with her?"

Littleton's forehead contracted.

"I don't know," he said. "I haven't at all the least idea."

"Very well! I am her mother. I want you to let me have her."

"She thinks you are dead," he said sternly, "and believes me to be merely her guardian."

The woman's mobile lips curled scornfully.

"So she is motherless and fatherless though both of us are living! I don't care what you tell her about yourself—what story you invent—but you must let her know that I am her mother, and you must give her to me."

"Impossible! All that was gone over years ago. She is a sweet, good girl. I don't want her to know that you are her mother."

The woman laughed sardonically.

"You might be right—but, as a matter of fact, you are wrong. I am quite worthy and competent to undertake the care of my daughter. You must give Cecile into my keeping, otherwise—" She paused dramatically.

"But I refuse," he said.

And then suddenly his face underwent a strange transformation. He fixed the woman who had been his wife with a piercing glance.

"What did you mean, Sophy, by saying that by now I know the worst? What did you mean?"

"I meant," she returned calmly, "that you have by this time discovered that your bullion boxes were filled with trash. Give me my daughter and I will give you your $50,000,000 in gold. It's a fair exchange, is it not?"

"You know where that money has gone!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "You had a hand in this!"

"Yes," she said slowly. "I know where your precious gold is. I can give it to you in six hours. You have just to say the word. Will you say it?"

He paused for the fraction of a moment, then he said with an effort:

"It shall be as you wish, Sophy."

"Despite your cruelty, you are an honorable man," she said in her slow, smooth tones, "but you may as well put it into writing."

It was not until he had written the lines she dictated and signed them in his bold chirography, that he spoke again.

"I have done what you asked," he said, reading:

> "In exchange for $50,000,000 in gold, I grant to her mother, Princess Sophia Cecilia Maria Antoinette Annunciata of Rhapsbourg, the custody of our daughter, Cecile Maria Annunciata, now at Miss Kearney's School in Greenwich, Ct., for all time, and agree not to interfere with her future in any way, but entrust it to that of my former wife, the aforesaid princess.
> "JOHN LITTLETON."

He laid the crested sheet of note paper down upon the table, and she promptly picked it up, folded it and locked it away in the drawer of a little writing-desk. Then she faced him again with the inscrutable smile of La Sorciere.

She pushed an electric button.

"It's too bad, Jack, that I had to do this, but you see," she spread out her hands with a pretty foreign gesture, "you see, I'm a mother, and my heart has been hungry so long! You have been very cruel to me, you punished me in the most awful way that a woman can be punished—and for something of which I was guiltless.

"I am not the woman to cry out under a just flogging. My race and my people are trained to face death and disaster with equanimity but this was something worse.

"Years ago I swore to give my life, if necessary, to avenge myself for the wrong you did me. I waited a long time, but I never gave up hope, and—and when I least expected it my chance came."

She turned abruptly as the servant came into the room in answer to her ring.

"I want to send a wireless message, please; will you get me some blanks?"

The man withdrew and returned in a moment with the blanks. The princess calmly indited a short code message and told the servant to have it dispatched at once.

John Littleton watched her eagerly. There was a mixture, of admiration in his hospitality toward her; she was, as he had said, a wonderful woman. When the door had closed upon the servant, she turned to him with an almost childlike frankness.

IV

"Sit down, Jack. I'll tell you about it. It's really very simple. I'm going a long way back—at the very beginning, so that you will understand better.

"You will remember that we had been only married a year, secretly of course, because of my position. You were merely an art student in Paris, and I, though I didn't parade my title, was a princess of Rhapsbourg. And then most foolishly you became jealous of my cousin Ivan—I don't deny that Ivan was in love with me—and is still. Some day I will marry him for his devotion."

Littleton winced.

"And then," she went on softly, "you separated from me and took away my little baby. Oh! I grant you it was done very decently; only a few of my own family know about it."

She paused, and a brooding look came into her eyes. She crouched forward in her chair, and rested her beautiful white face in her hands.

"My soul is scorched with the sufferings of those years! . . . I could not go back to my own people, you didn't provide for me, and the Rhapsbourgs are poor, with the exception of Ivan. From him, of course, I couldn't take anything. You have read, perhaps, that Ivan has 'mysteriously disappeared'?" Her lips curled scornfully. "He will reappear again in good time. He is here in New York, at least within easy hailing distance."

Littleton's thin lips parted.

"For Heaven's sake, Sophy, what do you upon the ground, and this other leaping from the bushes upon his bowed back.

"We ought to have some blood on the hat," he said stupidly. It was all he could think of.

The man nodded and drew a jackknife from his pocket. Skinner stupidly held out his arm and wondered dully how much blood-poisoning there might be in the blade which the man drew across it. He stared down at the red streak which broadened on his tanned arm, while the man caught the cloth hat from his head and dabbled the crown with red.

Skinner took the hat, without bothering to put it on. As he did so something that had been lying in reserve in his brain recurred to him in a flash.

"See here," he said, himself smearing the hat-crown against his arm, "we've got to make sure he does get off the horse, you see. He might just reach down with his gun and poke the hat off my face. Or he might wait till the other man comes back. We've got to make sure he gets off the horse," he repeated earnestly; "we must scatter some things around for him to get off and look at."

The man nodded assent.

"I'll lie down beside the ditch there," Skinner went on, pointing to the side of the little clearing, "and you get in the bushes just behind me. I've got a leather wallet in my hip pocket. I'll spread that out beside the ditch as though somebody might have been going through it. And I've got some note paper in my pocket." He took from the pocket of his alpaca jacket a dozen sheets of memorandum paper and the stub of an editorial pencil that made a broad black mark—things that he had hastily caught up from the desk when news of the murder came into the office. He exhibited them to his companion. "I'll fold over a sheet of this paper—see?—so it looks like the back of a big envelope, and I'll write my address on it. He'll want to see what's in it."

Writing rapidly on the folded sheet in a large hand he pronounced the words as he traced them: "Thomas Morrison, Shelbyville, Indiana, Lane County," while the man silently looked on.

Finishing the rapid writing, Skinner stepped excitedly down the road a few feet to the beginning of the little clearing and spoke breathlessly, for their business demanded haste: "He'll ride around this clump of bushes—see? I'll be lying in that narrow place between the bushes and the ditch, just on the edge of the ditch. He'll have to get off his horse to look these things over and he'll have to stay this side of the ditch. That'll bring him with his back to the bushes when he bends over. You'll be in the bushes."

The man surveyed the scene and nodded. Having dismounted at the spot to which Skinner pointed the stooping horseman's back would be only a foot from the bushes. A leap and a blow of the hammer would do it easily.

Having surveyed the scene the man's cat eyes turned to Skinner. He took the automatic revolver from his coat pocket, exhibiting it in his huge palm. "If you try a game you git this through the head," he said, parting the hard line of his lips just enough to emit sounds.

"Sure!" said Skinner, as though that were understood. He stepped forward to the spot he had indicated, tossed his open purse to the ground and laid the decoy envelope near it; then stretched himself on his back and looked up at the man.

The man stepped over him and thrust himself into the screen of bushes, squatting. Skinner could see him as he crouched, the automatic revolver in his left hand, carefully leveled at the prostrate head; the hammer grasped in his right hand.

Then Skinner, with his face toward the bushes, put the cloth hat over his head and cheek, spread his limbs as though he lay sprawling from a blow, and uttered a loud groan. An instant later he groaned again, louder yet, and the grizzled-bearded horseman shouted, "Hello, there!"

Twice again Skinner groaned and again the horseman, nearer at hand, called, "Hello, there!"

Another groan, an interval of silence; then the voice asked, "Are you hurt!" Evidently the rider had come to the edge of the clearing, in view of the prostrate body and paused there. But all Skinner could see, out of one eye under the hatbrim, was the little space directly in front of his head, the edge of the bushes and, through the leafage a bit of one knee of the crouching man. His heart fairly stopped beating and the hand that hung over the ditch-side clutched into the weeds. He gave a feeble moan and heard a horse's hoof sink squashily into the wet ground. The rider evidently was moving toward him and in another second would dismount, or else——

Skinner's hand clutched tighter into the weeds and he held his breath. Then he heard a rustling and crackling of the thick bushes and he could see motion in those that were within his little field of vision as though a large object had been thrust against them. With all the agility of which he was capable, pulling himself by the hand clutched into the weeds, he rolled over into the ditch and as he went over he heard the grizzled-bearded man say, "Come out of that!"

When he sat up in the ditch the horse's forequarters were pressed into the brush. The grizzled-bearded rider was standing in the stirrups, the shotgun at his shoulder aiming downward, his finger on the trigger. Its muzzle was two feet above the head of the swarthy man who crouched there. To him the sudden leap of the spurred horse into the bushes had come like a flash of lightning out of a clear sky.

A quarter of an hour later Skinner was explaining in gleeful excitement: "You see, his gasoline dial showed the tank was empty—plain as the nose on your face. It must have been almost empty when he drove up to the farmhouse—and his life depending upon his get-away. So I made up my mind he couldn't read and when it came right down to the pinch, I staked everything on that."

With a forefinger he affectionately tapped the sheet of memorandum paper which he had folded to look like a large envelope and superscribed before the swarthy man's eyes and then laid on the ground. The writing on it, arranged in the order of an address on an envelope, was: "The Murderer, Is in the bushes, At your left," and in the lower left-hand corner, where the name of a county is often put, "Look out!" heavily underscored.

"But say," he added to the grizzle-bearded man, "I lost ten years' growth while I was lying there waiting to see whether you'd notice the envelope, or whether I'd have to shout to you and get a bullet through my head."

CLOSE-UPS OF A ROYAL FAMILY AT HOME

Sinaia, the great mountain resort of East Europe in the valley of the Carpathians, is the summer home of the King and Queen of Rumania. On the sides of the mountains are many luxurious hotels and residences where Rumania society spends its holidays.

against the white background of the egg. After the hors d'oeuvres we had fish from the Danube, roast veal, vegetables served separately, a lettuce salad and a dessert of pink ice, ending with small cups of Turkish coffee as black as ink, smoking hot, as thick as molasses and almost as sweet.

There were sixteen at the table, the King and the Queen sitting on opposite sides in the center, with the guests on their right and left. I was second from King Ferdinand, and within six feet of Queen Marie who was almost directly opposite. Her Majesty talked throughout lunch, which lasted for more than an hour, eating heartily the while.

At the close a silver alcohol lamp after the style of old Rome and of a beautiful shape was brought in and placed before her. She then took a cigarette and put one end in her mouth and lit the other from the flame, raising the lamp to the level of her nose as she did so. She smoked vigorously, and it seemed to me that she liked it. She then talked with the cigarette in her mouth. The lamp was passed to the King, who likewise smoked, after which it went up and down the table and such as were the worshipers of the God of Nicotine puffed the incense of tobacco at his shrine.

There was no stiffness whatever in the conduct of the luncheon. Her Majesty's black spaniel trotted about under the table, and in some way picked me out as his friend. He came up and rested his head on my lap under the cloth, and I surreptitiously fed him bits of bread, some of which I dipped in gravy and sneaked it under the table, while Her Majesty chatted.

She's a Queen of the Fairies

HER MAJESTY might be called the Queen of the Fairies. She is that to the children of Rumania, and to the multitude of other children who delight in the fairy stories she writes and some of which appear in the movies. During the luncheon the question of authorship came up and Queen Marie described the pleasure she had in creative composition. She has written many magazine articles and not a few books, reminding one of Carmen Sylva, the literary Queen whom she has succeeded.

Her Majesty tells me she delights in writing for children, and especially for those ranging from 5 to 10 years of age. She says that their imaginations are much more vivid than those of the grown-ups, and that they appreciate every shade of your thought. Moreover they are too young to flatter and they will speak the truth. The Queen has written many stories for children, and upon my telling her that I would like to describe one of these to the boys and girls of America she gave me a beautiful copy of "The Story of Naughty Kildeen" which was written by her and published in France some years ago.

In giving the book she discussed the question with the Princess Ileana, who at that time had come into the room and was presented to us. The Princess is as straight as an arrow, graceful and very intelligent. She speaks English fluently and has, I doubt not, a half-dozen languages on the tip of her tongue. She was dressed in the peasant costume, her richly embroidered frock falling from her neck to her feet, and a bright silk handkerchief tied round her head. Her Majesty sent her out to look up a copy of "Naughty Kildeen" and bring it to me.

King Ferdinand is Studious Looking

I HAVE not said much of His Majesty in describing the luncheon, for I am especially interested in the Queen and at such times Kings do not count. His Majesty came into the reception hall shortly after the Queen, and shook hands with his guests. He was dressed in the uniform of a Rumanian general, wearing an olive drab suit with a Sam Browne belt. He had on tan boots that reached to his knees, and had silver spurs at the heels. His breast was plastered with decorations.

King Ferdinand is a man of medium height. He is straight and well built, and looks somewhat like a clubman of studious bent. He is shy rather than ostentatious. His voice is low and his manner decidedly pleasing. I am told he is much interested in his people and country, and that he has a considerable say, although the Rumanian government is a Constitutional Monarchy in which Parliament makes the laws and practically carries on the administration.

mean? What are you driving at? Come to the point."

"Be patient, mon ami, I am coming to the point very rapidly."

Suddenly she smiled ingenuously, and a rippling laugh broke from her lips.

"You were a fool just now, Jack. Did you think for a moment that I could really have made away with your precious bullion? That was what you Americans call 'bluff.'"

He turned ghastly white.

"You mean," he said hoarsely, "that you cannot give it to me?"

"No, I don't mean anything of the kind, I can give it to you. It will be in your possession within six hours."

"Where is it?"

She looked him full in the eyes, and again smiled.

"It's in Ivan's keeping—to be quite exact, in the imperial yacht Rhapsbourg, which is anchored off Seagate."

"How—how——"

"Ah, yes, if you would not interrupt me so much I would tell you. I must go back to my story—I think I said I was poor. Very well! When an honest woman finds herself without means, she goes to work to provide some, doesn't she? Voila tout! I went to work like any other woman.

"I do not choose to be the Princess Sophia of Rhapsbourg any more; I am plain Mme. Sophy Harding, known to the police of Paris as a clever and trustworthy detective, and my chief employers are the Metternichs. It just happens, by the way, that Henry Desprez is my maid's lover, that is to say, her fiance, but that is only a coincidence and has nothing to do with this affair.

"Desprez is as much dismayed, I dare say, by the contents of those bullion-boxes as you yourself. It happened opportunely

The SORCERESS

By Elizabeth York Miller

THERE are few American business men who will forget October of 1907, at least not for a long time to come. Bank after bank closed its doors. Institutions believed by everybody to be past suspicion tottered and rocked on their foundations.

But the tidal wave of disaster, vicious, devastating, overwhelming as it was, did not so much as loosen a stone in the structure of Littleton & Co., bankers, of Wall street, New York.

At the time this story opens, John Littleton's life in most details was regulated by a deadly monotony.

He had a palace on Fifth avenue which was nominally his home, but he spent more of his time at his office. He had a charming, cultured wife, and a family of sons and daughters that did him credit.

Himself the son of a man of moderate wealth, he had passed to his present position by the most ordinary and fairly gradual stages. As a boy he had gone to Harvard; and then, following an artistic impulse, had studied painting in Paris for a couple of years, till the death of his father called him home to assume charge of a banking institution in a small New England city.

Then he developed unforeseen financial abilities. He was intrepid and daring, and, above all, lucky; at 45, he was John Littleton, the John Littleton, a name to conjure with!

All this, of course, is a prelude to the man, who is best seen as Herman Friedman saw him the morning after the Stuyvesant Trust closed its doors.

Friedman, himself a daring financier, was in a measure responsible for the Stuyvesant disaster. He needed money, and needed it badly. So he came to John Littleton.

John Littleton and the importunate banker formed a study in contrasts. The latter was completely demoralized. He has passed a sleepless night and there was promise of many more ahead of him.

The two greeted each other with the civility of acquaintances—a civility on Friedman's part which was tempered by obsequiousness and overshadowed by anxiety. He spoke with obvious nervousness, in a deprecatory manner.

"Mr. Littleton, have you seen the papers? I am ruined—we are ruined, unless——"

"Nonsense," interrupted Littleton. "It can't be as bad as that. The situation is exaggerated."

For answer the other produced an early edition of an evening paper and flung it at his colleague.

Littleton unclasped his long, slim hands and picked up the newspaper. The great financier's face settled into stern lines like a mask, and then suddenly he uttered a soft ejaculation, a whistle of surprised annoyance; his head bent low over the paper. A ghastly pallor overspread his features.

"You see," exclaimed Friedman eagerly, "It's as I tell you. For once the papers don't lie. I am a ruined man unless——"

He spread his hands with a deprecatory gesture.

"Eh, what!" exclaimed Littleton, rousing himself with an effort. "What are you saying?"

"But you've been reading it; you see for yourself."

"Reading what?" said the financier. He passed his hand across his eyes as though to free them from a mist.

Friedman picked up the paper which Littleton had thrown down. The whole first page with the exception of a scant half-column was devoted to the Stuyvesant Trust crash.

He laughed savagely.

"I suppose," he said, "that you are more interested in the mysterious disappearance of this Rhapsbourg princeling than you are in the smash-up of my bank?"

The financier's mouth tightened, he rose and clasped his hands characteristically behind him. Friedman could not see his long, twitching fingers.

"As a matter of fact," said Littleton slowly, "I am."

A blank look overspread the ruined banker's features; again he picked up the paper and read the item slowly:

"MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.
PRINCE IVAN FERDINAND, OF RHAPSBOURG, GONE

"After a quarrel with his illustrious cousin, the Czar of Russia, Prince Ivan Ferdinand of Rhapsbourg mysteriously left his principality, and no trace of him can be found. He is supposed to be in possession of valuable state secrets, and the police of all countries are searching for him, but so far without results.

"Although Rhapsbourg is a country of minor importance in European affairs, Prince Ivan occupies a unique position in relation to Russia, through his friendship with Nicholas II. There is supposed to be a woman in the case, but this is not given out officially.

"Prince Ivan has long desired to contract a marriage of which his august relative does not approve. He is known, too, to be in sympathy with the Duma," etc.

Ordinarily this piece of news would have received a conspicuous place in the New York papers, but beside the financial earthquake, the disappearance of a Russian prince was inconsequential.

Littleton took several paces about the room, then he sat down again in the high-backed Jacobean chair which he had vacated. He seemed to have regained his poise.

"What is it you want me to do?" he said "Come to the point. How much money is needed?"

Friedman's lips parted, his anxious eyes surveyed his great financier hopefully.

"Fifty million dollars," he said in a husky whisper.

It was an enormous sum, yet Littleton apparently was unmoved by the request. He opened one of the drawers of his desk, drew out a blank pad and pencil and made a few hurried notes.

"What security have you to offer?" he asked bruskly.

"None," said the other in the same husky whisper, "except the bank shares. The bank's all right. Don't you see how it is—all these crazy people want to draw out their money. You know as well as I do, Mr. Littleton, that no bank could stand up under a strain like that. You are as much interested in the Stuyvesant Trust as I."

"Quite so," interrupted the other. "And you want me to find $50,000,000."

With characteristic briskness, Littleton directed that $50,000,000 in gold bullion be procured from the French financiers, the Metternichs, and that, backed by the bullion, $50,000,000 in notes be issued.

After Friedman had gone, that great financier cut out the item regarding the mysterious disappearance of Prince Ivan Ferdinand of Rhapsbourg. Then, as carefully, he tore the newspaper which had contained it into shreds and stuffed it into a wastebasket.

II

The fortnight which followed will go down into history. John Littleton will go down into history, too, for he was the man who, technically, saved his country from ruin. But between these bare statements of facts lies a tale which is destined never to be told except anonymously.

Littleton's bank had issued $50,000,000 worth of notes, and the gold to cover them, packed in iron-bound mahogany cases, was on the high seas, borne by one of the swiftest ocean greyhounds. This steamer docked one crisp, cool morning in November; Littleton's agents were on hand to take charge of the bullion, which was in the care of one Henri Desprez, a trusted clerk in the Paris branch of Littleton & Co.

Of the hundreds of saloon passengers who disembarked from the Letronia that morning, one of the least conspicuous was a tall, dark woman who, with her companion, was recorded on the ship's list as "Mme. S. Harding and maid."

Both women were heavily veiled, and dressed so quietly as to attract almost no attention. The maid was laden with two small satchels and a steamer rug.

You will recall perhaps, Lenbach's La Sorciere, which was the sensation of the Salon a number of years ago and which now hangs in the Luxembourg—a pallid, low-browed woman with slightly Slavish features?

She has blue-black hair and most marvelous eyes. The eyes are a deep lustrous black, like fathomless pools; in them one may read the mystery of the ages. Her nose is Greek, like her forehead, but her mouth is mobile, soft and full, almost pouting, the mouth of the Latin races. It makes a brilliant scarlet blur against the creamy white of her face.

There are snakes in the picture, too great, writhing monsters. One of them is coiled against the soft flesh of her neck, and another she holds straight out, dangling its full length in her strong white hands.

Mme. Harding was La Sorciere, minus the snakes, and grown some twenty years older. But the years had not roughened her wonderful skin, nor dimmed the luster in her eyes, nor touched her mobile mouth. She was the same woman that Lenbach had painted.

With a disregard of expense rather out of keeping with the simple retinue and luggage, she engaged an almost regal suite in a hotel overlooking Fifth avenue.

Her traveling companion, a smart-looking tion from this thought she spoke with greater intensity.

"Mrs. Ballantine, please believe that I did not come here to be impertinent. But what you have written in this book gives me a right to question you—if I am the person referred to as 'M.' Am I?"

"Judge for yourself."

"I did judge for myself, and I could only conclude that you were charging me with having sent Presh——"

"Francis, if you please."

"Sent him to his death."

"Well?"

"I protest against such a statement—and against your having published it. It isn't true!"

"He confirms it in a letter in the book."

"But it isn't true! He couldn't have written such things."

"As to that," returned Mrs. Ballantine, with a bitter little smile, "I fear the preponderance of evidence is against you. The book was read before publication by such authorities as Sir Orion Hudson and Dr. Eric St. Clair of the British Association for Psychical Research, Prof. Metzler of Boston, and Dr. Michael Follansbee of Chicago. Sir Orion wrote me that he considered the work the most important contribution to knowledge that had been made in years, and that he had recommended me for the association's special gold medal. Dr. Follansbee came from Chicago expressly to see me, because the letters fitted in peculiarly with cognate work of his. Only yesterday I heard from him that I had been elected an honorary vice-president of the Chicago Psychical Society. I could cite you any number of further instances of appreciation. I have received hundreds of letters. The book has gone into eleven large editions in three weeks. The press has been astonishing. I am now arranging a lecture tour. Not that the attention focussed upon me personally is anything but distasteful, but that it is so apparently my sacred duty to utilize every means at my disposal for spreading the light and the truth." She paused, eyeing Mary grimly; then added, "I fear, Mary, that I cannot be much impressed by your doubts."

Mary had laid the book upon the seat of the chair at her side. Her hands were working nervously in her lap.

"Those people didn't know him!" she cried.

"You will hardly say that I, his mother, didn't know him."

"I can't talk about that. But I know he never wrote those things. They never came from him. Never!" She rose, and with trembling fingers opened her bag. "You can't prove that his hand directed yours," she went on, as she drew forth the treasured letter, "and I can prove that he never wrote that of me!" She crossed and pressed the letter into Mrs. Ballantine's hand. "I can prove it—prove it! Read that!"

Mrs. Ballantine reached out and turned on the lamp at her side. She looked at the envelope; then, with complete composure, drew out the letter, opened it, and read.

Having read, she refolded the sheets and held them out with the envelope to Mary.

"This proves absolutely nothing," she declared, as the girl took them.

"But it's in his own writing!"

"His writing—yes."

"And he says he would have gone in any case."

"It was like him to say that."

"You mean you don't think he would have gone? Why would he say so then?"

"Evidently he foresaw that you might some day reproach yourself."

Mary raised a hand to her throat. "Oh, I do—I do!" she gasped. "But this must be true—or he wouldn't have written it! He never told you anything different, did he?"

"A year before he went he confided in me that he thought himself in love with you. You were not the wife for him. Evidently you felt that yourself, for later you refused him."

"I loved him!"

"Please permit me to finish. You made him wait a year and then refused him. Why you thought it necessary to make him wait a year, I cannot—however, you did; that's the only point we need consider here. And he went immediately to Canada and enlisted. Could anything be clearer? It's a perfectly plain case of cause and effect."

"But this letter!" cried the girl insistently, clutching the envelope as though only by clinging to it could she save herself from the bottomless pit.

"I should think," returned the other, "that you might get more comfort from his letter in the book. That was a very beautiful thing he said about forgiveness, Mary. Sir Orion particularly——

"But I tell you," the other rushed on, desperately, "I don't believe the book! I don't believe a single line of it! He was gentle, modest, sensitive—there's not a word of it that sounds like him. It doesn't ring true. He can't be so changed that he would write like that—not even by death!" A sob tore its way out of her. She dropped into the chair, brushing the book to the floor. "Oh, I hope," she exclaimed, brokenly—"I hope he doesn't—doesn't know about the book. Whatever he is—I hope he doesn't know!"

Mrs. Ballantine sat apparently unmoved. "This is absolutely futile," she said. "It is a strain on me—and I have my work to do. Mary, I am sorry, but I shall have to ask you to go. It was a mistake for me to see you."

Mary's head was bowed; her shoulders shook.

"It was a mistake for me to come," she answered, in a choking voice.

The silence that fell upon the room was broken by the entrance of Reeves.

"Shall I put on the lights, madam?" he asked. Then, catching sight of Mary, bent over in her chair and manifestly weeping, he looked quickly away and with the manner of one talking to cover a faux pas, went on, "Will you be wishing tea served this afternoon, madam?"

"No, Reeves. Nothing."

"Very good, madam."

Sedately, as always, he turned to go. As he did so there came from the hall the muffled sound of the front door closing, followed by that of something soft and heavy falling to the floor.

Reeves accelerated his pace, lifted one portiere and passed quickly from the room Almost instantly the two women heard him utter a startled exclamation. Then another voice spoke, saying something indistinguishable.

As Mary heard that voice she sat suddenly erect. Her eyes left the doorway only for one instant—to look at Mrs. Ballantine, who was staring at the portieres with a rapt expression. As the girl's gaze returned to the doorway she saw one heavy curtain thrust aside. Against the aura of light from the hall, was revealed a figure—that of a man in a military uniform.

The figure took a step or two toward Mrs. Ballantine, then, catching sight of Mary's uplifted, tear-stained face, stopped short.

"What's the matter?"

Mary heard Mrs. Ballantine gulp.

"You were expecting me?"

This time the elder woman nodded. "But not—not so soon," she murmured.

"Presh!" cried Mary, leaping to her feet. She flew toward him. "It's Presh;! It's Presh! He's alive! He's alive!"

"Alive? Of course. What did you mean, mother, when you said you were not expecting me so soon? You knew my ship—you must have got my cable." He bent and kissed her. "I was afraid about that—the armistice and Peace Conference have clogged the lines so—but if you did get it—" Then, breaking off: "Why, mother, what's the matter?"

Mary's eyes followed his to Mrs. Ballantine's face. The look she saw there was not that of a mother whose son, the flesh of her body, is miraculously returned to her from the dead, but of one who sees her handiwork destroyed, her belief shattered, her world reeling to ruins about her.

Shocked and sickened, Mary turned away. Then, as the mother did not answer, she heard Presh say, half jestingly. "You look as though you weren't glad to see me."

That wouldn't do. When, later, he should learn about his mother's book he might remember her expression and make his own deductions. Horrible!

Taking him by a lapel, Mary led him a few steps away. "Don't say anything more to her now," she warned him. "It's the shock. For a year we've thought you dead. 'Killed in action,' the telegram said. And the chaplain wrote you'd been shot through the breast, and that he closed your eyes."

"I can't say I remember his closing my eyes," said Presh with a slight smile, "but the shot through the breast is correct. When I regained consciousness, the Huns had me in a hospital, but I was top-hole again in a month, though—fit enough to escape. Worked my way back to the Dutch frontier, but there they nabbed me again. Took me to a punishment camp and held me, incommunicado. In October I fell ill. Mighty good luck, that—for the Huns sent me out with the very first batch after the armistice. In Blighty they discharged me and I cabled and sailed."

He slipped off his overcoat and tossed it to the chair on which Mary had previously sat. As he did so his foot touched something on the floor, and he bent over and picked up Mrs. Ballantine's book.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, looking at the cover. "What's all this? Mother blooming out as an author? 'Letters From Beyond the Front?' What on earth——?"

"Sh-h! Keep quiet!" whispered Mary, clutching at his arm, while with the other hand she took the book from him. "Never mind that now."

"But"—he turned to his mother with a puzzled look—" 'Letters From Beyond the Front.' What does it mean, mother, anyhow?"

Mrs. Ballantine looked at Mary.

"Mary—" she whispered; but there came no further sound.

Now, in a sudden access of compassion, Mary felt herself for the first time in her life drawn to Mrs. Ballantine.

"Don't worry," she said. "It's going to be all right. I'll explain."

The other made a feeble gesture toward the door.

"My sitting-room," she said huskily.

"Do you want to go there?"

"No—you."

Mary turned and laid her hand upon the olive-drab cuff, with its three stars and its stripes for service and for wounds.

"Come, Presh," she said, leading him toward the doorway.

Then, glancing up into his face, and as though in recognition of something new she saw there, she smiled and amended:

"Come, Capt. Ballantine!"

THE SORCERESS

that poor Ivan, no longer able to deny his love for me, quarreled with our cousin, the Czar, and came to Paris in his yacht, the Rhapsbourg. No one knew where he had gone.

"The Metternichs were anxious about the gold, and they could trust me. Where so much is at stake, it is the policy of wisdom to take what the gods offer—ne-c'est pas?"

O gleam of understanding came into Littleton's face. He leaned toward her eagerly.

"You mean that you were given the custody of the bullion?"

"Exactly," she said. "Desprez was dispatched with the cases which you have received, and in order to guard against trickery, the gold was packed in ordinary traveling boxes and shipped aboard the Rhapsbourg.

"Even you were not informed—codes are sometimes understood by people who have no right to them. That wireless I dispatched is a signal to Ivan; he will bring the Rhapsbourg safely into port before tomorrow morning.

"You need have no more anxiety, cher ami."

She rose with a little gesture of dismissal. He rose, too; the great financier and the woman who had so cleverly outwitted him faced each other. She held out her hand.

"Au revoir, Jack, we may not meet again, for I am returning to Paris almost immediately. But I would be grateful to you, however, before I go if, as Cecile's guardian, you will give me a letter to the school in Greenwich and another to my daughter."

Littleton nodded and took her slim fingers in his. And then suddenly he did what was for him an unusual thing. He raised the princess's hand to his lips and kissed it.

"Good-by, Sophy," he said. "You have beaten me this time, but I forgive you. Perhaps I was wrong—who knows?"

He turned quickly and went out of the room. The door closed behind him with a gentle click.

He did not know that, as his footsteps died away, the Princess Sophia of Rhapsbourg flung herself down upon a couch and burst into long, stifled sobs.

Song of the Dumbledore

I live near the thorn-tree
  That shades the cool spring
Where gather the mosses
  Around in a ring
    A green fairy-ring.

I work in the meadow
  On roadside and hill,
In pastureland shadow,
  By sunshiny rill
    The slow, tiny rill.

I sing at my tasking
  I'm merry and free
Forever I'm basking
  In smiles meant for me
    Heaven's smiles meant for me.

I frequent the clover
  So brimful of wine
No taste the world over
  So like to sunshine
    The yellow sunshine.

My beauty, gold-banded,
  Bestowed by God
Is wasted to nothing
  Upon the green sod
    The grass-growing sod.

So I perch on the clover
  A table divine
With rosy red cover
  Sipping orient wine
    The honey-sweet wine.

FOOT PROTECTION

Through Proper Care of the Feet

It takes but little foresight and attention to maintain throughout life a perfectly normal condition of the feet. But when Nature warns through fatigue or pain, steps should be taken to prevent the development of foot trouble instead of waiting till corrective measures are required.

The building of shoes according to scientific formulas of prevention has progressed far in the last decade or two. The following are two types of preventive shoes for women evolved after years of thought and careful experimentation on our part:

Princess Pat:

The Princess Pat model is developed for prevention of arch trouble. It is built with a perfectly straight inside line and a full outside tread. The heel is of special construction and the arch is protected by a specially built steel arch that will not break down. This model is built in sports patterns as well as in plain oxfords and straps. It retails from $8.50 to $12.50.

Normal:

The specifications for the normal parallel those of the Princess Pat with but one exception. The Normal last is built straight without the outside swing to provide for the foot which cannot use a complete outside tread. This new addition to our Princess Pat family provides for proper fitting where Princess Pats are too severe in correction. Priced at $10.00.

Prince Pat:

The Prince Pat, for men, is built on the same tried principles incorporated in the Princess Pat. The same perfect support through the reinforced arch, the same straight inner sole line and sweeping outer curve gently forcing the foot back into normal contour and position, the same clinging, close-fitting heel. The Prince Pat is like the Princess Pat, too, in good looks, having smart style features that appeal to men who demand high perfection in the appearance and wear as in the comfort of their shoes. They retail at $10.00, $11.00 and $12.00 in either high or low models.

Children's Shoes:

Each pair of shoes for either boys or girls is built with the preventive features incorporated so as to provide for the Natural healthful and perfect development of the growing foot. $4.50 to $7.50 according to size.

As he merrily set his sails.
I am over the ocean today
To look at the Prince of Wales.

But I doubt little kitten, said I

QUEEN MARIE OF RUMANIA

Frank G. Carpenter Describes His Lunch With Ruler and Wife in the Carpathian Mountains

How This Grand-daughter of Queen Victoria Looks, Acts and Talks—A Democratic Monarch Who Writes Fairy Stories—She Might Have Ruled England, Had Her Heart Said Yes—A Womanly Woman Who Does Things—Exporting and Importing Daughters—Something About the King and the Beautiful Princess Ileana

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER

Frank G. Carpenter

SINAIA (Rumania)—I have just returned from the Royal Castle, the summer palace of the King of Rumania, where I have had the honor of lunching with Their Majesties, King Ferdinand and Queen Marie and of meeting the beautiful young Princess, Ileana. The palace is a homelike building of three or four stories with roofs as sharp as a knife blade, and white walls inlaid in patterns with panels of varnished yellow pine. It has gables and spires, and other Rumanian artistic conceits.

It is small for a palace, but it contains many rooms and it would be a fine building in almost any part of the world. It is in the heart of a wooded park covering hundreds and perhaps thousands of acres, and is reached by winding drives up the mountain from Sinaia, the summer capital here in the heart of the Transylvanian Alps. The palace looks as though it grew out of and were a part of the hills. The mountains tower over it, and it climbs up their sides. The entrance is under a carved porte-cochere and the front doors open into a great hall which leads into a square salon where winding stairs of polished oak make their way to the stories above. Portraits of the Royal Family, and other monarchs hang on the walls. Books of a half dozen different languages cover the tables, and a homelike atmosphere pervades the whole.

After chatting awhile with the High Court Chamberlain, Dr. Misu, who for many years was Minister from Rumania to the Court of St. James, Her Majesty the Queen tripped down the stairs followed by a long-haired black spaniel. Dr. Misu introduced me. She gave my hand a cordial shake and we chatted a while before the King appeared.

Her Majesty was dressed in the Rumanian costume and she looked strikingly handsome as we stood there and talked. Monarchs can never conceal the date of their birth, as that is a part of the records in every great almanac or statistical annual. It is to be found in all encyclopedias, and not seldom in the date lines of the newspapers. Therefore, I know that Queen Marie is just about 48. She does not look it, and she might pose for many years younger. She has a fair clear complexion, beautiful blonde hair, and eyes as blue as the skies of the Carpathian Mountains which look down on the palace. Her hands are small and soft, but her grip is firm and she greets her guests with a cordiality similar to that of Mrs. President Cleveland when she reigned in the White House.

How Her Majesty the Queen Looks

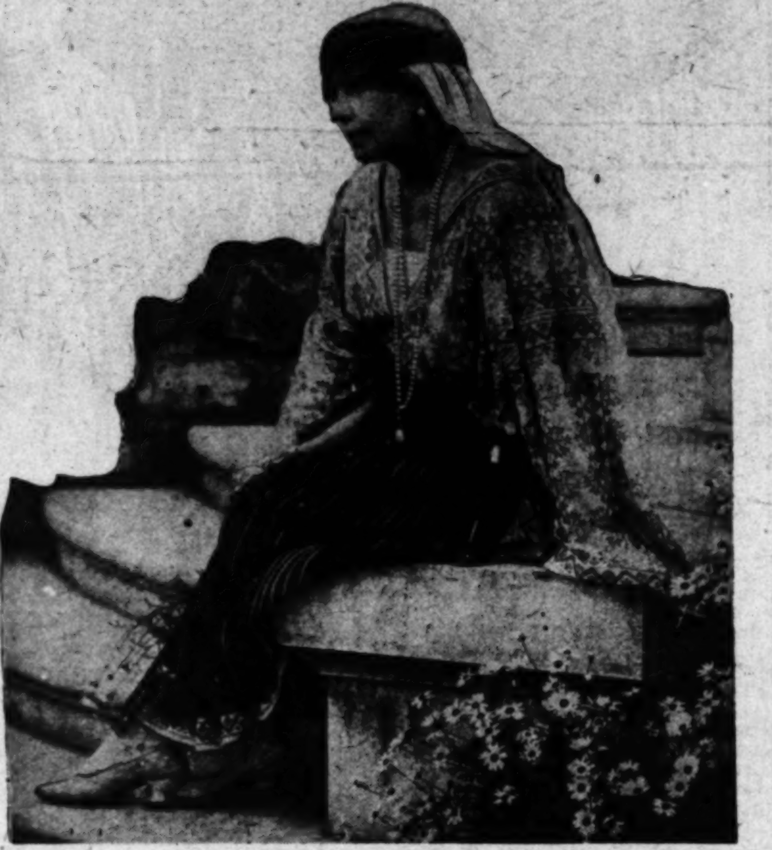
LET me give you a pen picture of Her Majesty in her Rumanian costume from the photograph in my memory. Her queenly head was covered with a long white veil, thrown back from her high and rather broad forehead and hanging down over her shoulders almost to her knees. This veil was bound on with a fillet of soft green silk about two inches wide which came midway down the forehead and was fastened there with a magnificent pearl. Her gown was of white Rumanian linen, embroidered with a sort of filigree work of red silk and gold thread made in the artistic patterns for which the peasants of Transylvania are famous. The sleeves came to the wrist. They were very full and adorned with embroidery in patterns two inches square. About her waist and extending almost to the bottom of the gown, was a rich red overskirt of a velvety silk so made that one could hardly tell whether it was composed of strings or plaited. The hem of the gown was covered with gold embroidery and it just touched her shoes of white kid. About her waist was a wide belt with carved silver buckles as big as the palm of my hand, which the Queen told me came from Dalmatia.

The event was only a luncheon, and Her Majesty does not dress for such occasions as for her great evening functions. Nevertheless she wore jewels worth the ransom of a half-dozen kings. From each of her little ears hung a pearl, as big as a hickory nut, and as round as a marble; and from her neck a great string of pearls each of which I venture would pay the salary of a Justice of the United States Supreme Court for several years. On her right arm was a bracelet of diamonds, and above it a tiny platinum wrist watch fastened on with a ribbon of black silk. Her fingers sparkled with rings, one of which was set with a huge diamond and a pigeon blood ruby so large that the two covered the finger from the knuckle to the second joint.



While at the summer capital of Sinaia, Queen Maria of Rumania wears the national costume of the Transylvanian peasant women, consisting of a green and white headdress, and a richly embroidered gown of red and gold.

Her Majesty's jewels are famous. She has a large collection, some of which came from her family in Russia and probably date back to her great-grandfather, the Czar Alexander I. She very likely has some from her grandmother, Queen Victoria. King Ferdinand has been lavish in his presents and she has bought pearls and diamonds since she has come to the throne. She wears her jewels so that they do not look ostentatious, and today they seemed quite in harmony with the Sunday peasant costume of her Rumanian subjects.

A Womanly Woman is the Queen

HER MAJESTY is tall and stately and she talks, walks and acts the Queen. Nevertheless the woman—and she is a most womanly woman—shines out in all her actions and she has the faculty of putting one perfectly at home. She is free in her conversation and at and before the luncheon she chatted without reserve about herself, the war and the future of her country. She is a woman of great breadth of intellect. She knows the world well and Central Europe as you know the palm of your hand. Now she talked about Russia, now about Germany and Poland and again about Albania, Dalmatia, Bulgaria, Greece and Servia. The two latter countries came in in connection with some remarks about her children, two of whom are married into the Royal Family of Greece and one of whom is the wife of King Alexander, occupying with him the Jugo-Slavian throne.

I remember her telling a story about her reply to someone who referred to her as a business Queen. It was just at the time that she married one of her daughters to the Crown Prince of Greece and the King of Greece had sent his daughter to Rumania to marry Carol, the Crown Prince, her son. She said:

"I object to the title of Business Queen. I am not in business and my life is a simple one. Indeed the only business that can be charged against me just now is that of meddling in our foreign commerce as to exports and imports. I have been exporting a daughter to Athens and importing a Grecian daughter to marry my son."

She Works for Rumania

THERE is no doubt, however, but that Her Majesty has a shrewd business turn. She has a brilliant imagination and one of her visions is a great future for Rumania and she does everything she can to bring that about. She wants to see the country develop economically and every foreign capitalist who comes to Bucharest or Sinaia is shown the immense resources and possible development of this country through the rose-colored glasses which Her Majesty tints.

She may object to the expression but it seems to me that Queen Marie is one of the very best of business monarchs in a broad patriotic way. She would sacrifice herself at any time for the exploitation of her country and she has proved herself the Great Mother of her subjects in that she is always striving after things which will better their condition. The story of her work during the war is a part of Rumanian history. She went out to the field and worked with the wounded. She organized hospitals and there was no Red Cross nurse who put in more hours of hard labor. At the same time she brought her good common sense and practical suggestions to the aid of the administration and raised money in every possible way.

The Princess Would Like Poland

HER MAJESTY has a contempt I imagine for the ruler who is only a figurehead in the government of his people. She is a live active force and is ambitious to rank with such women as Queen Elizabeth, Maria Theresa and Catherine the Great of Russia as one of the controlling influences of the reign of which she is a part. In this connection and by the way I would say that her charming daughter, the Princess Ileana seems to have the same bent. She does not like the idea of being married into a Royal Family such as that of England, where the Queen has no work to do. She is now 14 years old and there is much talk of her possible engagement to several monarchs of the countries about. You may have read the gossip about her being much sought after by King Boris of Bulgaria. He is young, full of common sense, of great ability and the two would make a remarkable match.

But these countries of Europe are very unsettled and the republic of today may be a monarchy tomorrow. Not long ago there was talk of Poland being ruled by a King and the future monarch was suggested as a possibility for the Princess Ileana. She was asked what she thought of it. She replied:

"I don't know that I would object. Poland is practically a new country and the Queen there would have plenty to do. I think I might like it."

This is the story as told me by the Queen.

She Might Have Ruled England

AND this reminds me of another story which I heard in Bucharest describing, how her Majesty Marie by her own volition lost the opportunity of being the Queen of England and Empress of all the Indies. It was when she was sweet sixteen—she must have been very beautiful then—and had only the title of Princess Mary. She is, you know, the daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh, Queen Victoria's second son, and is consequently first cousin of George V, the King of England. She and George were playmates and friends. At this time George was the second son of the Prince of Wales, but as the first son, the Duke of Clarence, was living, he was not the lineal heir to the throne. It was at the Isle of Wight that George proposed to the Princess Mary and asked her to be his wife. She refused him, and later on he married the present Queen. Then the Duke of Clarence having died he assumed the British throne. Had Princess Mary accepted she would today be Queen of England. That country would be the richer but Rumania would have lost one of the most valuable assets of her present governing body.

Rumanian Royalty at Lunch

I WILL not describe the lunch in detail. It was formally served by men in the long blue uniforms and silver buttons of the palace livery. The room, I judge, was about fifty feet long and twenty feet wide and the dining table ran from one end almost to the other. The table was covered with a cloth of damask. It had no flowers except sweet peas of a delicate pink which were strewn over the cloth here and there.

The menu consisted of what might be considered a good course dinner in the United States. It began with appetizers of tomatoes and cucumbers and sardines and birdshot caviar, a teaspoonful of which was served in the hard white of the half of a boiled egg. The black caviar looked pretty

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

The Universal Cause of Disease

"MEDICAL SCIENCE" gives many names to various manifestations of disease, but does not cure them. Dr. J. H. Tilden, who practiced for thirty years as a "regular" before he took up natural treatment, has arrived at the conclusion that all disease is caused by toxemia, or autointoxication—foulness of the colon, from wrong alimentation and faulty elimination. He writes:

"The cause of disease is any influence that lowers, raises, or perverts the normal standard of health.

"The study of disease per se leads to chaos. Only knowledge of health—the study of health—can give a true knowledge of what we call disease.

"The toxin may be autogenerated, or it may be taken into the system from without.

"The medical world has been looking for a remedy to cure disease, notwithstanding the obvious fact that nature needs no remedy—she only needs an opportunity to exercise her own prerogative of self-healing.

"Only the other day a sick doctor offered $1,000,000 for a cure for cancer. If he had been philosophically, as well as scientifically, educated, he would not have died believing in the possibility of a cure after nature had passed her eternal fiat of unfitness on any case.

"There are no cures for disease. Health, and how to build it and keep it, is the knowledge needed. All the medical hypotheses so far advanced by the profession are largely antithetical and inconsistent, if not wholly out of unison with any synthetic theory of the universe that has been advanced by scientists, so far as known—except, of course, the Mosaic; and this the leaders in medical science would be loath to acknowledge as their scientific basis, notwithstanding the fact that their pet theory, bacteriology, rests wholly on it, and that without it the germ theory cannot be explained.

"For twenty-five years I practiced the science of medicine. During most of that time I did not know why people were sick, why they got well, nor why they died.

"When visiting the sick, and treating them in the most approved style, I had no idea of how I should find them at the next call. I did not know if the disease would end soon or late. I did not know if it would take on a severe form, or quickly run its course. I did not know whether or not there would be complicatins. In fact, I did not know anything that would make me comfortable regarding the outcome of the disease; and, of course, I could not say anything of a real comforting nature to my patients or their friends. I had the usual stock-in-trade subterfuges and little nothings that are worked off on a confiding public by the profession everywhere. Here is one, for example: 'If no complications arise, the patient will recover.'

"Was my experience unique? Was it peculiarly my own? Not by any means. My experience in those days was an exact duplicate of the experiences of the best, as well as the worst, physicians today. I defy the so-called best practitioners of this or any other country to undertake to prove that what I am saying is not true. Not one of the best practitioners can tell from one day to another how his patients will be. Not one can truthfully say that there is not an element in every case that is not known to him, and not knowable. Not one can say with any certainty that the drug he prescribes will have the action he hopes to experience. Not one can tell, after the first twenty-four hours of medication, whether the symptoms presenting themselves are those of disease proper or are due to drugs. Not one can tell after the disease has been under treatment for a day or two, whether his patient is suffering from disease free from drug action, food poisoning, deranged emotions, or mental depression.

"To sum up: No doctor, from the professor in college to those in the rear rank, knows anything definite about his patient after the first day's drugging. Every honest doctor will admit that there is an unknown quantity about every case he treats which forces him to guess if asked to give his opinion. This wholesale guesworks is made necessary because the whole scheme of theory and practice is an unorganized mass of theory, science, empiricism and superstition. Every disease is looked upon as an individuality; each disease—name—has a special germ created to cause it. Nonsense! This is no more the truth than that words are made up of leters independent of the alphabet. As truly as every word must go back to the alphabet for its letter elements, every disease must go back to toxemia, and the causes of toxemia, for its initial elements.

"The toxin theory of the healing art is grounded on the truth that toxemia is the basic source of all diseases. So sure and certain is this truth that I do not hesitate to say that it is by far the most satisfactory theory that has been advanced in all the history of medicine. It is a scientific system that covers the whole field of cause and effect—a system that synthesizes with all knowledge, hence a true philosophy.

"When this truth first began to force itself upon me, years ago, I was not sure but that there was something wrong with my mind. I saw that it would bring me very largely in opposition to every established medical treatment. I held back, and argued with myself—I was afraid that I was developing a self-destructive egomania. I fought to suppress giving open utterance to a belief that would, in all probability, cause me to be hissed at—subject me to the jeers and gibes of the better class of people, both lay and professional.

"Little by little I have proved the truth of my theory. I have tried it out daily for the past twenty years. I myself have personally stood the brunt of my experimenting, and have willingsly suffered because of it. Every day this trying-out of the theory has convinced me more and more that toxemia is the universal cause of disease.

"So simple and so matter-of-fact are all the truths of this toxin theory that it is a surprise that every professional man has not also discovered them. Indeed, the simplicity of it all has caused me to hesitate to write about it; for, strange to say, people generally hate the simple things of life. It has been hard for me to convince myself that there could be so much in so little—so simple a theory.

"The truth is so revolutionary that it will not be adopted at once. The profession is not ready for it; for just now the profession is enthusiastically occupied with the germ theory—a theory which declares that a specific germ causes a specific disease; a theory which in time must die out, the same as every other false theory.

"My theories have received but little attention. A few, a very few, physicians know what I stand for. Those few, however, are enthusiastic, and have proved to their own satisfaction that the theory has a universal application.

"I have been urged by many to define my theory and practice. I really have defined it thousands of times in the past ten years—not in any formal statement, but in my writings—in such a way that any professional mind should have had no trouble in interpreting it, if it had given my writings the attention a student mind should. Indeed, any professional mind should have read this theory in almost every number of my periodical; for I have not attempted to disguise it at any time, but, on the contrary, have made it tantalizingly plain to any but prejudiced minds.

"Profesional minds are supposed to be trained into a power of discrimination that enables them to sense truth in anything. But it appears that the principal training today is into accepting authority without question.

"I should not be accused of rushing into print, and handing out an immature theory to the public; for I have been proving it for years.

"To define just what is meant by toxemia, I will say: Toxemic means poisoned by toxin taken into the body, or by one's own waste products—retained metabolic waste—brought about by inefficient elimination; and faulty elimination is caused by enervation—a weakened state of the body—lost resistence.

"The body is strong or weak, as the cause may be, depending entirely upon whether the nerve energy is strong or weak. And it should be remembered that the functions of the body are carried out well or badly according to the amount of energy generated.

"It should be known that without nerve energy not an organ of the body—a gland or muscle—can perform its function. This being true, reason declares that there must be a limit to the supply of this energy, and that each organism requires a specific amount. The amount, under normal conditions, it is safe to assume, is just what is necessary to do the work of the organism with the least amount of wear and tear.

"For the human body to function normally—for the physiological processes to be carried on in an ideal way—just the proper amount of nerve energy must be generated. This means that waste and repair are adjusted to ordinary needs, and that for these needs sufficient energy is generated to carry on the work. But no provision can be made for the supply of more energy for extraordinary demands, such as are experienced in civilized life. Work, worry, and the pleasure-seeking peculiar to civilization draw heavily on the capital stock of nerve energy. The consequence is that everyone is in a more or less enervated state. This weakened state—this state of used-up nerve energy—shows itself in imperfect elimination. The inability of the organism to rid itself of waste products brings on autotoxemia. That this is universal cannot be successfully disputed, for it is imposible to find one human being, in the ordinary walks of life, free from self-poisoning. If enervation is the cause of autotoxemia, then why is not enervation the cause of all diseases? Because weakness is not sickness. Poison is the only sickness per se. Man can be enervated, yet not sick; but he cannot be poisoned—sick—without being enervated.

"As has been stated continuously in my writings for the past dozen years, the habits of overeating, overclothing, and excesses of all kinds use up nerve energy. When the nerve supply is not equal to the demands of the body, organic functioning is impaired, resulting in the retention of waste products. This produces toxemia.

"There is a heavy draft on nerve supply

The invisible ear drum invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York City. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. # The Terrible Lord of the Wilderness

By Guy H. B. Dent

Ominous Is the Roar of His Majesty, and Well May the Lesser Ones of the Wilds Fear His Coming

THE evening was lowering and overcast. The darkening plains stretched dim and vague into the far distance. The sun went down under a frowning sky, behind shining sheets of rain, and it turned their radiance to an angry splendor of gold and murky crimson.

The vast levels were alive with game. Great herds of kongoni, the common hartebeest, intermixed with zebra, troops of the dainty Thomson's gazelle and eccentric wildebeest, grazed and fought and made love between the countless alarms which make their life one continual flight from death.

Abruptly darkness fell upon that land, and in the wet darkness rose up a sudden drumming of affrighted hooves. The king was abroad. The sinister, moaning roar, sure sign that his majesty was hungered and would swiftly feed, rolled menacingly from some indeterminate point. And at that sound all lesser folk abandoned their several businesses for a common departing.

Now, there is not one hour of the twenty-four, and not one minute of that hour, in which the lesser people of the wild feel free from deadly peril. The signs of that ever-abiding fear are patent in the electric intensity and evanescence of their emotions, in the nervous caution with which the long files approach the infrequent drinking places—in a hundred mannerisms.

So great is the lion's skill in the stalk that all too frequently his prey is unaware of the menace until the grim destroyer rears himself alongside; short time then for consideration or for flight.

But it is not always that the affair goes so merrily for the great cat. As on this particular evening the darkness thickened and the storms gathered from every direction Libah made haste through the short grass. Time and again his approach was surely heralded by his thunderous utterance. He had not fed for five days. From some secret place he had marked down the zebra as his intended quarry. When they scattered before him Libah made no rash attempts to overtake them. Well he knew that, given a fair start, they could not be outrun. He made a great detour. Shadow-like, he crept from ant hill to ant hill. He flattened his great bulk down to shallow depressions, and ever he drew more near to his destination.

As is the way of all their kind, the zebra herd had not traveled far. After that first mad rush they had speedily slowed down and halted. Life was all too short to be continuously on the move; they must attend to their own matters. Besides, it might be that some other was destined to provide the king's meal. So they abandoned flight, and shortly the strident clamor of their peculiar barking told the night that in their opinion all danger was overpast.

And ever Libah drew nearer now in purposeful silence.

But swift as was the lion's approach, the tropic storms gathered even more quickly. Tossing their crests and riven by lightning, they swept up from every quarter of the heavens. Darkness was before and under them. Their terrible voice made of the night an echoing inferno. They opened their gates and their contents fell to earth in roaring waterfalls. Soon the flats were ankle deep in tepid streams.

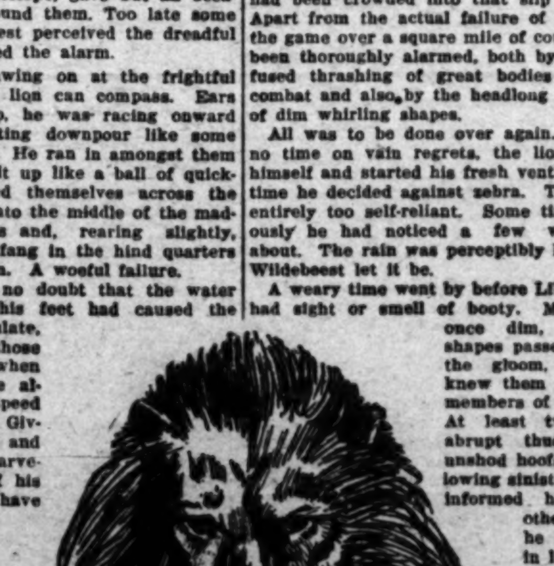
This sudden downpour made all hunting a matter of the gravest difficulty. True, the mere detail of approach was easier by reason of the frightful din. But against that must be set the difficulty of obtaining sure foothold for the final charge. Libah was annoyed. Shining in the incessant glare of the lightnings as if carved out of solid jet, he made stealthy way. The zebra were yet where he had last seen them. Overpowered by the violence of the night, they had gathered into a bunch, with heads to center. Here and there among the herd the high withers and short horns of a hartebeest were plainly to be discerned.

Peering from behind a tuft of grass some ninety yards distant, Libah found himself uncertain as to whether he should abandon zebra for the possibly more easily-harvested antelope. The lash of the rain unsettled him—he wished to make an end and be away. Finally he made up his mind to leave the decision until he should be in their midst. He gathered himself and leaped from his concealment.

Owing to the fury of the tempest, the zebra had posted no sentries. Even the homely looking hartebeest, most clear sighted of all antelope, gave but an occasional glance around them. Too late some one among the rest perceived the dreadful advent and uttered the alarm.

Libah was drawing on at the frightful pace that only a lion can compass. Ears back and tail up, he was racing onward through the beating downpour like some nightmare shape. He ran in amongst them even as they split up like a ball of quicksilver and spilled themselves across the plains. He ran into the middle of the madly jostling beasts and, rearing slightly, slaked claw and fang in the hind quarters of a zebra stallion. A woeful failure.

There can be no doubt that the water swishing about his feet had caused the lion to miscalculate, especially in those last ten yards, when he increased the already incredible speed of his approach. Given a dry night and no favor, the marvelous precision of his rush would have brought Libah alongside a selected victim, level with the forequarters, when a savage wrench and heave of the armed forepaws would have toppled the doomed animal to earth with a dislocated neck.



This time, however, was no such joyful ending. Even as the claws bit into its flank, the zebra, with eyes rolling white in an extremity of terror, drummed hind feet twice against the aggressor's body and, profiting by the water pouring down its sides, literally tore free from that fatal embrace.

From the time that Libah raced to the attack to the time that he was left alone in a soaking desolation barely had six seconds elapsed, so great is the speed of events among the wild folk. But think of what had been crowded into that slip of time! Apart from the actual failure of the hunt, the game over a square mile of country had been thoroughly alarmed, both by the confused thrashing of great bodies in close combat and also by the headlong stampede of dim whirling shapes.

All was to be done over again. Wasting no time on vain regrets, the lion effaced himself and started his fresh venture. This time he decided against zebra. They were entirely too self-reliant. Some time previously he had noticed a few wildebeest about. The rain was perceptibly lessening. Wildebeest let it be.

A weary time went by before Libah again had sight or smell of booty. More than once dim, stealthy shapes passed him in the gloom, and he knew them for other members of his tribe. At least twice the abrupt thudding of unshod hoofs and following sinister sounds informed him that others than he had been in luck that night. Once, indeed, a herd of wildebeest ceased its flight in close proximity to him as he flattened to the earth, but even as he rose to investigate came the sound of continued retreat from over a slight swell, and he was well aware of the futility of open pursuit.

At last the king maneuvered himself in between a herd of some thirty clumsy looking wildebeest and a reed-fringed pool toward which they were making slow way. The rain had stopped, the thirsty earth promised safe foothold, the great stars were reflected back from quiet puddles, all seemed to promise a successful issue to a short, decisive adventuring. Libah waited, crouched tense in the deeper shadow of the tall grasses.

But as he watched it became obvious that all was not well. His quarry were uneasy. No longer did they appear to be making progress in his direction, however hesitant. The eccentric creatures exhibited every sign of fear. Now and again the herd would separate, and with tossing manes and swishing tails the greater part would gallop off in long semicircles, while some half a dozen bulls would clumsily describe a semicircle in the opposite direction to the main body. On again, after a hundred yards of this curious cavorting, they would stop while one or two bulls ran out to stare inquisitively toward the pool. Also from time to time two males would drop to their knees and fight furiously in this position from sheer nervousness. At length their slate-gray bodies became dim in the distance, only the odd-curving horns could be clearly seen against the sky line.

Undoubtedly they had become disturbed; they did not intend to drink as yet. Grimly Libah slid after in pursuit.

Beyond a slump of flat-topped acacias the wildebeest came to a standstill. Evidently their fears, whatever they might have been, were not of any magnitude. They began spasmodically to graze. This was a great stroke of luck for the pursuer. The lion crept forward, keeping the thorny stems between himself and his prey, but if any had seen the cruel stare of his luminous green eyes surely they must have fled on the instant.

There was practically no wind, so trust-caused by our modern manner of living, and it is not strange that all active people are more or less enervated. Enervation can not be enduring without developing self poisoning, because an enervated body cannot and will not eliminate the waste products as it should."

The Gorilla

THE lion is usually called the "king of beasts," but he slinks away, when he meets a gorilla. Following is from an article by John Alfred Jordan:

"The gorilla is classed by the natives as being one of the most dangerous animals to attack. Their strength enables them to attack a lion and kill it with their teeth while holding it down with feet and hands. I have seen a gorilla easily dispose of a leopard. The animal came to a clearing made by the natives, and then I saw what I took to be a giant of a man standing in front of the leopard. I shouted and increased my pace, only to find, instead of a native, a huge gorilla.

"This animal had the leopard on the ground and was tearing it literally apart—limb from limb—with his powerful arms—I heard even the bones break. The leopard seemed like an ordinary domesticated cat in the hands of this monster, which picked it up as if it weighed only a few pounds and threw it on the ground. I found the leopard smashed to a pulp; not a bone in the body had escaped destruction, and if I had not seen it with my own eyes I should have unhesitatingly said it had been killed by an elephant."

This powerful animal lives on fruits and nuts.

Yet, there are many misguided people who believe you must eat beefsteak every day "to keep up your strength."

Natural Diet

HERE is a local news item:

"'Walk five miles a day and eat dates, brazil nuts, raw peanuts, raisins and celery if you would live to a ripe old age,' advises W. J. McCloskey, aged 66, noted portrait painter, whose studio is in the Egan Theater Building. The most interesting part of his diet is that it costs him but $2 a week for food!

"He believes that anyone who dies under 100 years of age has committed suicide.

"For sixteen years McCloskey has dieted rigidly and says he has more pep and vitality at the end of the day than he had at 50 years of age."

Many are adopting a natural diet, nowadays, with benefit to their physical and mental powers.

If you don't care to go so far as this, at least go as far as you think you can. Don't be a slave to your stomach. After a short time, a simple meal will taste better to you than the most elaborate banquet—and there will be no "injurious after effects."

* * *

Soda

DR. FRANK McCOY writes:

"Those who develop the habit of taking soda after a meal often only expel the gas which the mixture of soda and stomach acid will invariably produce. After this gas has been expelled, the patient will develop a real indigestion, because of the fact that the alkaline soda has destroyed the digestive juice of the stomach, and the food cannot digest as well as if the soda had not been taken. If gas has actually been formed because of fermenting food it will come up easily by itself, and you do not have to search for it."

Not only this, bu tsoda kills the life elements, or vitamines in food.

"Rain Making"

THE unprecedented drought in Southern California was broken on the first and second of March, by a fall of more than three-quarters of an inch. Not very much, but a great help.

On the previous days, some simple minded farmers of a neighboring county met to discuss whether they should offer a "rainmaker" $5000 for five inches of rain.

Strange, is it not, what superstition still prevails among apparently intelligent people? The "rainmaker" has everything to win and nothing to lose. If it happens to rain, of course he did it.

Same with prayers.

Or with medical treatment. If a doctor is called, and the patient recovers, in spite of medical interference with nature's efforts, then of course the doctor did it. If the patient dies it is the "will of Providence."

When I was on The Times, as a reporter, in November, 1886, one of my first assignments was to interview Fred Moll, who had an idea that rain could be produced by sending up into the clouds balloons with explosives. He still lives here. It was tried in the Southwest, but didn't work.

Rainy seasons and dry seasons run in cycles, as shown by the record of the rings in the giant sequoias over 2000 years old.

Mind and Body

THE trouble with psychotherapy is—it begins at the wrong end of the problem. The devotees of psychotherapy, mind-cure, psychoanalysis, Coueism and the entire "fifty-seven varieties" of mind-cure cults, are all wandering around in the prehistoric age of intellectual culture.

Dr. J. H. Kellogg writes:

"The philosophy upon which these mental therapeutists base their practice is but a little in advance of that of the Koreans, who still cling to the ancient belief in demoniac possession. They seek to 'minister to a mind-diseased,' whereas, the real trouble is not with the mind, but something outside of the mind which is disturbing it. This basic fact is hinted at in the common expression, 'down in the mouth,' as indicating a man who is mentally depressed. The ancient Greeks got much deeper into the subject and called a melancholic patient a 'hyprochondriac,' which interpreted, simply means 'down under the ribs,' for they believed that a man subject to the blues had something wrong with his liver.

"But modern science has delved deeper still and found the mischief-maker which disturbs the liver. Away down in the colon, almost as remote in the body as possible from the brain, twenty-five or thirty feet removed from the seat of consciousness, modern science has discovered the 'blue devils' that need to be cast out, to set free from bondage the mind that is terrified by day and by night by the ghosts and hobgoblins of mental maladies which do not exist. The venoms and viruses excreted by the trillions of horrible filthy germs always found flourishing luxuriously in the colons of those who are mentally morbid or upset, are the real subconscious where gloom and despair, melancholy and miseries of all sorts are generated. To undertake to cure a hypochondriac by making him say every morning, 'I am getting better and better every day in every way,' without unloading his colon of its pestilential, putrescent contents, is as silly as the old method of combating the plague and cholera by burning incense.

"Mind disorder means bodily disorder of some sort. Behind every mental disturbance there is a physical disturbance, and the chief disturber of mental peace is without doubt to be found in the sewer of the body, which by neglect becomes choked so

WHAT SCIENCE HAS TO SAY ABOUT RADIUM

Radium contains the greatest amount of energy of any substance known. It is a mystery within itself, but it possesses the power to impart its peculiar influence and to energize other substances with it is brought into contact. The energy emanating from this source is termed Radio-Activity. Our Radio-Active Pad, containing actual Radium, is highly Radio-Active and possesses the property of storing and giving off the sun's rays. These rays are concentrated energy and will penetrate any known substance; and when applied to the body will energize and vitalize the entire system. The pad, when worn as directed, will distribute a constant stream of solar radio-active energy over a large part of the body, and infuse this energy into every part of the anatomy. This vitalizing force penetrates to every organ of the body and acts as a stimulus, promotes a healthy circulation of the blood, renews the tissues, and thereby overcomes such diseases as: Rheumatism, High Blood Pressure, Neuritis, Anemia, Diabetes, Neuralgia, Poor Circulation, Kidney, Heart, Liver and Lung Troubles, and the general run-down condition due to the after effects of the influenza. No matter what your ailment may be, there is help for you in this new Scientific Discovery, as we have a very liberal test plan that will satisfy you as to the merits of this appliance, and you alone are to be the judge. This home treatment is within the reach of all, so if you are suffering and need help, INVESTIGATE. Call or write to the

ON THE SWAMP ROAD

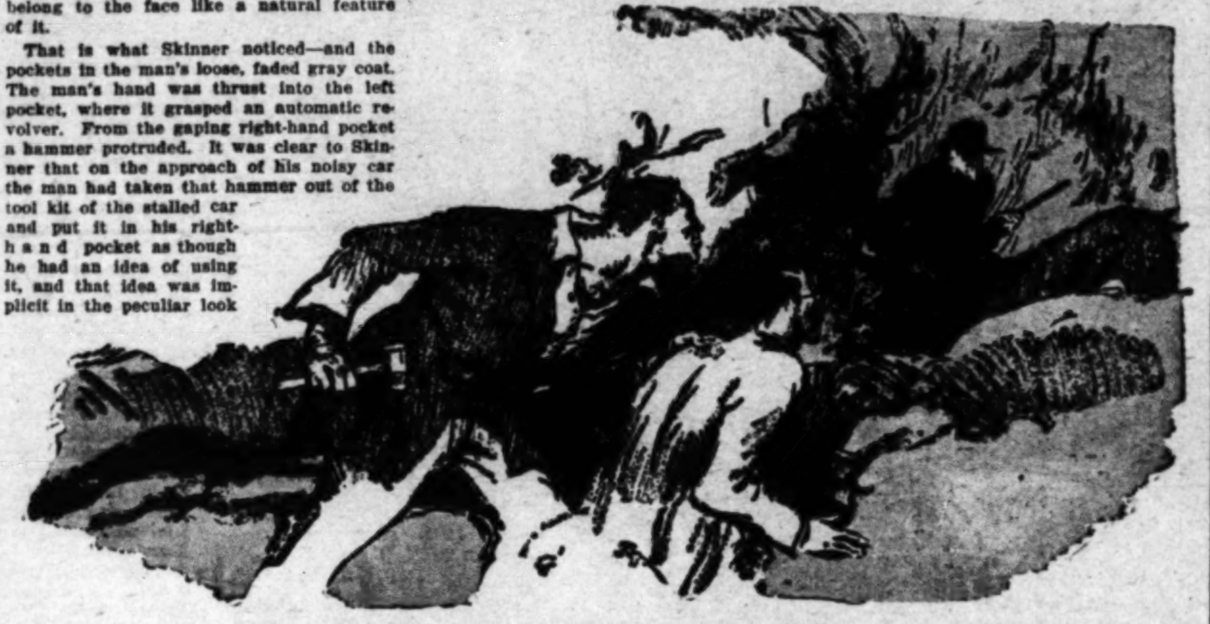
for backing. He was doing that when a man stepped out of the bushes and laid a right hand on the foredoor of the car as though he were taking possession of it. "Git out!" said the man.

He was a burly person, with broad shoulders and a deep chest. Although he wore a loose, faded gray coat, one might see that his waist—encircled by a rusty leather belt that held up his frayed trousers—was smaller than his chest. He had lean loins, and in comparison with the mighty chest his legs looked almost spindling. His collarless calico shirt was open at the throat, showing a hairy chest and the base of a thick neck.

In other circumstances, Skinner might have admired his figure and guessed that he was a prize fighter. Just now he could see scarcely anything except the man's face a foot from his own. It was a swarthy, animal face and there was a peculiar meaning upon it—in the cat eyes that glittered into Skinner's and on the lips that made a straight line which was bisected by a diagonal white scar. That diagonal scar across the long, straight line of the lips seemed to belong to the face like a natural feature of it.

That is what Skinner noticed—and the pockets in the man's loose, faded gray coat. The man's hand was thrust into the left pocket, where it grasped an automatic revolver. From the gaping right-hand pocket a hammer protruded. It was clear to Skinner that on the approach of his noisy car the man had taken that hammer out of the tool kit of the stalled car and put it in his right-hand pocket as though he had an idea of using it, and that idea was implicit in the peculiar look on the man's swarthy face. Implicit in that look also were the things Skinner had seen in the weather-beaten farmhouse. They had been beaten with a hammer.



"He's horseback and he's got a gun," the man mumbled in Skinner's car.

"Get out where?" said Skinner aimlessly, as these things swam through his mind.

There was no mistaking the cold ferocity with which the man replied, opening his lips just wide enough to emit the sounds: "Git out o' the car."

"Oh, sure!" Skinner replied cheerfully. "Devil of a road, ain't it?" He shut off the engine, threw the lever into neutral and set the hand brake—not pausing in the operations and certainly not hurrying. "Live around here?" he inquired cheerfully, as he slid nimbly along the seat and opened the foredoor on the other side.

Having put that little space between himself and the man, he paused with his hand on the open foredoor to add sociably, "I'm driving through from Indiana. Old woman at a log cabin back there told me to take the first turn to the left. Guess she thought she'd play a trick on me. Rottenest road I ever saw in my life."

"It's rotten luck, too," Skinner complained; "rotten luck." He stepped down to the weedy roadside, and continued: "I wanted to make a place they call Allentown by half past eight, sure. I'd like to wring that old scarecrow's neck for sending me off here!"

He was, of course, merely fighting for time and trying to think up something. "Your car break down?" he added neighborly, as he stepped over in front of the man and looked mildly up into his swarthy face.

By contrast his stature seemed that of a boy. As he looked into the sinister eyes, where a peculiar meaning lay, he felt to his marrow that there was going to be no delay, and he was inspired to say, with a confidential little smile and nod. "Fact is, I got into some trouble last night; been driving like the devil ever since 10 o'clock. I guess they're after me." He thought the man's eyes wavered a hair's breadth, and he added, with another confidential little nod. "I shot a man. Can't we get out of this?"

Plainly, then the man hesitated, with a slight scowl. "Know anything about a car?" he asked.

"You bet I do!" Skinner asserted confidently. "I was in that business once."

"If you git my car to goin'," said the man in his peculiar manner of speaking, which was like a curse, "you can follow me out in your car." It was an offer—a promise, whatever that might be good for.

"Sure!" said Skinner cheerfully; "let's have a look at it." And lifting the hood to look at the engine he continued: "Mighty good car, too. I know it like a book. Used to have the agency for it. Trouble is, it's too high-priced for farmers."

And he rattled on while his hands fussed pointlessly with spark plug and carbureter.

He must gain all the time he could—but not push it a second too far—for the minutes in which this man might hope to escape were running out. So far as his scant knowledge went the engine seemed sound.

"Looks all right. Let's give her a try," he said, shutting the hood.

Starting the stalled car might be as bad for him as failing to start it, for he had a leaden notion that once there was a clear way out of the swamp only one of them would ever take it. But he must do something.

By way of answer the man only gave a grim little nod and pulled a nickel-plated watch out of the small pocket in his frayed trousers, consulting it while Skinner's heart seemed to fade out of his body. Returning the watch to the pocket, the man looked at him—giving him, perhaps, three minutes; or was it only one?

Skinner climbed into the driver's seat. The man was about to follow him, but changed his mind and took a seat in the tonneau instead—that is, behind him.

With a dull, mechanical eye Skinner looked at throttle and spark lever; then turned the magneto key and put his hands to the wheel. He threw in the self-starter. It churned and the engine whirled, but no explosion came. He tried it again with the same result. Mechanically, he looked again at lever, spark, magneto key and at other equipment.

Then he saw, with astonishment, that the gasoline dial showed plainly that the tank was empty. Through his brain flitted the surprised and contemptuous thought, "Here's a man running for his life with an empty tank and not knowing it!" He was about to call out, with a touch of indignation, "Why, you're out of juice!" In fact, he half turned his head for that purpose. But immediately he looked back again; applied the self-starter twice more; then slipped quickly to the other end of the seat, saying, "It won't go!" at the same time springing from the car.

"I tell you what," he added, as the man was getting out of the car, "We've got to turn my car around and beat it back to the main road. It's the only way. You and I together can swing it around."

He supposed it was exactly what the man had in mind; but it would gain him three minutes—and his help in lifting the car around ought to be worth that little respite, especially as the man must turn the car before he could leave, unless he chose the slow and difficult process of backing up.

"All right," said the man grimly, and together they started up the road to the red car.

But Skinner walked ahead and so crossed over to the right-hand side of the road. Thus when they turned behind the car to lift it he would be at the man's left and his right hand would be close to the gaping pocket in which the automatic revolver lay. It was a desperate chance; but that was better than no chance at all. He kept talking. He was talking as they took positions behind the car, and he thought, "When we stoop I will grab for it."

But before they stooped the man very deliberately took the revolver out of his left-hand pocket and put it in the right-hand one, looking down into Skinner's eyes then with a tigerish little grin as though some brute instinct had sensed a danger.

"Guess you'd like that gun," he suggested with a ghastly sort of grin. A horrible joke seemed stirring in his mind and Skinner suddenly smelled blood upon him. He must have grinned that way when he was at work back there on the main road.

"Look here!" said Skinner promptly, "I don't know who you are or what you're doing down there. But I know you want to get out. My name's Morrison and I'm from Shelbyville, Ind. You'll read about me if you get an Indianapolis newspaper this morning. I've got to get out to save my neck. Now I know a way to get out and you don't. Listen to this: I came through a town called Turner Junction about an hour ago. I know a fellow there. He advised me to strike for a little flag station called Platburg and swing out on a freight there and so get to Chicago. This red car of mine is pretty easy to follow and I knew I'd have to drop it pretty soon. He told me the road to Platburg—not used very much and most of the way through woods. I ought to have turned five miles back; but like a fool I decided to keep on to Allentown. The woods road looked sort of rough and I thought I could make Allentown and catch a passenger train. But it's too late for Allentown now. They'd be pretty sure to have word there before we could make it, and the passenger train would be gone. Platburg is the only chance I see and I know the way there. If anybody's looking for you," he added, his eyes steadily upon the man's, "it won't be long before they find that car, and this neighborhood won't be healthy."

As the man looked at Skinner an instant his glittering eyes seemed to beat in so that Skinner could fairly feel their impact upon his nerves. "What makes you think somebody's looking for me?" he asked.

"You're pretty particular about that gun," Skinner replied, with a nod.

The man asked another question, his eyes boring into Skinner's head: "You come along that road?" He pointed south.

"Sure!" Skinner replied promptly.

"See anybody?" asked the man.

"Not a soul," said Skinner, "except the old woman at the log cabin that I told you about. She told me to turn here. You come with me and we'll make Platburg."

"All right," said the man grimly; and Skinner's constricted heart expanded exultantly.

Together they stooped to lift, and behind them—almost in their ears, it seemed—a voice shouted, "Hello!"

With the marvelous swiftness of a pouncing cat the man glanced over his shoulder, hurled Skinner to the ground, caught him by the throat and drew the hammer. It all happened while the shout was still ringing in Skinner's ears. He lay perfectly still, looking up through his gold-bowed spectacles at the burly form of death which knelt over him. He was not struggling in the least, either physically or mentally; but lying in a kind of quiet wonder, as though the mechanism of his life had been abruptly shut off, awaiting the blow. He saw that the man had turned his head again to look in the direction of the sound and noted the swelling vein on his thick neck.

Then another voice, some distance away, answered, "Hello, there!" The hand at Skinner's throat sensibly relaxed and the arrested mechanism started up again.

"Here's the track of a car!" called the first voice. "Hurry back to Tatroe's—and telephone to watch the other end of this road. Then come back here. We'll follow the road through."

"I guess they're after me," Skinner whispered at random.

The man paid no attention to that. With one heavy hand resting on Skinner's chest at the base of the throat, he stretched his thick neck, turning his head from side to side, trying to make out the person who had shouted.

"I can't see," he growled under his breath, looking down at the prostrate man.

"Stand up," Skinner suggested in a whisper.

The man glowered dubiously down at him an instant and it seemed that the pupils of his eyes contracted.

"I killed three this morning," the man growled. "I'd as lief kill you as look at you." With that he got on his haunches and slowly raised himself, stretching his neck and peering. When he was upright he glowered down and motioned Skinner to rise. Two or three yards brought them to a place where, above the intervening bushes, Skinner could see the head and gray slouch hat of his grizzle-bearded friend.

"He's horseback and he's got a gun," the man mumbled in Skinner's ear as they crouched out of sight. "I could git him easy enough, but the horse'd git away."

He evidently revolved the problem which that presented, as his eyes turned restlessly up and down the road; and through the hand that rested on his back Skinner could fairly feel the trembling and quivering of nerves and muscles as in a big animal that prepares to crouch for a spring. At the same time the man's sweat and odor, and the subtle feel of something obscene and bloody about him, were sickening.

The restless, glittering eyes came back to Skinner. "There's a bridle-path back there a ways," he said. "I seen it when I drove down here."

"With a horse a fellah could follow that," the man added.

It seemed in fact the only outlet. With the telephoned alarm, their bad road would soon be blocked at both ends and for a man to make his painful way afoot across the swamp would take many hours. But with a horse one might follow the bridle-path to something that would give a chance of escape.

"I'll git him, and you git his horse," said the man, grumbling under his breath; "and I'll give you a lift as far back as the bridle-path," he added with another little grin. Obviously the last was a lie, but Skinner was too much occupied with other things to pay attention to that.

"You'll lay down on your back with your hat over your face beside the bushes here and keep groanin'," the man explained. "I'll be in the bushes. He'll git off'n his horse to take a look at you and he'll put the bridle around his arm—see?" He made a motion like a horseman slipping a bridle over his arm. "When he squats down to take the hat off'n your face you reach up and grab the bridle." He nodded his head as though that were all; then added as a sort of elaboration, "I'll jump out the bushes and kill him."

It seemed to Skinner, in fact, horribly ingenious. He could fairly see the grizzle-bearded man dismounting, slipping the bridle over his arm and stooping with his shotgun tucked uselessly under his arm or laid that the poisons which ought to be dismissed from the body through the colon are absorbed, defiling the blood and finally filtering out through the lungs and skin, tainting the breath and often giving to the body a pernicious aroma, familiar to the olfactory sense of every doctor or nurse who has had to deal with psychic cases.

CARE OF THE BODY

"The average man who has 'the blues' is as much intoxicated as the poor alcoholic one used so often to meet zigzagging along the highway in preprohibition days.

"It is important that everybody should know that colon poisons, as well as alcohol may intoxicate. When called to see a case in consultation some years ago, the writer looking at the lady's tongue, found it very badly coated and observed at the same time an exceedingly foul, decidedly fecal odor of the breath, and remarked, 'It is very evident, madam, that you are suffering from autointoxication.' The lady became very red in the face, and very emphatically and vehemently protested, 'You are entirely mistaken, sir, you are entirely mistaken. I haven't had a drop since night before last. I admit that I do usually take a toddy at night to make me sleep, but being here I was not able to get any last night, and so I cannot be intoxicated.'

"'But your intoxication, madam, is something a great deal worse than the ordinary kind. You are a bootlegger; you always carry the poisons with you, and you are a moonshiner. You manufacture it on the premises. Your colon is a regular poison factory and your body is stored full of indol, skatol, phenol and a dozen other poisons which are being produced by the putrefaction of food residues which lie for days in the large intestine, undergoing putrefactive changes.'

"Modern science has thoroughly demonstrated the saneness of the ideal of the ancient Greeks, 'A sound mind in a sound body.' Clear thinking, optimism, mental pep and efficiency are associated with clean blood, which can only exist when there is prompt clearance of the wastes and residues of the body through normal action of colon, liver, kidneys and other emunctories.

"If the psychologists and psychoanalysts and Christian Scientists and Coueists, and all the rest of the mind curists, will set to work to teach people how to get their colons to act efficiently three times a day, they will accomplish a vast deal more good than they will ever be able to do with all their mystic and fine-spun philosophy."

False Methods

FOLLOWING is a dispatch from London: "The tuberculosis vaccine evolved by Prof. George Dreyer, distinguished Oxford bacteriologist, which was the subject of much comment last summer, has not proved a success, according to the Westminster Gazette."

All such methods must fail, because they are false. They seek to suppress symptoms, instead of removing the cause.

The only cure for any disease is to cease doing that which causes it.

Fasting

THE following is by Bernarr McFadden: "If you fear the results of missing a meal or two, I can positively assure you that there is no danger whatever in such abstinence. I have personally conducted thousands of fasts, ranging from one to ninety days, and I cannot remember a single instance in which harm has resulted from abstaining from food, even for the long periods mentioned. To be sure, in practically every one of these cases, there was a necessity for an extreme regime of this sort. The subjects needed a fast. They needed the functional cleaning out that is accomplished by this regime. I have advised diets in thousands of cases that frequently were but little more than what some people would consider enough to 'feed a bird,' and in practically every instance such diets were of tremendous benefit.

"You would actually be amazed at the extent to which your diet can be reduced in quantity without lessening mental or physical strength.

"I shall never forget my first experience with a seven-day fast. At that time fasting was very unusual and there was a general impression that you would die if deprived of food for as long a period as seven days. Each day I carefully noted my physical condition. I exercised in the gymnasium and tested my strength. I thought that if I could raise a fifty-pound dumb-bell over my head with the strength of one arm at the end of the seven days, it would be a marvelous performance. You can imagine my amazement, therefore, when at the end of the seventh day I was able to double this weight. In other words, I succeeded in raising a 100-pound dumb-bell and holding it at arm's length over my head with the strength of one arm alone, after abstaining from nourishment of every sort for a week.

"The average fat man or woman will gain in strength and endurance day by day while abstaining entirely from food. This may seem a starting and unreasonable statement, but I have personally seen it demonstrated in numerous cases. If you are carrying an excess amount of tissue, you can feed on your body for a considerable period with a distinct advantage to yourself.

"If you are of the lean, lanky and emaciated sort, then in practically every instance, you are eating beyond your digestive capacity. The average person of this type keeps himself thin by overeating, and gains in weight when the amount of food is lessened and confined strictly to the requirements of the body."

Phosphorus in Foods

THE German scientist, Moleschott, has said: "Ohne Phosphorkein Gedanke." (There is no thought without phosphorus.) Phosphorus is truly important among the twelve minerals found in the body, and in natural foods, but in excess it is a destroyer. Only after a long and bitter fight against selfish interests, was Congress induced to forbid the deadly phosphorus matches which ruins the health of those who make them.

A great majority of "civilized" people eat an excess of phosphatic foods. Then many of them top off with phosphate drinks, which are simply mineral poisons, as the minerals in the inorganic form cannot be assimilated by the body, but only in the organic form, as found in foods.

Not only fish, eggs, meat and cow's milk contain a great excess of phosphorus, but cereals also contain an excess of this mineral, the effect of which is to overstimulate the nervous system, especially the sexual organs, from which overstimulation there is, of course, the inevitable reaction. When we see how a great majority of the young are fed, we cannot wonder at the prevalence of precocity, sexual excess, crime and suffering. American nervousness is undoubtedly largely due to this overconsumption of foods containing an excess of phosphorus, and might be cured by the adoption of a dietary abounding in sulphur and the potassium salts, notably green leaves and fruits. Otto Carque writes as follows in regard to phosphorus in food:

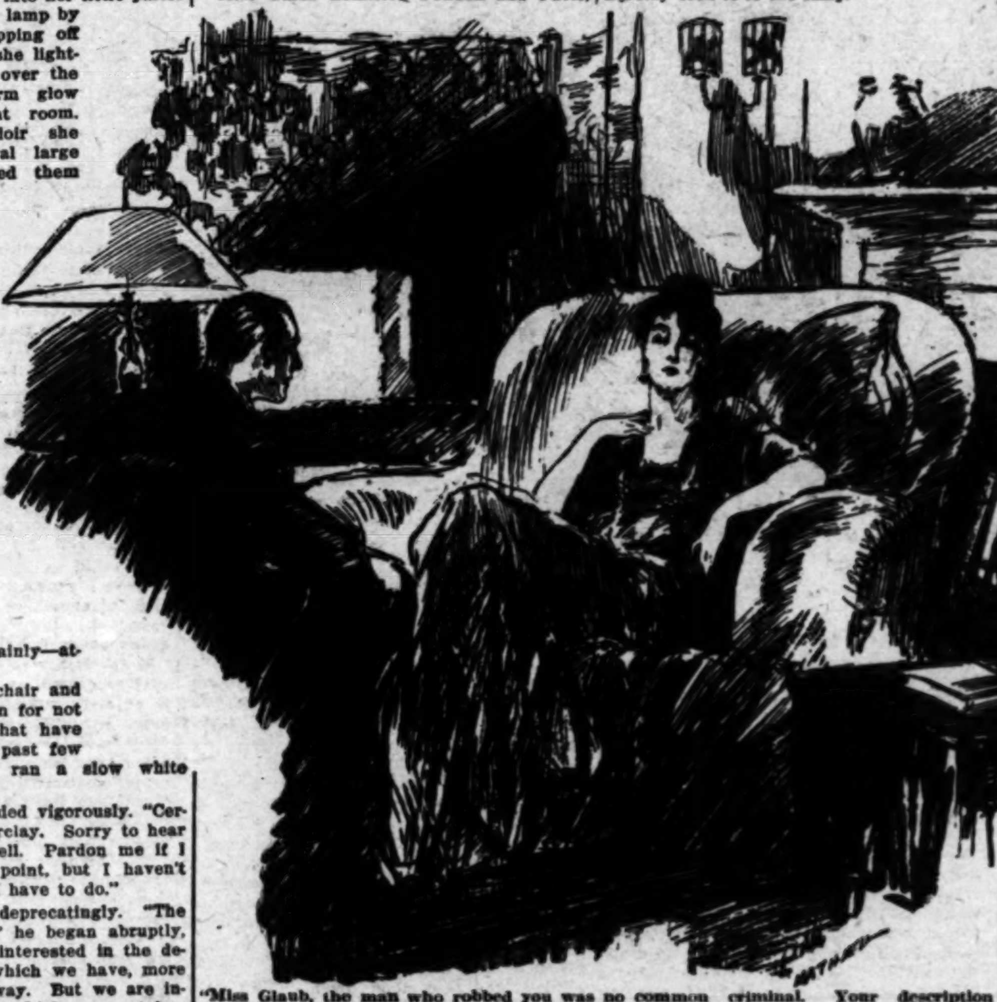
A Question of Crown Jewels and a Moment of Quick Thinking on the Part of "Adele, Inc."



"Miss Glaub, the man who robbed you was no common criminal. Your description proves that."

we get in touch with Miss Glaub? Is she there?"

Miss Glaub smiled into the transmitter. "I'm sorry," she said calmly, "but Miss Glaub is not here. She has gone to her apartment in the Meadowbrook. But—but she can't see anyone unless it is of the utmost importance."

"But this is of the utmost importance," the voice insisted.

"But Miss Glaub detests publicity; I—I am afraid it would do you no good."

"We have to see her."

Miss Glaub laughed resignedly. "In that case," she said. "I—that is she—can probably be reached at the Meadowbrook at ten."

It was ten o'clock, just twenty minutes after the imperative summons of the Bigburg News. Humming a snatch of popular blues, Miss Glaub went into her little parlor and lit the rose-shaded lamp by the piano. Then snapping off the chandelier above, she lighted the two droplights over the mantel. A cozy warm glow flooded the pleasant room. From the tiny boudoir she brought forth several large photographs and placed them carelessly—but advantageously—about the room.

Miss Glaub was wondering whether the News representative would be young, when the buzzer in the hall announced the caller. With agile grace Miss Glaub draped herself in an easy-chair halfway between the pink light near the piano and the soft droplight over the mantel. Quickly her face assumed the wan expression of one who has suffered deeply.

"Come in, please."

"Miss Glaub?"

A young man, certainly—attractive.

"Won't you take a chair and let me ask your pardon for not arising? The things that have happened during the past few hours—" Miss Glaub ran a slow white hand across her brow.

The young man nodded vigorously. "Certainly. My name's Barclay. Sorry to hear you are not feeling well. Pardon me if I seem to rush to the point, but I haven't much time—to do all I have to do."

Mr. Barclay smiled deprecatingly. "The fact of the matter is," he began abruptly, "we are not so much interested in the details of the robbery, which we have, more or less, in a routine way. But we are interested in the pearls which were stolen. The police report said they were genuine and of unknown value. That sounds like a mighty interesting story. Won't you tell me, Miss Glaub, why you told the sergeant that they were priceless?"

It was a trying moment for Adele, Inc. What to say? What to do? Where to turn? Miss Glaub shook her head slowly. "I am sorry," she said after a moment, "but I can't." Romance whispered an inspirational way out. "It—it is a secret I am not at liberty to disclose.

Barclay nodded his head rapidly. As he phrased it, it was a ball straight into his mitt. Young Mr. Barclay worked for a sensational city editor who ran a sensational morning newspaper. The "old man" had given him the idea in dyspeptic monosyllables. Adroitly Mr. Barclay worked to "hang" his story. He leaned forward confidentially.

"Miss Glaub," he said swiftly, "the man who robbed you was no common criminal. Your description of him alone proves that. He was a man out of another world. Isn't that right?"

Miss Glaub nodded complacently.

"That man was not after a little money. He was working for something big! Perhaps he was not a criminal in the accepted sense of the word. Now I am going to tell you what the News thinks." His voice dropped still lower. "Miss Glaub," he whispered, "the pearls which were stolen from your safe this evening may have come from the collection of the Russian Crown jewels!"

Miss Glaub opened her mouth—and slowly allowed it to close.

"No! No!" she cried after speech returned.

"Yet you admit the history of the pearls is a secret?" persisted the eager young man.

Helplessly caught in the meshes of Romance, Miss Glaub nodded.

"And you say they were priceless?"

"Yes!"—tonelessly.

Young Mr. Barclay nodded with deep satisfaction. "Miss Glaub," he asked "have you ever been in Russia?"

"No."

"Anywhere abroad?"

Miss Glaub admitted London and Paris, without adding that it was not uncommon for costume-buyers to seek their wares abroad.

Young Mr. Barclay made a mental note "Admits going abroad but denies ever being in Russia."

"Of course," he went on, "you understand that we don't think for a moment you came by the pearls dishonestly. Not for a moment. But Russian grand dukes have become infatuated before with beautiful women and tossed them jewels worth millions—"

"You're—you're crazy!" gasped Miss Glaub hoarsely.

Young Mr. Barclay was a shrewd young man and he just had to make the story stand up—for a day or two, anyway. "But you are beautiful," he accused.

Miss Glaub smiled wanly. "I am only a poor wo—girl caught in the mesh of circumstance!"

"In other words, Miss Glaub, you refuse to affirm or deny that the pearls are the famous Romanoff string?"

"The famous what?" Miss Glaub demanded weakly.

"The famous Russian Crown pearls."

"No," she said again. "No."

But the other persisted. "Did your pearls come from abroad?"

Miss Glaub said truthfully that she didn't know where they came from.

"Possibly from Russia?"

"Possibly."

Mr. Barclay arose with alacrity. "And now there is only one more thing—a photograph of yourself. Have you one wearing the pearls?"

"And you have to have a picture. Even"—archly—"if I much prefer your not having it?"

"Absolutely."

There was no question of selection. With evident reluctance Miss Glaub removed the cabinet portrait from the piano and Mr. Barclay took it to the lamp.

"It's a regular pip," he cried enthusiastically. "It's the finest art I've brought into the office in four blue moons. It's three columns, front page, as sure as you're a foot high."

Miss Glaub deprecated his boyish ardor with a careless gesture. "It makes me look rather old, don't you think, Mr. Barclay?"

Mr. Barclay held out his hand. "It makes you look regal," he said, "almost as if I should kiss your hand as I say good-night."

Miss Glaub decided he was a nice kid.

After he had gone, Miss Glaub gazed long and searchingly into the mirror of her dressing-table. He had called her "regal!"

With fingers that fumbled mechanically among the utensils of an untasted breakfast, Miss Glaub sought to focus the dancing headline. And the picture was there. Three columns wide, as he had said, and in the very center of the first page! With the aid of the percolator and a sugar-bowl, Miss Glaub managed to flatten the paper on the little table. Slowly she read:

Police Hint at International Mystery in Pearl Robbery

Bigburg police were working this morning on what they believe may be the most sensational jewel robbery in the history of this country as the result of the robbery last night of Miss Adele Glaub, proprietor of the exclusive costume shop, Adele, Inc., in her office in the rear of the store.

At the point of a pistol Miss Glaub, a strikingly beautiful woman, was compelled to open the office safe. The intruder, who had gained entrance by means of a rear door, escaped with approximately $100 in cash and a pearl necklace, leaving Miss Glaub in a fainting condition on the office floor, where she was later discovered by a night watchman, who called in the police.

Miss Glaub upon recovering refused to place a value upon the necklace, saying that it was priceless. A description of the thief, whom Miss Glaub described as tall and unusually distinguished, inclines the police to the belief that the man was after the pearls alone.

They are proceeding on the theory that the pearls, whose lineage Miss Glaub refuses to discuss beyond the fact that she has owned them for some time, might comprise part of the Russian Crown jewels lost at the time of the revolution and often reported to be in America. Police point out that Miss Glaub, who has traveled extensively in Europe, but never, according to her statement, in Russia, might have formed friendships among the old nobility which, in honor, she cannot acknowledge at the present time. The trusteeship, in the opinion of the police, has probably made Miss Glaub the innocent victim of a group of international thieves who sought and despoiled their victim last evening.

When interviewed at her charming apartment by a representative of the News, Madame Glaub denied that she was acting for friends in the nobility but admitted, charmingly, that the gems stolen might have come from Russia.

Miss Glaub finished her coffee with a gulp. Toast and eggs she left unheeded. She dressed quickly but with careful consideration. With a slow smile she added the long black earrings of the cabinet portrait.

Miss Glaub reached Adele, Inc., at nine o'clock, an unheard-of hour for smart trade, and yet the long room was already crowded. Freda, the combination bookkeeper and stenographer, rushed frantically about the room, getting nowhere. Miss Glaub stopped her with a cold stare.

"You go out an' tell O'Brien and Schultz," she commanded balefully, "that this isn't a curiosity-shop. The merchandise on the shelves is to sell."

Then in the little office she received three reporters from the afternoon dailies and charmingly said—nothing. Business was so brisk, and as each customer's wants received her personal attention, would the gentlemen kindly excuse her—please?

It was a hectic day. Curious old dowagers came to stare and remained to buy. That was the basis upon which Miss Glaub consented to remember them. The noon hour passed unheeded.

At five o'clock Miss Glaub went over the cash-register records with a smile of satisfaction. For the first time since the

CARE OF THE BODY

"The relation of phosphorous and sulphur in our foods is worthy of careful attention. Normal blood serum shows twice as much sulphuric acid salts as phosphoric acid salts, while the usual foods, such as meat, wheat and milk show a proportion of about 1 to 70. In fruits and vegetables the proportion is far better for the formation of normal, healthy blood. . . .

"Sulphur keeps the balance against phosphorus. The irregular behavior of the phosphatic nerve substance is kept in bounds by the due amount of sulphur which the blood contains. Nervous irritability may consequetnly be cured by supplying sulphur to the lymph and blood, which is best effected by a diet consisting largely of fresh fruits and vegetables."

Here is another case where it will profit everybody to devote a little time to the study of the material of which our bodies are built. And remember that the brain is a part of the body.

Starch Indigestion

INTESTINAL indigestion is the commonest form of digestive disturbance and intestinal indigestion practically always means starch indigestion. R. R. Daniels, M.D., writes:

"The first thought that usually comes into the mind of the average person when we mention the subject of indigestion is that of a painful sensation in the stomach. It is true that acute indigestion may often give rise to great distress; but the important fact is that most of our indigestion, and that which does us the most damage, never 'hurts' at all. We have more indigestion in the small intestine than we do in the stomach; and one class of foods which causes a great deal of this kind of trouble is the starches. Starch is digested largely in the small intestine. Intestinal indigestion is the commonest form of digestive disturbance, and intestinal indigestion practically always means starch indigestion.

"In order to have any clear idea as to just what happens in this condition, we must recall what digestion is. Take the starches, for instance—the class of foods including breads, potatoes and the like. The first part of their digestion is accomplished in the mouth, by the saliva. Not much of their digestion occurs in the stomach. It is only when they pass on into the small intestine that the real process of their digestion gets under way. There certain appropriate digestive fluids are poured out upon them, acting first to preserve them against decomposition; and second, to change them chemically so that they may be assimilated. Now, if we eat to much starchy food, there will not be enough of these digestive juices to take care of it all; and the result will be fermentation, and then putrefaction, always accompanied by the formation of gas.

"The presence of gas in the stomach and bowels, especially in the latter, is the first sign of starch indigestion. Sweets, likewise, if eaten in any quantity, will also ferment and produce gas.

"A second symptom of starch indigestion is acid stomach. As the unused starchy foods ferment and decompose in the intestines an irritation is set up which frequently results in what is known as a reflex hyperacidity or an overacid condition of the stomach itself. This acid state of the stomach often sets up a long chain of nervous disturbances, including insomnia, melancholia, etc. It also often leads to palpitation; and in some cases to ulcers.

"Another result of starch indigestion is constipation; when gas forms in the bowels it overstretches the bowel wall; the muscles thus overstretched fail to function normally, and constipation results.

"The person with starch indigestion is frequently underweight and lacking in strength and endurance. It is upon the starchy foods that we depend to keep our weight and energy up to normal; and when we are not digesting this class of food as we should, the strength and weight are liable to suffer. Strange as it may seem, many extremely thin persons who are overeating on starchy foods and being starch-poisoned, would gain weight on half the amount of starch, taken in an easily digested form.

"Food-toxemia is another characteristic result of starch indigestion. When starchy foods ferment in the bowels, toxins are formed which permeate the entire system. Catarrh, nervousness, low disease-resisting powers, frequent colds; and in women, menstrual disturbances, often follow from poisoning by undigested starchy foods.

"What are the causes of starch indigestion? The first and most important cause is eating an excess of bread, potatoes, cereals, sweets and pastry. In this connection let us remember that after the age of 40 our bodies cannot utilize as much of this kind of food as during the earlier years; and our diet should be adjusted to this fact. Likewise those who do sedentary work cannot burn up as much starch as those who are performing muscular labor. The need for his sort of food varies according to conditions; but whatever the condition, if you take too much of it you must expect to suffer the ills incident to starch indigestion.

"An important cause of starch indigestion is the wrong preparation of starchy foods. Starch prepared by frying is spoiled for perfect digestion. The grease used in frying encases the starch cells and renders them inaccessible to the digestive juices. For the same reason shortened foods, such as pie crust, and many pastries, are indigestible. Potatoes cooked with meat are not as easily digested as when cooked alone. Fresh bread which requires very little chewing and which tends to pack in the stomach, is another important contributor to starch indigestion.

"Another factor favoring starch indigestion is rapid eating. In the first place, when we eat fast, we are likely to eat too much; and then again we are sure to neglect mastication, which, as we have said above, is the first step in the digestion of the starches.

"The proper combination of foods is an important element in securing satisfactory digestion of the starches. Starches eaten in combination with meats and acid fruits are pretty sure to prove refractory in the digestive process.

"From what we have said it should be quite obvious that the first essential in the relief of starch indigestion is to cut down

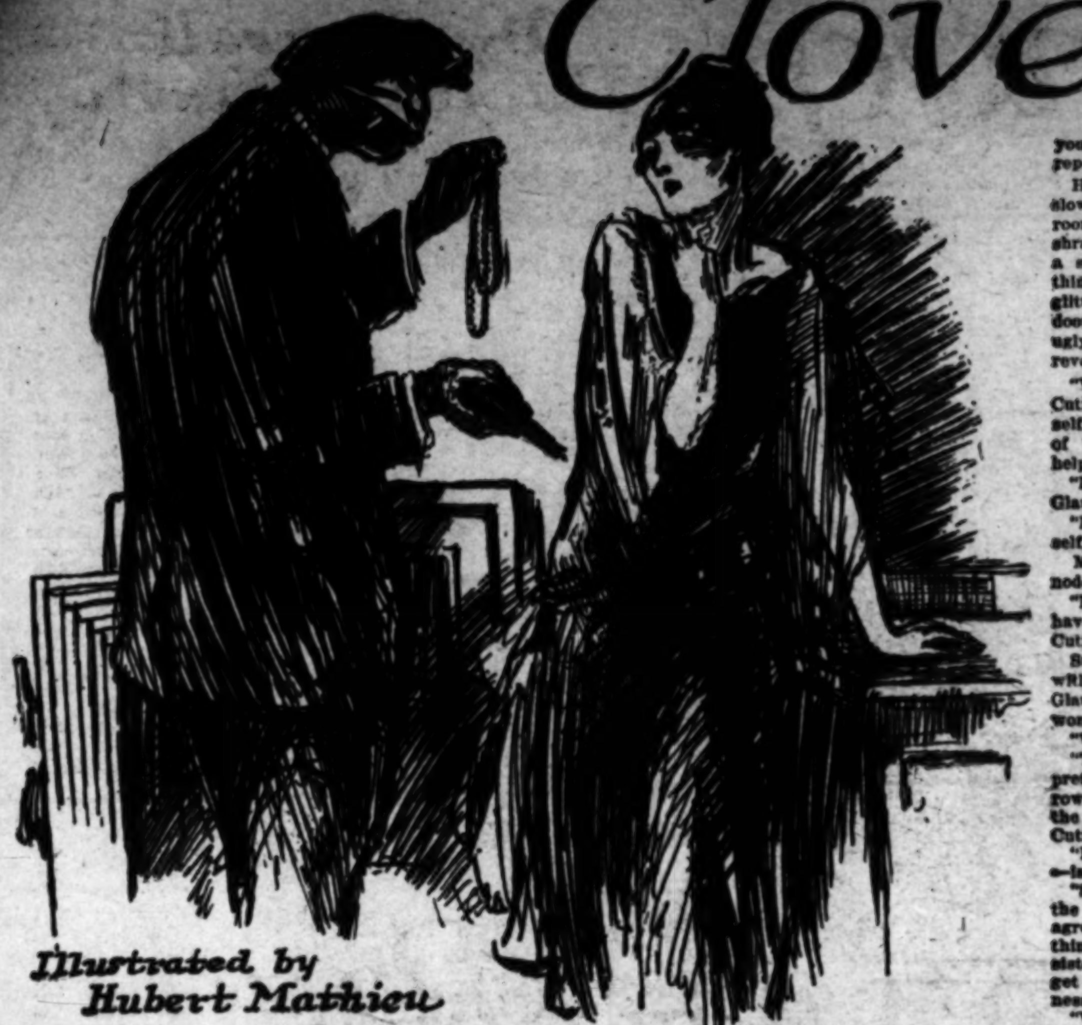
A Question of Crown Jewels and a Moment of Quick Thinking on the Part of "Adele, Inc."



Illustrated by Hubert Mathieu

MISS ADELE GLAUB, sole proprietor of "Adele, Inc.," said good-night to her two departing helpers with the saintly calm of a blind man who senses the stealthy entry of thieving fingers into his extended cup—and smiles. Then with a weary sigh she closed and locked the front door of Bigburg's newest and smartest costume shop. Through the closed door, the care-free chatter of the two drifted back to her, the contralto laughter of Miss Mercedes O'Brien and the answering giggle of Miss Marianne Schultz; both as lilting and joyous as if their pay-envelopes were rightly come by—earned.

Care-free! Joyous! Earned!

With a nervous shudder Miss Glaub leaned back against the heavy door and gazed into the interior of the shop with eyes that mirrored neither pride nor happiness Ahead, in the dusk, a full-length mirror threw back the sheen of her black silk gown and the crow-blue glint in her piled-up hair. But no half-light could soften or conceal the contempt which suddenly blazed into being as the two stared, one at the other.

"You poor little fish!" hissed the one possessed of the power of speech. "When have you been able to laugh like that? When have you been able to go out of a door like that with a nice little pay-envelope and nothing to worry about but getting down in the morning a half-hour late? When, I ask you?"

Silence.

Miss Glaub sniffed plaintively. "Six months ago you were what?" she demanded. "The best-paid buyer in dresses an' blouses in the town. Nothing to worry about! Successful! What are you now?" —with a continuation of the sniffle. "The proprietor of a smart shop that ain't smart enough to make money. And everything in the world to worry about! Rent! Advertising! Poor help! Rotten business! Cold springs! Mortgages! Interest!"

The room echoed her lament.

The letter on the desk caught her eye, and she read it again.

"Dear Miss Glaub:

"We have considered very carefully your letter of Thursday, last. There is no question in our minds of your merchandising ability. Your past history carries with it nothng but success." (Miss Glaub sniffled.) "Neither do we doubt your ability to put your new enterprise over with unlimited success. We also are agreed that it would be desirable to have a retail outlet in your wonderful city" (Miss Glaub sniffled again) "for our merchandise.

"However, we do not feel justified, because of the unsettled conditions now existing in retail lines, in making any further extensions along financial lines. We therefore must decline, most regretfully, your kind offer of partnership.

"Please accept our best wishes for your continued success and the personal regards of both Mr. August and myself.

"Sincerely yours,
"NATHAN ROSEWATER.

Miss Glaub rolled the letter into an angry ball and thrust it from her. Friends! Her head sank slowly to the table before her. Softly she began to cry.

"Good evening, Cutie!"

Miss Glaub aroused herself with a start. Her wet eyes blurred the figure standing in the doorway leading from the fitting-room. She wiped them nervously. It was dark in the room, and suddenly cold. Straining, Miss Glaub managed to make out the figure of a man. Something loose and white was twisted about the upper part of his face, and his right hand fondled something that glittered ominously. For the first time in her varied career Miss Glaub found herself voiceless. A frightened cry of inquiry strangled itself half uttered.

"Nothing like that, Cutie," the voice advised calmly.

"What—what do you want?"

The man laughed. "What do you suppose, Cutie?" he inquired lightly. "A game of dominoes?"

Miss Glaub decided that he was a young man—and the thing which was twisted about the upper part of his face was a piece of white silk from the fitting-room. The muscles which had contracted about her heart loosened slightly.

"What—what do you want?" she repeated dully.

He advanced slowly into the room. Miss Glaub shrank back with a shudder. The thing that had glittered in the doorway was an ugly snub-nosed revolver.

"What are you, Cutie—Adele herself, or just part of the hired help?"

"I am Miss Glaub."

"Miss, Inc., herself, eh?"

Miss Glaub nodded.

"I wouldn't have believed it, Cutie."

Still gasping with terror, Miss Glaub was still a woman.

"Why?"

"Too young an' pretty—an' sorrowful. What's the matter, Cutie?"

"My name ain't —isn't Cutie."

"Sure thing," the muffled figure agreed. "Anything you say, sister. But let's get down to business."

"What business?"

"That!" The barrel of the gun turned in the direction of the safe.

"Oh!" said Miss Glaub. "It—it isn't worth the trouble."

"Suppose we take a look—eh, sister?"

"You dirty brute!" she cried. "You great big hulking thief! Picking on a poor defenseless woman. You—you—"

The gun came up with a jerk. The ugly snout stared straight into her eyes. With a whimper of terror Miss Glaub collapsed into the chair from which she had just arisen.

"Shut up!"

He was standing over her now, shapeless almost, and menacing.

"Get up."

Trembling, Miss Glaub rose again.

"Open that safe."

With long, tapering fingers which refused to retain the dial within their grasp, Miss Glaub strove to obey. Romance was a dead thing.

"Get a move on! A watchman comes on this block at nine o'clock!"

Finally the safe stood open. With a chuckle the man waved her aside with the gun. "Get over there in the corner," he commanded "and stay there."

In mingled terror and despair, Miss Glaub watched the open space before the safe pile up with small jewelry novelties and papers.

"Where's the money?"

Dumbly she indicated a small japanned box in the recess. The man opened it with a screwdriver taken from the pocket of his blue serge coat. It was too dark to count. The man lit a match. Leaning weakly against the wall, Miss Glaub heard him curse and move toward the corner.

"Quit your kidding. Where's the money? I ain't looking for the collection plate."

Somehow she managed to whisper that there was no more, that the rest—the very little rest—had been banked during the afternoon.

He moved back to the safe, where, presently, he started in apparent satisfaction. Slipping back from the window, he lit another match.

In the sickly yellow flame Miss Glaub saw that he was holding up a strand of heavy imitation pearls, the ornate purple plush case held beneath his elbow. He whistled softly as the flame died between his fingers.

"Sister, are these real?"

Without knowing why, except the fear of what might happen if she answered rightly, Miss Glaub nodded.

"Not part of the rest of this truck, eh?"

"No."

"Sure?" He was standing over her again, his fact thrust suspiciously forward, his breath, from beneath the piece of white silk, choking her nostrils with a peculiar odor like the scent of cloves and nutmeg.

With a choking cry Miss Glaub, for the first time in her thirty-three acknowledged years, fainted gently away.

She came back to consciousness in a blaze of light. In the glare Miss Glaub made out the anxious face of the watchman, and the glitter of brass buttons on blue cloth.

"What's been the trouble, ma'am?"

Miss Glaub sat erect with a moan. "Thieves," she gasped. "Robbed!" She beat the floor with a small clenched fist. "Water!" she cried wildly.

Burly figures filled the doorway. A bull-throated voice in evident command demanded what was the matter.

From her position behind the watchman Miss Glaub made her presence known.

"Now then!" It was the sergeant.

The watchman broke out excitedly.

With a majestic gesture the sergeant shut the man off. "Now then, lady," he said, and Miss Glaub felt that his eyes registered respectful admiration, "suppose you tell us the story."

Simply Miss Glaub presented him with the facts.

"What did he look like?"

"He was young," she whispered softly.

"Tall or short?"

"Tall."

Could she see his hair? Could she describe his features?

Dreamily Miss Glaub went on. His hair was dark, of course, and the man was masked and wore a cap, well down over his forehead. But he had an air of being something other than a common burglar—a subtle something which marked him as different. Miss Glaub paused in the middle of it. "This—would—would it be in—that is, have to—be in the newspapers?"

"I'll have to make a report, ma'am. And a police report is common property. Naturally the papers get 'em." The sergeant grinned. "And naturally where a pretty woman is concerned—"

Miss Glaub blushed. "Oh, Sergeant," she thrilled, "can't something be done? The horror of it! Would—would they have to have my picture?"

"By hook or crook, ma'am."

Miss Glaub shook her head sadly, but her heart was pounding. The large cabinet portrait was more distinguished, but several of the snapshots enlarged, were truer likenesses—and younger.

"What's been taken?"

"The cash-drawer money and my pearls."

Pearls! Were they real.

Miss Glaub eyed the man coldly. About to admit the joke, she remembered that this was not the end. That a police report was public property—especially if it concerned a good-looking woman. And—Adele, Inc., robbed of an imitation! Romance whispered also. It was nobody's business, after all.

"Do you think," she demanded contemptuously, "that I would have fainted over imitations?"

The sergeant moistened his pencil.

"Value?"

"To me," said Miss Glaub softly, "they were priceless."

The sergeant wrote: "Value Unknown."

Hardly had they left, or so it seemed to the time-benumbed mind of the proprietor of Adele, Inc., when the telephone on the desk jangled imperatively. Miss Glaub lifted the receiver and softly said hello.

"This is the Bigburg News. Where can the amount of starchy foods. All sweets should be eliminated. We would recommend for the first week or two of the treatment, or until the gas has practically disappeared, that starchy food be eaten only once a day, and then almost alone, or combined as we will indicate further on in this article. The reduction of the amount of starchy food should be persistently carried out regardless of loss of weight or strength until the gas has been reduced to the minimum; then the amount may be gradually increased; but the increase should be slow enough that there is no increase in the amount of gas. In fact, there ought to be a decrease as the starch-digestive functions gradually recuperate.

"The person troubled with starch indigestion should be particularly careful as to the preparation of starchy foods. Cereals should be thoroughly cooked, but cereals such as rice should not be cooked into a pasty mass. Fresh bread should be thoroughly toasted. Bread four days old, which is dried out enough that it will require considerable chewing, may be taken; but toasted bread is on the whole decidedly safer for the starch-indigestion patient. Potatoes and other starchy food should not be fried.

"Since digestion of starchy food begins in the mouth, and the saliva is an important factor in their digestion, all foods of this class should be thoroughly chewed. The average person with starch indigestion eats too fast.

"The next suggestion we would make to sufferers from starch indigestion is to eat their starchy foods alone or nearly so. This will get us away from the danger of getting our starch into combination with other foods that are incompatible with it. Meats and acid foods seem to interfere with the digestion of starches in the person whose digestion is below par. Acid fruits and fruit juices and meats of all kinds, particularly beef and mutton, should be kept away from starchy foods, in a person who has a tendency to starch indigestion.

"After the first week on a limited amount of starchy foods, this class of foods can be gradually increased, until a sufficient amount of them is being taken to maintain the strength, and to bring about a gradual increase in weight if this is desirable. In the meantime the precautions about preparation, thorough chewing, and right combining of this class of foods should be carefully observed. In those who have marked organic pathology in the intestinal tract it is surprising how rapidly the starch digestion can be built up by these measures; and how quickly we can get away from the untoward symptoms of gas, acidity, constipation, nervousness and lack of strength."

Anesthetics

HERE is another new anesthetic that we are told is soon to "supplant all others." It is called "ethylene." Willard D. Emery, D.O., writes to the Care of the Body:

"There is a record already of between 1100 and 1200 administrations without a single fatality, or in fact any untoward circumstances. The outstanding features of this new anesthetic, which will interest those who have to undergo necessary surgery may be stated briefly, as follows: Quick induction—go to sleep quickly and quietly with no sense of suffocation or strangling, quick recovery—regain consciousness within two to three minutes after removal of mask, with no nausea or vomiting. No elevation of blood pressure, which makes it a safe anesthetic to use in cases of hardening of blood vessels.

"There is no change in blood chemistry which means that there is no damage done to kidneys, liver or blood elements, no acidosis, Bright's disease or anemia.

"There is no sweating during the anesthesia, with consequent elimination of danger of lung involvement, i.e. pneumonia.

"This is all of paramount interest to those requiring a general anesthetic. It does not avail much to employ the most skilled surgeon if the anesthetic agent acts as a potent poison, or the anesthetist is not thoroughly skilled in its administration, or if he is not interested and alert to the best interests of the patient from every standpoint.

"It used to be said of surgeons that they did not care who gave their anesthetics, perhaps some physician who did not average one case a month, or some nurse who should be handy, but that state of affairs no longer prevails.

"The intelligent layman will insist on having a thoroughly skilled anesthetist, even if the surgeon is negligent in that regard.

"I have specialized in anesthesia during the past five years, and whereas I have greatly enjoyed my work to date; I firmly believe that with this new agent ethylene I shall enjoy it the more because of the greater service I will be able to render with its aid."

Billboards

THERE is a simple way to get rid of billboards that obstruct and disfigure the landscape.

Aroused by the increase in advertising billboards which spoiled vistas of mountain and turquoise sea, the women of Honolulu notified the merchants of the Hawaiian Islands that they would purchase no goods so advertised on the Island of Oahu. Today there is not a single advertising billboard on the island.

Chiropractic

CHIROPRACTIC, when skilfully administered, is a valuable method of aiding nature to restore normal conditions, but it is not a cure all, any more than diet, or exercise, or any other one thing, alone.

In Health Culture Elmer Lee, M.D., writes:

"The chiropractor tells the people that the cause of their disease is that the vertebrae of the back are out of joint, that the vertebrae are dislocated, that they are maladjusted, and that these dislocated vertebrae impinge on the nerves of the cord as they pass through the openings in the bones of the back to their destination or distribution to various parts of the body. Now there it is, that is his whole philosophy. This philosophy has its faults, it is an invention, it is not a natural science of health, it is one-sided, it is not more than a palliative.

"This chiropractic philosophy of disease is simple, that it is simple is not enough, more simple than some other philosophies which undertake to explain disease to warrant anyone in accepting it as being true. Chiropractic philosophy is not more simple than some other philosophies which undertake to explain disease or to deny the existence of disease.

"Not all philosophies are true, is the chiropractic philosophy true?

"The chiropractor says to the patient that his vertebrae were perchance misplaced at birth, in childhood, that displacement of vertebrae long ago is a cause for diseases now, that you misplace the vertebrae by a sudden turn in the bed, that you displace the vertebrae by a sudden twist or turn in stooping or bending or working or sitting, or by rising from a chair or by carrying a load on the back.

"They say that you are liable to misplace your vertebrae at any time that you stoop, or turn a corner, or bend your back, to lift a weight; they say that a backbone being out of joint or out of alignment is sufficient to be the cause of about every form of disease, fevers, chills, cramps, swellings, boils, toothache, eye disease, ear disease, and all the rest of the long list of diseases.

"When you get any one of the forms of

By Will Payne

On the Swamp Road

THE farmhouse had never been painted and was now black with age. To keep out the winter cold it was banked with dirt about the base. At one corner the spring rains, pouring down from a broken eaves-trough, had washed away the dirt embankment, disclosing the rotten ends of the perpendicular sidingboards. At the other corner of the north front was a gnarled honeysuckle vine, two-thirds dead. Its spreading branches, leafless or bearing only scant and sickly verdure, clung to the warped sideboards like the gaunt arms of an old hag embracing the ruinous house. One grimy pane was broken out of the window in the west gable and the hole had been stuffed with rags.

For a long time debt and drink and sin had blasted this place, and now there was something else. Under the hot morning sun, three women and two children stood in the bare dooryard, visibly huddling together, blanched and agape. They stared now at the house, now at the two empty automobiles, standing by the roadside—one of them a long, gray, five-passenger car, the other a red two-passenger roadster. Sometimes, with an excess of horror, they looked over at a skinny old crone who hopped and peered about the two automobiles with an uncanny excitement. One of the children was a red-headed and freckled boy of 10, whose long legs protruded from frayed breeches that failed by some inches to reach his knobby knees. His mouth was open as though it had been frozen that way.

Coming out of the house, Skinner noticed this gaping boy first of all. In his rapid walk toward the red automobile he even looked around and noticed a bony horse standing with his head over the rickety barnyard fence and looking on as though it, too, were speculating upon what had happened. Then he saw the skinny crone behind his machine, watching him with snappy little eyes—as beady and nervous as those of a rat—and he apprehended at once that she burned with a gruesome excitement. Her snappy eyes watched his advance a moment; then she darted at him.

"Have y' seen the tracks?" she demanded. "I'll show 'em to y'. This way! This way!" Her weazen hand clutched at his coatsleeve and she nodded her old head at him.

Skinner thought of an unclean old bird as she bobbed along the roadside—keeping a little in advance of him in her febrile eagerness. At the lilac thicket she halted, stooping and pointing her lean arm and extended index finger in a rigid line. The tracks of an automobile showed plainly on the grass there. At a glance Skinner saw that a machine had drawn up in the cover of the lilac thicket, then backed away to turn around.

"He turned it around," said the crone, her beady eyes snapping at Skinner. "See yere!" Stooping, with her arm and forefinger extended, she followed the curving track which the machine had made in backing and turning.

"Backed plumb into that!" she said, triumphantly, and even before she pointed to them, Skinner noticed that twigs and branches of the young tree were broken. He reached up and picked a thread of black cloth from a broken branch. Plainly the top of the car had been up and the collision with the tree had torn it.

"Backed plumb around! Plumb around!" she said, and swung her skinny old arms in a half circle, as though she were swinging the car around. "Plumb around!" she repeated, repeating the gesture also. Skinner found it peculiarly gruesome.

"I see," he murmured and started abruptly across the road toward his car.

In following the long gray car out from town he had taken most of the curves on two wheels at risk of his neck. Even now, after ten minutes spent in the farmhouse, the deed had only just accomplished itself. It was so recent that it still oozed and quivered under the bright morning sun.

That came to him as he drove away, and he shuddered. Partly from a mere instinct of flight, he jammed his foot savagely against the accelerator. But there was a professional reason for speed, too; and as the little red car leaped away his shocked brain began composing the story as it would appear in the extra. It would be the first extra Allentown had ever experienced, and he wondered how much of a hit that metropolitan touch would make.

WILL PAYNE

A wiry and undersized man was Skinner, tanned a good leathery brown. There were a few gray hairs in his bristling, intractable mustache, and his gray eyes studied the back-reeling road through a pair of round, gold-bowed spectacles. A faded cloth hat was jammed down on his solid head. He wore a limp shirt, with a rusty little tie under the limp turn-down collar and an office-stained alpaca jacket over that. Manifold adventures had enriched him little, except in experience; but as usual he was quite boyishly eager over this new adventure of the Allenton Gazette.

A quick side glance showed that the speedometer was registering thirty-five miles an hour, and when he looked back to the road two galloping horsemen had popped up out of the ground. He recognized the grizzly-bearded one on the left and nodded, as he flashed past—with a grim little smile, for the man was carrying a repeating shotgun, and Skinner approved of that. Under certain circumstances buckshot was very effective.

Two minutes later he slowed up with a frown. Coming out, he had simply trailed the gray car over an unknown road. He knew the general direction, of course; but just ahead a road branched to the left. Should he turn there? By general direction it ought to be his way. There was no one in sight to ask; but, in any event, it could hardly take him far out. He swung into the left branch and jammed down the accelerator again. It was very good going until he passed a small white farmhouse; then the gravel ceased and it became a dirt road.

In a few minutes the ground sloped down and the dirt road resolved itself into a rutty wagon track. The road grew worse. Overhanging bushes on both sides lashed the churning car. The heat and the dank smell became stronger. Obviously, he was in a swamp. Now and then through the bushes, in fact, he could see where a ditch had been run on both sides of the road in some long-abandoned attempt at drainage. It was imposible to turn here. The prospect of backing up a mile through that tortuous rutty road was not inviting. He pushed on, hoping to come either to a better road or at least into a space where he could turn around. So far the road had been dry and baked hard as iron. Now it dropped into lush ground that yielded spongily and with a squashy sound under the wheels. Three rods ahead the miserable road curved out of sight beneath overhanging bushes.

With a bitter thought that the road couldn't be worse, he shifted into low gear, churned through the screen of overhanging bushes at the curve and almost immediately stopped the car, every nerve in his body tingling.

A rod ahead of him the road was blocked by an automobile with the top up. The back of the car was scratched and the top torn in half a dozen places. Gaping at this apparition, Skinner's first thought—which came with a deep pang—was that he had no weapon. His second thought, which came fast on the heels of the first, was to shift the driving lever into reverse position disease the chiropractor tells you that all you have to do if you be sick, or lame, or constipated, or epileptic, or mentally deranged, or tired, or weak, or if you have a sty on the eyelid, or if your hearing is bad, and so on and so on, that all you have to do to be cured is to be chiropractored.

"The chiropractor tells you that all you have to do to be well, to keep well is to get a chiropractor's adjustment of your back, a touch to your backbone, to take a course of fingering of the backbone, that is what the chiropractor recommends, to take his treatments every other day or three times a week, for weeks and weeks and weeks or years, in some instances, that is all, nothing else much matters.

"The chiropractors say that the diet is not important, that a change of diet for the better is negligible, that it is unimportant, nothing is left for the patient to do, the chiropractor does the curing for you, and all is going to be well, bone-setting does the curing.

"The picture of chiropractic treatment and its promises to bring restoration of health is attractive, it is a plausible appeal to the patient, it is an appeal that is hard to resist. This picture has made the chiropractic treatment popular, it has made it possible to increase its number of practitioners to a multitude within a space of twenty-seven years, from a few of them to thousands of practitioners.

"The chiropractor tells his patient that all is well if he be treated by the realignment of his spine, at least all will be well till a vertebrae gets out of place again, so on to the end of your life, you must go to the chiropractor for the treatment of misalignments of your back, you are not ever going to minister to yourself, not ever going to be either free from disease or to be free to treat yourself, you are to be a dependent on the professional chiropractor for your lifetime.

"There is no doubt but that chiropractic has benefited many people and cured many who have tried all kinds of other treatments but with no results, but they claim too much. If they would include the proper diet with their treatment how much more effective it might be."

Drugs

A POMONA correspondent writes: "I am, and have been for several months, deeply interested in your 'Care on the Body.' It tallies well with what my brother, an 'M. D.' of the old school, has told me repeatedly. Brother always said that 'medicine was only for emergency treatments, to tide a patient along until Nature could effect the cure.'"

This old M. D. was all wrong.

All disease is an effort of Nature to remove waste and poisonous matter from the system. Drugs do not aid Nature. On the contrary they interfere with this beneficent healing process. That is why the patient so often dies, when he would otherwise have recovered.

Eggs

DR. AXEL EMIL GIBSON writes: "Eggs can be enjoyed with safety only where the liver and kidneys are found to be in a perfect condition. Should these organs, however, show any signs of weakness, eggs should either be entirely abandoned or used only in form of vegetable dressing, beaten up in its own volume of pure oil, to which may be added a few drops of lemon juice. The extreme percentage of fat and albumen contained in the egg may easily exceed the need of the system, unless the individual is engaged in strenuous muscular work that keeps him out of doors.

"The albuminous part of the egg is a biologic quarry out of which the growing chick finds building material for the construction of its future dwelling place—the body, with all its bone, flesh, blood, feathers, claws, etc., while the yolk of the egg furnishes food and fuel, sufficient to cover the daily expenditure in wear, tear and energy of the unfolding entity, during a period of some twenty days—the time of incubation. This means that the egg, with its storage of nitrogen in the albumen, and carbon in the yolk, brings upon the ordinary consumer such an excess of protein and fat that his system would break down under the unmanageable and decomposing, because unneeded, mass of nourishment, were it not for the fact that albumen, by being whipped into an emulsion of atmospheric oxygen and lemon juice (citric acid) is practically indigestible to the gastric juices of the ordinary stomach. However, in cases where digestion is powerful and, therefore, capable of insuring a large percentage of assimilable nutriment, the result is sooner or later manifested in the various forms of liver and kidney disorders, with subsequent attacks of rheumatism, neuralgia, catarrh, swollen tonsils and stiff joints. The condition of a person's interior, loaded with an excess of unassimilable, hence decomposing, mass of egg, can readily be imagined, when realizing that a decomposing egg is not less rotten and forbidding when festering in the body than in the garbage can. In any case from a general standpoint of health it is safe to say that three eggs per week should be the limit of egg in our diet."

Exercise and Digestion

NO AMOUNT of care in diet can take the place of regular exercise. Without physical exercise either in work or play you cannot be well. Following is from "The Fast Way to Health":

"In these days it is important to urge, especially upon brain workers, the necessity for more vigorous exercise. A sufficient amount of exercise is needed to encourage the growth of the muscular cells, to keep the circulation of the blood up to the normal, and to insure more perfect assimilation of the food taken, this assimilation being at its best when the muscles are sufficiently exercised and call on the system for plenty of nourishment.

"The quantity of food taken at meals does not need to be so carefully limited if a proper amount of vigorous exercise is indulged in. The brain worker may be poisoned into sickness by perfectly good food which has not been properly digested and assimilated on account of its being used in excess over and above the demands of the system for material for repair and growth, while on the other hand the man working at hard muscular labor might be able to use exactly the same foods and quantities as the brain worker without fear of injury.

"The most desirable form of exercise from every standpoint is some kind of outdoor sport such as baseball, golf, or hiking, and these should be indulged in with regularity if you can find some particular one that you enjoy. However, these play exercises should also be supplemented by certain calisthenic exercises, which can be taken at home once or twice daily. Although exercise of the entire body is needed, very beneficial results will be found to come from well-directed physical-culture exercises, especially those which develop the muscles of the torso or trunk. Those exercises, taken while lying on the

THE TRUTH
About The Gland Treatment

......" then the beast sunk to the earth with a broken neck." — Quo Vadis.

Pliny relates that the early Greeks and Romans ate certain animal glands in order to revive their bodily spirits—animal and vital. The ductless glands have absolute control over the health and well-being of the body and any derangement of the glandular secretions means bad health. Rejuvenation, alone, is not the only benefit to be derived from gland treatment.

Do you lack vigor and vitality, and feel that you are slowly and surely slipping? Perhaps, your mental ability is impaired and you experience fits of melancholy, nervous irratibility, indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, or constipated bowels. Among women, the above symptoms complicated with obesity and various female complaints.

The Institute of Biological Therapy treats all diseases due to glandular deficiency. Consultations are free. A lady attendant is always at hand. Terms, which are reasonable, will be made known at the Institute. If unable to call, write for our booklet "The Truth About the Gland Treatment." Gastritis No. 10

Bloating and distention of the abdomen, drowsiness after eating, pressure and pain around the heart, hands and feet cold and numb, nervousness, are the more common symptoms of this torment—gas.

All is due to the fermenting of food in the stomach.

Physicians state that the best absorbent they have found for this foul gas is Hylands No. 10 Gastritis. These little tablets also quickly relieve the pain and distress that come after eating.

Rupture Kills 8,000 Annually

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used while you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 291 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and instructive information.—(c) P. L.

The Story of an Adventurous Reporter on the Trail of a Murderer

The Voice in the Hall

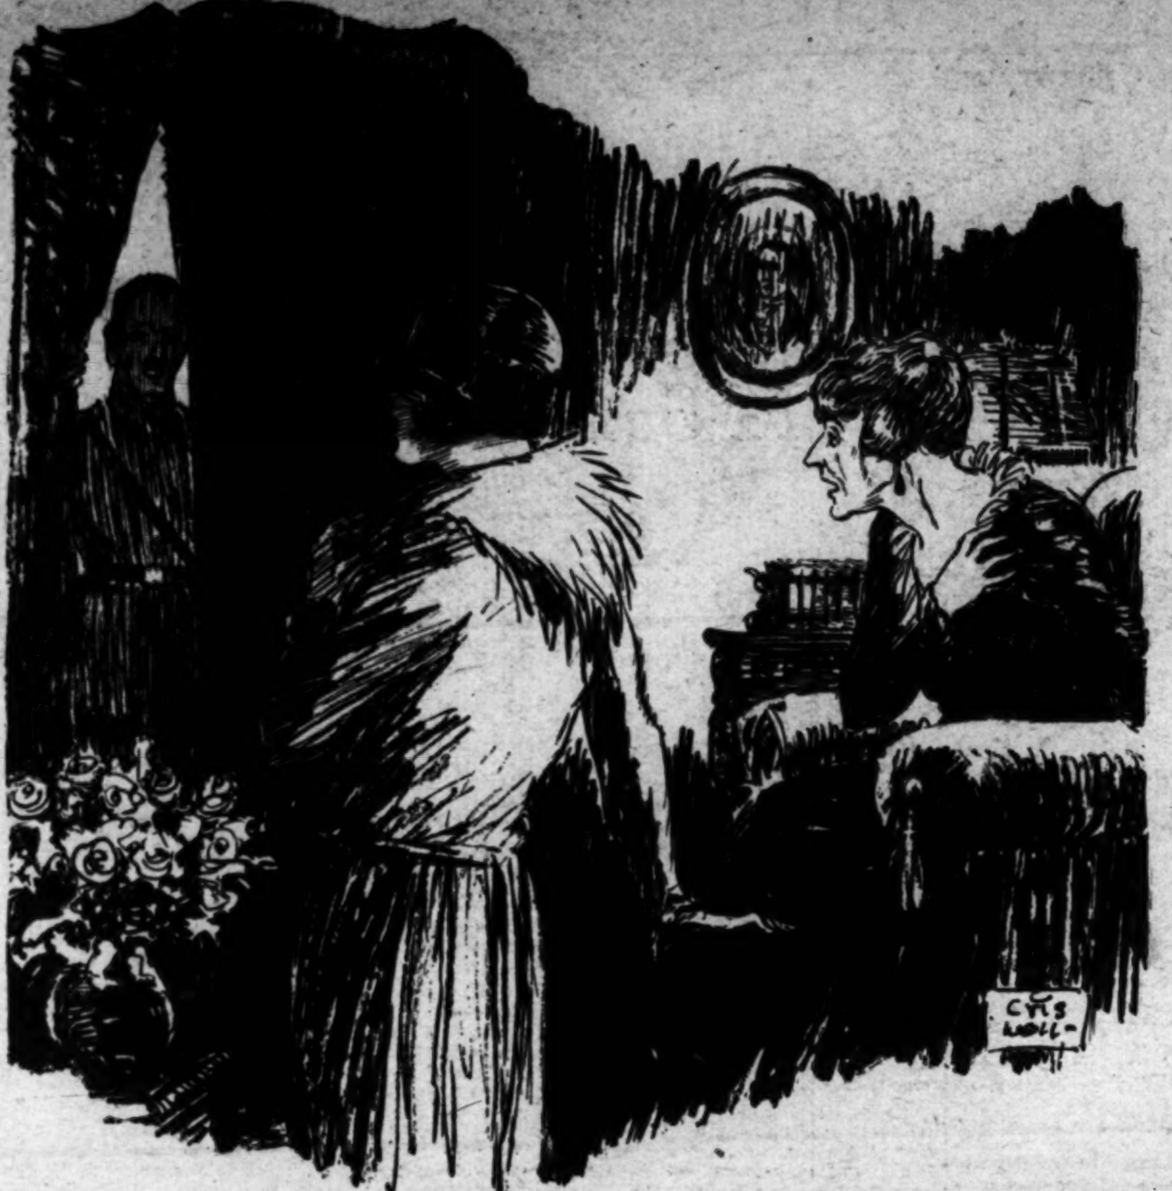
By Julian Street Author of "Rita Coventry"



Mary heard Mrs. Ballantine gulp. "You were expecting me?"

LYING back upon the pillowed window seat in the security of her locked bedroom, Mary Compton opened the book which held for her an interest so intense.

Reading was rendered difficult by her tears, for the description of Presh Ballantine, as seen by his mother, began on the second page, and there were passages in that description which, to one who understood the entire situation, as Mary felt she did, and who, moreover, had cared for Presh as she had, were filled with a grim, unconscious comedy which made them terrible. If thoughts of Presh had brought the tears, it was this grotesqueness in his mother's book which made them sting.

Where he was first definitely mentioned in the book his name was printed out in full—Francis Knox Ballantine—and thereafter he was referred to by his first name only. That was another tragicomic point—his full name, differing by but a single letter from his mother's. It told so clearly what she had intended him to be, what she had tried to make him. Not a Ballantine, but a Knox—Francis Knox.

Mary remembered what her aunt, Miss Banks, had long ago said to her of the Ballantines and Knoxes.

"Mr. Ballantine was an able lawyer and a lovable man," Miss Banks had said of Presh's father. "I was always sorry for him. Frances ran him before he died just as she runs the boy. I suppose it's my knowledge of the Knoxes that makes me feel that way about him. It's a family strain. The Knoxes have to run everything. Being so big-boned and powerful, they ride everybody down."

JULIAN STREET

That, to Mary, had been the point of paramount importance. That was why, loving Presh, she had brought herself finally to refuse him. The Knoxes did ride everybody down. Mr. Ballantine had been ridden down, Presh had been ridden down, and his wife would certainly be ridden down. It was inevitable. And the torturing thing about it was that the sweetness of nature which so endeared him to Mary was precisely what made it inevitable. To have married him would have been to become infinitely less a wife than a daughter-in-law.

The one alternative to yielding would have been to fight, but that presupposed in Precious an understanding of the actual situation. To have become his wife while harboring a secret thought of breaking later with his mother was something not to be considered. Mary would have had to be certain he foresaw the likelihood of such a break; that he would approve it if it should come; and in point of fact she was almost certain of the opposite of this.

Vividly she remembered the momentous afternoon on which she had admitted to herself the complete hopelessness of the circumstances. In making a final plea to her to marry him, Presh had spoken as though actually thinking to entice her with the vision of a near relationship to his mother. It had come to her like a sharp, painful ray of light, revealing matters as they were. Until Presh should be disillusioned on this subject she could never marry him.

To him, of course, rejection meant that she did not care enough for him to be his wife; and though from the depths of her torn heart she had longed to tell him it was not true, she could never speak a word to him against his mother.

"Of course, I more or less expected it," he had said, looking at her with an expression like that of a devoted dog gazing for the last time at the master who has shot him.

"There's no one else I care for half so much," she had answered.

As he was leaving her apartment he said, casually:

"I've be[illegible] a little trip. I may not see [illegible]e."

"Wh[illegible]?"

"[illegible] I have some business there."

She walked with him to the door. "Good luck!" she said, giving him her hand.

Then she did what she had not intended. She reached up and kissed him on the cheek. It was the only thing she had to be glad of now although he had counted her kiss as one only of compassion; and now he would never know the truth about that, either.

The reason why he could never know was set forth in the second chapter of Mrs. Ballantine's book:

One night early in January, 1917, Francis came home looking weary and depressed. He mentioned a disappointment he had met with, telling me what it was and saying that he was going on a trip to Canada. A few days later he wrote me from Montreal that he had enlisted in a Canadian regiment for service overseas.

When I learned the truth I could not but conclude that the disappointment was a determining factor in bringing him to his decision, and, as the reader of these pages will presently see, my conclusion was later confirmed in an extraordinary manner. And as this disappointment was, in my judgment, entirely unnecessary and undeserved, having been brought about by the raising of false hopes in him and the subsequent deliberate dashing of those hopes, I cannot but resent the fact that it was visited upon him, nor avoid feeling that the person responsible for that disappointment was directly to blame for subsequent events.

With something between a gasp and a sob Mary flung the book down upon the window-seat and started to her feet. Crossing swiftly to her dresser, she drew from the back of a top drawer a small packet of letters tied with a narrow ribbon, and, slipping out the first one, opened it and read.

The letter was just as she remembered it. It was written from Montreal on the day of his enlistment. He told her about that. Then came the passage which had meant so much to her:

> It occurs to me that if anything should go wrong with me later, you might manage somehow to figure out a connection between our talk of a few days ago and my decision to get into the war. But don't let any such idea enter your head, my dear. There's nothing melodramatic about my having enlisted—none of the spirit of, "Now she'll be sorry she didn't marry me!" I want you to be clear on that. If the Boche should get me, and I have time for any "final words," they'll be, "God bless her!—she's always been the sweetest thing in the world."
> Get this straight, Mary. If you had accepted me I should have done exactly what I have done, and I know you wouldn't have wished to stop me. If you had said "Yes" instead of "No," and I hadn't dropped dead on the spot from joy, then I should have told you right away that I intended to come up here and enlist.

Mary pressed the letter to her breast. Thank God for the thoughtfulness in Presh which had made him foresee that she might some day need the comfort of these definite assurances! His mother must see this letter. She must be made to understand that it was not because of the refusal that Presh had gone to France.

Her tears having been dried by the fires of her indignation, Mary was now able to read more rapidly. It was recounted that, a month before the United States joined in the war, Mrs. Ballantine's son was with back, develop more particularly the abdominal muscles, and when these muscles are well developed they will assist in holding the vital organs of the abdomen in place. This development will prevent prolapsus, and will gradually raise any prolapsed organs to the normal position.

"Exercises taken while lying face downward develop the different muscles attached to the spine, and such development will hold the vertebrae of the spine in their proper place. In the exercise of this kind the spinal muscles may be so strongly developed in a few months' time that neither the osteopath nor the chiropractor will be able to find a subluxated (partially dislocated) vertebrae. These subluxated vertebrae, which pinch upon the nerves issuing from the spine, are the direct or indirect cause of different diseases brought about by the shutting off of the nerve supply to the various parts of the body served by these particular nerves.

"While these exercises are being practiced for the development of the back muscles, it is advisable at the same time to keep up osteopathic or chiropractic treatments until the muscles attached to the spine have developed sufficient strength through the exercising to hold the vertebrae in the normal position.

"Exercises taken in the standing position do not require a great deal of muscular energy for their performance, nor do they develop muscles to any appreciable extent, but should be considered valuable nevertheless because of inducing a better flow of blood to the extremities and also as a form of treatment. They should be performed regularly for their stretching, twisting and vitalizing effect, which effect is similar to that which would be received from taking massage, osteopathic, or chiropractic treatment."

For Peace

THE vote on Bok's peace plan should be sufficient to show how the people of this country stand, on the question of peace and war.

Eliminate professional diplomats, and international bankers, and manufacturers of war munitions, and officers seeking promotion, and how many are left who desire war?

Splitting Fees

AT THE annual meeting of the American Medical Association in Minneapolis, a few years ago, the judicial council of that body uttered a denunciation of the practice of fee splitting. The resolution urged that members splitting fees, or giving or receiving commissions, should be expelled. The assertion was made that the practice of splitting fees is prevalent in the States of California, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, and in New York City.

At a recent session of the Arkansas Medical Association, Dr. Charles E. Cargile of Bentonville said: "Some doctors place their patients into the hands of surgeons for the money there is in it for them, making the transaction one almost of merchandise in humanity."

It is sad to have to admit that some members of what should be the noblest of all professions will go so far as to jeopardize the lives of patients by recommending them to submit to operations, when the physician is not thoroughly satisfied in his own mind that such an operation is necessary. Yet the truth of this unpleasant statement cannot be avoided, as it is conclusively proved by the testimony of many physicians who deplore the prevalence of such a disgraceful condition of affairs. Physicians who do such disreputable work should not only be expelled from the societies of which they are unworthy members, but should be ostracized by all self-respecting men and women.

Several years ago the Los Angeles County Medical Association took a step in this direction, by printing a list of its members, and placing a star against the name of each member who has stated that he did not split fees. The late editor of the California State Journal of Medicine suggested that it would be a good idea to try this in the membership of the State society, designating every year in the register and directory the names of members who agree in writing not to split fees. As he said: "Anything that offers even some small relief from his pickpocket form of dishonesty would seem to be worth trying."

At the Minneapolis convention the judicial council also strongly condemned the practice of hospitals paying physicians a commission for patients sent them. This is another evil. Most of the stockholders in hospitals are physicians, and of course it is to the interest of the physician to railroad his patients to an institution in which he is financially interested.

Five States have already forbidden fee-splitting and others are likely to follow.

Low Protein Diet

OF ALL the investigations that have been made to prove the value of a low protein diet over one that is high in protein, the work of Hindhede is of great value to us now because of his experiments with the potato.

Hindhede (pronounced Hind-hay-dee) is a Danish physician and he was raised on a frugal diet on a farm in Denmark. In his medical training he was taught that man needed 120 grams, or about one-fourth of a pound, of protein a day as a minimum amount and that it should be from both the animal and vegetable world. His knowledge of the Danish farmer, working fourteen to sixteen hours a day with a very little meat, did not coincide with the views of his instructors.

He tested the theory out on himself, while a student, by eating a double portion of meat. He became weaker instead of stronger and the first doubt of the wisdom of the world's views on nutrition took foothold. For twenty years he practiced medicine among the farmers and to help prove his theories, he induced the farmers to feed one-half the usual amount of protein to their stock animals. The satisfactory results caused the Danish government to equip, in 1911, in Copenhagen, a laboratory for researches in human nutrition with Dr Hindhede as director.

The story of his own diet and that of his family are given in an interesting way in his book "Protein and Nutrition."

He began by testing a vegetarian diet, living for one month on potatoes, bread, butter, sugar and fruit (mostly strawberries.)

During the experiment his physical exercise was gardening and bicycling. His health was excellent and thereafter his family partook of very little meat and many potatoes. His children are well developed physically.

The father tells us he often hears the remark "The best recommendation of your ideas is that your children are so physically robust and mentally active." Their only illnesses have been whooping cough and measles. Christian was the youngest of forty civil engineers to pass the examination.

The friends of the girls say: "No one can keep up with the Hindhede girls on their bicycles."

In discussing the low protein diet for children, the time of life when the most protein is needed, Hinhede says: "I do not deny that there are many children of poor families who have developed badly, both physically and mentally; but I doubt that the cause of it is to be ascribed to an insufficiency of albuminous food; rather do I hold that the evil is the effect of too much coffee—not to mention cigarettes.

"I have a suspicion that a vast number of ailments—disorders of the stomach, nerves, liver and kidneys, not to mention gout—are to be attributed simply to overfeeding. I believe that in this respect we physicians have done infinite harm to our patients. When all those dyspeptic and nerve-weary people come to us complaining of drowsiness, debility, general disgust with life, how often have we not exhorted them to eat plentifully! . . . while it is certain that with the aid of an apparent 'hunger diet' we should have been able in many instances to have restored them to strength."

A Sanguine Prediction

ABOUT twenty years ago a dispatch from Chicago told that Dr. Nicholas Senn, the famous Chicago surgeon, had aroused much comment there by the prediction that consumption would be entirely eliminated in twenty-five years. Dr. Senn had been led to this belief by the thoroughness with which all the large cities of the country had grappled with the disease in the previous two or three years.

It is a bold man who would make any such prediction. Disease will exist as long as there is wrong living. If a case of disease is suppressed—by drugs or serums—it will break out in some other and perhaps even more dangerous form. What should we think of a man who would try to put out a fire in a house by closing the windows?

The medical fraternity is on the right road in treating consumption, by making consumptives stay in the open air. It is on the wrong road in prescribing drugs, which can only upset the already feeble digestion, and in forcing the patient to eat more than he can digest and assimilate.

Consumptives there will be so long as people with weak lungs develop severe indigestion, and people will continue to develop serious indigestion as long as they persist in outraging their digestive organs, and defying the simplest laws of hygiene. It is just as sure as two and two make four.

Such being the case, is it not a shame that physicians so seldom give patients sensible advice about what to eat? And why don't they? Because—as they will admit if they are honest—they don't know themselves. They have never been taught. One prominent member of the profession, a thoughtful, studious and liberal-minded man, for whom I have the highest respect, recently asked me to make out a diet list, that would aid him to put off superfluous flesh.

The Chinese System

MUNICIPAL authorities of Tuffe, in the Department of the Sarthe, France, propose to apply in their town the Chinese practice of paying the doctor only for good health. They plan to appoint a town physician and pay him a fixed salary out of a levy on all the inhabitants. In return the doctor will have to exert himself to keep the people in good health and educate them in hygiene and disease prevention. Premiums will stimulate him in his efforts, and he will be free to refuse to attend those whose illness or injuries are plainly due to willful neglect.

The system would be more effective and satisfactory if the physician knew how to teach people how to get well and keep well.

Now and Then We Meet A True Poet

WE FIND it easy, always, to think and believe that all's well with the world. And if nothing else were to hold us firm in our conviction, every now and then we meet a true poet.

Now, some one sitting in the synagogue on a blessed Sabbath morning will be sure to ask us and say, well, then, and who would you say is a true poet?

And so we will answer and say that a true poet is one who not only makes songs, but who lives them, as well. Homer was a true poet. And so was Oliver Goldsmith—old, blind Homer who sang his wandering way through Hellas taking a crust from whoever was generous enough to give it to him, and laying his head under whatever shelter from wind and rain that any kind soul would offer him. And gentle Oliver Goldsmith playing his flute for pennies on dusty highways. Also was Schiller a true poet in his squalid garret where he made deathless songs for the heart of a spiritually starved world to hear. And there has been many another since the world began, not to speak of David, even, whose songs meant more to him than the golden throne of Israel on which the Lord God of the Ages seated him.

And so, the world says of poets that they were and are poor. Which is a true thing to say if it be that it is of coffers and money bags you speak. But, if it be that it is not of coffers and money bags you speak, then there are none so rich as the poets. Sea and sky, sun and moon and stars, the flowered fields, the whole wide world in all its ever changing yet never fading beauty—all these are the poet's very own.

> "I have washed my hands in the winds,
> I have washed my mouth in the rain,
> I have put on my robe of roses
> And the crown of my little songs."

This is what the poet says. And what is there to be compared to it that any other man might be able to say?

Wherefore, though he go ragged and even hungry through the world, his feast a crust, his wine the limpid stream, the true poet fares happy and content. And though he may lay his dust, at last, in a lost and forgotten place; yea, though the briars may grow over him in a Potter's Field, the songs he made will never die.

A Little While to Tote the Weary Load

WE SUPPOSE that there is scarcely one person sitting in our vast synagogue this blessed Sabbath morning who has not at some time or other heard the song called "My Old Kentucky Home." It is a song well known from Dan to Beersheba.

Well, we sat listening to it, there awhile back, at a meeting of the Lions Club in the good gray town of San Bernardino. The Lions sang it well, and with a gusto to warm the heart. But, afterward, as we sped homeward, and as the lines of the song kept coming back to us, we realized for the first time the heartbreaking sadness of it.

It is a song expressive of the melancholy of the old negro peoples when they were bound to the chains of human slavery in the cotton fields of the South.

> "The head must bow and the back will have to bend;
> A few more days and the trouble all will end—"

That's what the song says. Not only for the slave, but for the master is this inevitable.

Then again says the song:

> "A few more days to tote the weary load,
> No matter, 'twill never be light;
> A few more days till we totter on the road—."

And this is also true of slave and master alike. And it all would be very dreary were it not for the hope that there is something after it is over with and done.

But, happily, there is this hope. More than that, there is the blessed assurance.

So, if life's load be heavy; if our backs are bent under weary shoulders; if our tired hearts ache, and if, at last, we totter on the road, let us not despair. The green fields of Eden lie just beyond this sorrowing and wearied earth. The green fields of Eden where the weary of body and of heart shall rest. Eden with its still waters and the songs of the choirs invisible.

If this little life that we live here were all—this little life that is so short at best—then it were hardly worth the struggle we must make to carry on. And, for this reason, if for no other, there must be yet another life. Which, being true, however hard life on earth may prove to be for anyone, let whoever totters under a weary load remember that, as the song says, it is never more than what amounts to really "a few more days when the trouble all will end."

The Restless Yankee Salesman Goes to Spain

EVERY now and then something is brought to our notice that gives us the cold shivers, as the saying is.

Comes now into the synagogue a man with a picture cut from a newspaper. And he hands the picture to us and he says, Conductor, he says, maybe it will interest you to see by this picture that the Yankee salesman has invaded Spain and awakened that country up. Spain is due to get a move on itself, as the saying is, said the man who came into the synagogue.

And, sure enough, the picture showed a Yankee salesman turning over five trains loaded with electrical things from Pittsburg all billed for Spain, where the stuff has been ordered.

Well, sir, it gave us a sinking feeling. Because we had dreamed of going back again, some time, to Spain, And that we would go to bed there by the light of a candle as we had done before. And that we would see [illegible] Tagus flowing under the walls of old Tol[illegible] upon it except the light of a mellow summ[illegible] And that we would journey upon winding roads in donkey carts.

And now the fear is upon us that these sinister and diabolical contraptions of a mad age are to be fastened upon our serene, sane Spain. Trolley cars are to fill it with nerve-wracking, unholy noises. Electric light wires are to be strung across it, and hideous poles planted upon it.

Which it also means that at last there will be telephones. And then, alas, let Spain bid a long farewell to happiness and peace of mind. For, there can be no peace where there are telephones.

And, while we are on this subject, we would like to ask if there is one man or woman sitting in the synagogue who is willing to say that any nation can be happy with syncopated orchestras erupting their deadly tunes in restaurants and dance halls?

Well, first thing anybody knows there will be syncopated orchestras in Spain.

The Memory of the Old Time Endures

IT IS A consoling and inspiring thought to know that the peoples who live and have their being in California today regard California as the most interesting, the most beautiful and the most important thing in the world.

To paraphrase Abraham Lincoln, you can interest some of the people in other things all of the time, and all of the people can be interested in other things some of the time, but you can interest all the people in California all the time.

We were thinking of all this when our neighbor in the green Verdugo Hills—the man who reads the papers—was telling us of a piece about the battle of San Pasqual that he had read.

It is now more than three-quarters of a century since that battle was fought. And one day when old Chupa-Rose of Pala was sitting with us and our backs were against the sunny adobe wall of the Mission he told us of the fight. He had seen it with his own eyes.

It was in this battle of San Pasqual that Gen. Andres Pico and his mounted troopers, armed only with lances, sent down to the slaughter of a bloody defeat Gen. Stephen Watts Kearney and a regiment of American regular soldiers armed with carbines and a cannon.

The blood and slaughter of that dark November day we may well forget in the blessed ministry of Time that heals old wounds and scars. But, San Pasqual may well live in memory as a historical demonstration of the matchless quality of the California horse of the old days and the superb skill of California horsemen.

For, it was because of the mettle of California horses and the wonderful skill of their riders that Pico's men defeated with lances the American army regulars.

It is a pity that so few of these horses and horsemen are left. But, if you will ask Marco Hellman he can show you some of them. And Adolfo Camarillo of Camarillo has also a specimen or two.

And, as to the horsemen, why, we still have with us Luis Rico and maybe three or four other riders like him, here and there.

The Best Sign That We Have Seen

JUDGING from what we hear people say, there are two kinds of people in the world—those who say the world is going to the dogs and those who say the world is always growing better.

We, for one, are quite sure that those who say the world is always growing better are the people who have the right of it. And, certainly if you go by signs, you cannot fail to arrive at the conclusion that the world is growing better, and that it is now a better world than it ever was before.

And the best sign of this is the fact that the world was never so generous as it is now. The people are always giving. No matter who asks, or for what, the people give. Just reach out your hand and somebody is sure to put a dollar in it.

Perhaps this is truer of the West than it is of the East. Here we must give if we are to accomplish anything. The West is in the making. We are building a new country in the West. And we must give if we are to build.

And west of the West is California. And we are making California the wonder of the world—doing it by giving.

It is great to be alive, isn't it? And while heaven is doubtless all they say it is, still it is wonderful to be in California—and to be alive.

A Fine Thing That Robert Louis Said

WE WERE looking at a picture of Robert Louis Stevenson not long ago. And while we were looking at the picture we thought of so many things he said—things that no one else ever said so well.

And we recalled that he once told those who have courage to share it with others. With others, of course, who have not courage or whose courage is on the wane.

And what a splendid thought is this—that we shall share our courage with others. It is one thing to share one's money or one's goods. And it is still better to share one's love. But, to share one's courage with those who falter and have lost heart in the fight—ah, there could be no more splendid thing than that.

Wherefore, if you, yourself, are unafraid, and if no sling or arrow of outrageous fortune can harm you, then do you seek out him who cowers in the shadows and share your courage with him that he may be brave again.

THE TERRIBLE LORD OF THE WILDERNESS

ing to the enveloping darkness Libah slightly raised himself in readiness for a few soundless, shuffling steps across a burnt patch to the nearer shelter of the grove whence he had decided on a final sprint. The lion was not the length of his own body from his objective. Already in anticipation he tasted the warm salt blood of his victim when some huge bulk stirred sharply amid the tree trunks.

The great cat froze on the instant; he became as motionless as the infrequent bowlders on the plain: he seemed to sink into the earth; he shrouded his eyes and watched in furious anticipation.

Whatever had been at rest under the trees sat up on its haunches like some great ungainly dog; the silhouette of the thing was monstrous in its sheer impossibility. With heavy agility the dark shape scrambled to its feet and stood, revealed to those peering eyes as a malevolent cow rhinoceros; beside it a smaller shadow showed itself as a tiny calf.

This was the last happening which Libah had expected—or feared. Now did it appear as if once more his pains had been for nothing. He had no idea of attacking this ironclad monster. Oh, no! Remained to be seen if he in turn was to be attacked. Should it be that the rhinoceros detected him—and even now the stupid brute was sweeping its lowered head from side to side, endeavoring to catch the wind—he would remove himself immediately. But at sight of his flight the wildebeest would also be away. So he lay still and prayed to whatever gods he knew that the well-known brainlessness of the animal would save him from advertising his presence.

To and fro in hesitating rushes the monster ran this way and that, followed by her offspring. Well she knew that some alien presence was nigh, but she could not make out on which side the stranger lay. Blind even at midday, the night was as pitch to her eyes, and she could not find the least breath of air to guide her instincts.

After some time spent thus she would have given up the matter as a delusion and have resumed her broken train of prehistoric thought, but her calf was more sagacious or more timid. So, twisting and untwisting her piglike tail, the pachyderm trotted around the trees to make all certain. Then did Libah press even closer to the rough grass; then did he feel his anger mounting at this wanton intrusion on his privacy; then did he decide to teach this hulking animal a lesson if it should happen to stumble right upon him.

And even as he made his muscles like wire hawsers in anticipation of a lightning need for lightning action the rhinoceros caught a vagrant puff of wind. What then happened defied the eyes of a man by the swiftness of crowded detail. On the instant that, at a distance of about twenty paces, she caught the scent of the intruder, her tail and head went up, and she started at a slashing trot. In ten paces she was at full speed, and the solid earth quivered at the impact of her rounded feet; at fifteen paces she caught a hint of some slight movement among the grass ahead, and lowered her twenty-eight inch horn to within half a foot of the ground, held to her path as if by invisible rails.

As long as the scent lasted there was no slightest chance of stopping her—straight as the flight of a bullet she meant to go until the sickly smell of lion was blown from her nostrils, and her impact would be as destructive as a missile from a modern rifle.

Save for the last joint of his tail, Libah awaited the shock like a carven figure. There was the possibility that the rhinoceros might run clear over him, or slightly to one side. Should this millionth chance come off the wildebeest would only see a notoriously bad-tempered and dull-witted animal careening to infinity across their rear. They would not be unduly disturbed.

Even as the hope of escape was strongest within him, the lion saw the huge body of his assailant loom up suddenly overhead. He had left decisive action to the last split fraction of a subdivided second. He struck at the beaklike upper lip which hung above him as a kitten pats at a ball of thread and leaped ten feet to one side on the blow. And the blow which seemed so light and playful ripped the tough skin where it fell so that the blood poured down.

Screaming like a giant locomotive, the rhinoceros slowed and pivoted with agility incredible. Snarling in furious self-advertisement, Libah ran in and struck and slipped, rolled and recovered, and was definitely away. Unscathed, then followed the wildebeest in their zigzag flight, but with no immediate thought of killing. Behind him a cow rhinoceros with her calf ran blindly, furiously to the distant horizon, with upper lip rent to tatters and one eye torn from the socket, grim reminders of those few seconds of merciless conflict.

This was a bad business, altogether a lamentable happening. Libah, trotting somewhat aimlessly across the plains, saw the outlines of the wildebeest vanish into a marked depression of the ground, and knew that, as far as that particular herd was concerned, he might as well abandon all idea of hunting.

But, luckily for such as he, the variety and number of the game was legion. On every side as he went the startled animals cleared to safety with the huge soaring bounds of the impalla or the scuttering dash of the Grant's gazelle. The same bunch of zebra which he had attacked earlier in the night swept across his path, but at a speed too great to admit of pursuit.

Comforted by the sight of such plenty, but still distinctly ruffled in temper, Libah for a third time took up the chase. He repeated in every little detail his humble seeming self effacement, his patient use of the slightest cover, his snakelike advance.

But now, as is always the way, the alarm had died down. On all sides others such as Libah were about their horrid butchery. It was of no great use to run for miles, since in that way danger was no sooner evaded than another was met. So the great mixed herds ran but a short way, in ever lessening spasms, and began once more to feed.

And again the fierce tropical storms, following their usual circular track, darkened the silver surface of a newly risen moon. Libah, seeing this and remembering all things, took especial pains with this latest endeavor.

It is quite possible that the group of gazelle on which Libah had fixed his fierce heart might have escaped intact; the rain had recommenced in full fury, and the lion was more than a trifle upset; it is possible, but improbable. Lions are not in the habit of making many mistakes, else would they be soon extinct.

As it happened, the gazelle were not troubled, for while creeping up a shallow gulley the lion literally stumbled upon a family of four wart hogs, which were rooting peacefully enough among the rain pools.

He knew when he was in luck and when not to try his luck too far. He saw the wart hogs a trifle of a second and a half before they saw him. With three instantaneous tearing blows and a single bite he destroyed them all. It hardly seemed that he moved from where he was, so unerring were his talons, so eye-deceiving quick his movements. And having killed, he proceeded to turn the place into a shambles.

Fed and at peace once again, Libah turned his massive head toward home, and now his full-throated roaring told all about him that he was no longer to be feared. The antelope now permitted him to come close, barely raising their graceful heads to mark his passage. He was a lion, replete and harmless. At the bottom of the swelling foothills which hid his lair Libah climbed heavily upon an ant heap and thence sent rolling over plain and thicket his decree of majesty—the roar proper.

Lowering head to earth, he uttered forth an ascending scale of half a dozen deep, reverberating roars, the volume of sound gathering till he fairly thundered. Then he ended abruptly with a sigh that made the air quiver.

And as he stood there the clouds tore asunder and the full light of the moon shone upon him, in all his royal dignity, a terrible lord of the wilderness.

But almost at once was his glory dimmed, for in greater splendor and terror the storm strode in front and shrouded all things from sight in thunder-shattered sheets of rain.

CLOVES and NUTMEG

opening day, the smart fixtures did not mock her.

Another day of good business. Miss Glaub ate out for the first time in months.

A week. Adele, Inc., had them coming. Miss Glaub told her helpers to call softly for "Madame" instead of: "Oh, Miss Glaub!" The mystery of the international pearl-robbery disappeared from the front pages. But people apparently still desired to trade with a comrade of the old regime. Miss Glaub felt that the weary days of reckoning mortgages and interest were safely behind her, when—the letter came.

It was badly typewritten on poor paper, but its contents made Miss Glaub shiver.

BLAKE DETECTIVE AGENCY

Miss Adele Glaub,
Adele, Inc.
Dear Madame:

In the course of our investigations in another matter we have stumbled upon all the facts in connection with your recent robbery.

Before turning these facts over to the police, we thought you might be interested in having us act in your behalf—especially because of the recent publicity in connection with the Russian nobility.

Very truly yours,
S. E. BLAKE.

It was blackmail! Every line shouted it! Grim-lipped, Miss Glaub read the letter again. A telephone number was scrawled in the lower left-hand corner. It was written with a soft lead pencil, as was the further notation: "Please call after four o'clock."

Miss Glaub glanced at the clock. It was nearly five. He was there now—waiting, perhaps. Miss Glaub sent Freda into the fitting-room and picked up the telephone. A connection established, she went straight to the point.

"This is Miss Glaub speaking."

"Yes."

"I have your letter."

"Yes."

"Well?"

The voice at the other end of the line chuckled. "Hardly anything we can discuss over the telephone, Miss Glaub."

"Can you come to my office?"

The other end hesitated. "For business of this nature," it suggested, "maybe a little more privacy would be desirable. How about your home tonight—say eight o'clock?"

After all, it was perhaps better to meet him there. The frowsy little crook! Miss Glaub assented briefly.

"Tonight," she repeated, "—at eight."

He was a mean-looking specimen of manhood, even in the soft glow of the Glaub parlor. He was nervous and overbold by turns. His collar was dirty, as were the frayed cuffs which hung below the sleeves of his cheap rain-coat. Miss Glaub guessed his age at thirty-five, and his nose at four drinks of synthetic gin a day. He wore a greasy derby which had once been brown. And he wore it into the Glaub parlor with a sneaky smile of confidence.

"Good evening, Miss Glaub."

Miss Glaub nodded. "Suppose," she said crisply, "we get down to business right away. What do you want?"

The man laughed slyly. "Maybe," he suggested, "we should begin by telling you what we know. Our client—"

"Is a thief," interrupted Miss Glaub. "Maybe he is a liar too!"

Mr. S. E. Blake shook his head. "Not a chance," he said emphatically; and then softly: "Because—we have seen the pearls too!"

"Maybe," inquired the lady carelessly, "you have them with you?"

"Maybe."

"And maybe you might be persuaded to part with them?"

Mr. Blake laughed, gayly. "Maybe we might," he assented softly, "if you were interested—sufficiently."

Miss Glaub considered this. "Well," she said finally, "how much do you want?"

"Five hundred dollars."

"Not a chance!"—coldly.

Mr. Blake shook his head sadly. "Too bad," he commented. "We haven't anything else but to turn our information over to the police. It'll certainly make rich reading. Eh, Miss Glaub? Famous pearls nothing but cheap fakes! Won't help the little costume business any."

"You—you—"

"Or the standing with the Russian nobility."

With a shrug, the proprietor of Adele, Inc., capitulated.

"Will a check do?" she demanded dully.

"Certainly. Seeing that we are only acting for you in a little matter which makes the $500 a retainer fee."

Miss Glaub went to a little desk and dropped the top. "How do you want it made out?"

"S. E. Blake!"—with a smirk.

Miss Glaub blotted the piece of paper and [illegible]. Still possessed of the [illegible], Mr. Blake stepped forward. Miss Glaub moved to meet him halfway. Just as the man was about to take the check, Miss Glaub slipped on the soft rug. With a slight scream, she fell forward into the arms of the astonished visitor. Just for a second the dark head rested close to his—just long enough to confirm that feeling which hd been hers from the moment of reading the letter. The mingled odor of cloves and nutmeg. . . .

"Put your hands up in the air."

With an astonished snarl, Mr. S. E. Blake faced a small-caliber pistol held in a steady hand. Noting the hand and the eyes behind the gun, Mr. Blake complied.

"What's the idea?" he demanded.

"Making sure," said Miss Glaub calmly.

"Sure of what?"

"That Mr. S. E. Blake and my Cutie friend of the other night were the same people."

"You're crazy!"—sullenly.

"Why don't you call me sister?" Miss Glaub gibed.

After a moment: "Well, what if I am? What are you going to do about it? Who'll believe you after that cock-an'-bull description you gave the police? Huh?"

Miss Glaub held out her hand. "It wont be necessary. Give me the pearls."

After a moment Mr. Blake produced them, from the side pocket of his raincoat.

"What now?"

"The door. Your little client-game needs you in some other city in a hurry."

"In other words—"

"In other words—get!"

Just before the door closed, Miss Glaub sent a parting shot.

"The next time you rob a cradle," she advised, "don't put a mask over your face—get a gas mask."

Later, in a big blue quilted kimono, Miss Glaub contemplated the string of gleaming pearls. Humming softly, she picked up a nut-cracker lying on the table and went quietly to work. As the clock struck ten, she swept the remnants of her handiwork into the wicker waste-basket. Her eyes grew soft and dreamy. Somehow it seemed to bring the Grand Duke nearer.

At the shop, next morning, Freda handed her a telegram. Tearing it open, Miss Glaub read:

New York City.

Great work. Congratulations. Entire country now knows Adele, Inc. We can't afford to stay out, regardless of conditions. How much do you want?

NATHAN ROSEWATER.

Miss Glaub smiled.

"Take answer," she snapped.

"'Nathan Rosewater:

"'Sorry. Too late. Subscription books for Adele, Inc., closed last night ten o'clock.'" never ask Cornelia to step aside; he'll never leave her. And however much he philanders, she'll never leave him, either. She'll go straight on the way she's always gone. He's shown us that, and she's shown us that."

A GREAT MAN'S WIFE

"Well, then," Mrs. Cromwell inquired; "why is it? You say you understand."

"It's because he knows that between his Venetian gondola romance and his press agent he's got to take the press agent. He's had sense enough to see he mightn't be a great man at all without his press agent, and he'd rather keep on being a great man! And Cornelia knows she's getting too skimpy looking to get a chance to make a great man out of anybody else; so she wouldn't let me tell her about him, because she's going to stick to him."

At this Mrs. Cromwell made gestures of negation and horror, though in the back of her mind, at that moment, she was recalling her yesterday's thought that Lydia's sense of duty was really Lydia's pique. "Lydia Dodge!" she cried, "I won't listen to you! Don't you know you're taking the lowest, un-Christianest, violent possible view of human nature?"

Mrs. Dodge looked guilty, but she decided to offer a plea in excuse. "Well, I suppose that may be true," she said. "But sometimes it does seem about the only way to understand people!"

Hardy Perennials

There is probably no class of plants that lend themselves to as many uses as perennials do. After they are once planted they remain in the ground from season to season, increasing in size and luxuriance of growth each succeeding year and giving forth a wealth of bloom over a long period of time.

In addition to giving color and life to the garden, hardy perennials afford large quantities of cut flowers for use in the home. The following selection is comprised of varieties that are adaptable for both purposes.

Thalyctrum Dicterocarpen

A splendid but little known perennial. The plant in full growth somewhat resembles a maidenhair fern the foliage being luxuriant and graceful. During the blooming period strong spikes shoot up from the center of the plant, bearing enormous quantities of minute bell-shaped flowers of a deep lilac or lavender color.

The small branches that support the flowers are so fine that at first glance the individual blossoms seem to be suspended in the air. In spite of the exquisite delicacy of their appearance, these flowers are ideal for cutting purposes, lasting over a long period of time in water. For basket work or for mixing with other flowers they are invaluable.

Dormant roots, each 35c—$3.50 per dozen.

Perennial Phlox

One of the best known of all hardy perennials, doing well under almost any conditions. The planting of phlox greatly adds to the shrubbery border and they are beautiful also when planted in beds for a mass effect.

Field-grown clumps, mixed or separate colors, each 25c, $2.50 doz.

Delphinium Belladonna

The color of this flower is a lovely soft pastel blue, a color that blends with practically all other flowers. As far as blue flowers are concerned, the delphinium belladonna is absolutely without a peer. The blooms are produced on long graceful spikes.

Extra strong field-grown clumps, each 35c—$3.50 per doz.

When ordering by mail 10c per dozen plants is required for postage.
